"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"By testing it," I suggested.

"Very good, madam, I will. Not from actual knowledge, then, but from a certain insight I have acquired in my long dealing with such matters, I have come to the conclusion that Franklin Van Burnam did not in the beginning plan to kill this woman in his father's house.

"On the contrary, he had fixed upon a hotel room as the scene of the conflict he foresaw between them, and that he might carry it on without endangering their good names, had urged her to meet him the next morning in the semi-disguise of a dressmaker over her fine dress and a heavy veil over her striking features; making the pretence, no doubt, of this being the more appropriate costume for her to appear in before the old gentleman should he so far concede to her demands as to take her to the steamer. For himself he had planned the adoption of a disfiguring duster which had been hanging for a long time in a closet on the ground-floor of the building in Duane Street. All this promised well, but when the time came and he was about to leave his office, his brother unexpectedly appeared and asked for the key to their father's house. Disconcerted no doubt by the appearance of the very person he least wished to see, and astonished by a request so out of keeping with all that had hitherto passed between them, he nevertheless was in too much haste to question him, so gave him what he wanted and Howard went away. As soon after as he could lock his desk and don his hat, Franklin followed, and merely stopping to cover up his coat with the old duster he went out and hastened towards the place of meeting. Under most circumstances all this might have happened without the brothers encountering each other again, but a temporary obstruction on the sidewalk having, as we know, detained Howard, Franklin was enabled to approach him sufficiently close to see him draw his pocket-handkerchief out of his pocket, and with it the keys which he had just given him. Th latter fell, and as there was a great pounding of iron going on in the building just over their heads, Howard did not perceive his loss, but went quickly on. Franklin coming up behind him picked up the keys, and with a thought, or perhaps as yet with no thought, of the use to which they might be applied, put them in his own pocket before proceeding on his way.

"New York is a large place, and much can take place in it without comment. Franklin Van Burnam and his sister-in-law met and went together to the Hotel D— without being either recognized or suspected till after developments drew attention to them. That she should consent to accompany him to this place, and that after she was there should submit, as she did, to taking all the business of the scheme upon herself; would be inconceivable in a woman of a self-respecting character; but Louise Van Burnham cared for little save her own aggrandisement, and rather enjoyed, so far as we can see, this very doubtful escapade, whose real meaning and murderous purpose she was so far from understanding.

"As the steamer, contrary to all expectation, had not yet been sighted off Fire Island, they took a room, and prepared to wait for it. That is, she prepared to wait. He had no intention if waiting for its arrival or of going to it when it came; he only wanted his letter. But Louise Van Burnam was not the woman to relinquish it till she had obtained the price she had put on it, and he becoming very soon aware of this fact, began to ask himself if he should not be obliged to resort to extreme measures in order to regain it. One chance only remained for avoiding these. He would seem to embrace her later and probably much-talked-of scheme of presenting herself before his father in his own house rather than at the steamer; and by urging her to make its success more certain by a different style of dress from that she wore, induce a change of clothing, during which he might come upon the letter he was more than confident she carried about her person. Had this plan worked; had he been able to seize upon this compromising bit of paper, even at the cost of a scratch or two from her vigorous fingers, we should not be sitting here at this moment trying to account for the most complicated crime on record. But Louise Van Burnam, while weak and volatile enough to enjoy the romantic features of this transformation scene, even going so far as to write out the order herself with the same effort at disguise she had used in registering their assumed names at the desk, was not entirely his dupe and having hidden the letter in her shoe—"

"What!" I cried.

"Having hidden the letter in her shoe," repeated Mr. Gryce, with his finest smile, "she had but to signify that the boots sent by Altman were a size too small for her to retain her secret and keep the one article she traded upon from his envious clutch. You seem struck dumb by this, Miss Butterworth. Have I enlightened you on a point that has hitherto troubled you?"

"Don't ask me; don't lik at me." As if he ever looked at any one! "Your perspicacity is amazing, but I will try and not show my sense of it, if it is going to make you stop.

He smiled; the Inspector smiled: neither understood me.

"Very well then, I will go on; but the non-change of shoes had to be accounted for, Miss Butterworth."

"You are right; and it has been, of course."

"Have you any better explanation to give?"

I had, or thought I had, and the words trembled on my tongue. But I restrained myself under an air of great impatience. "Time is flying!" I urged, with as near a simulation of his own manner in saying the words as I could affect. "Go on, Mr. Gryce."

And he did, though my manner evidently puzzled him.

"Being foiled in this his last attempt, this smooth and diabolical villain hesitated no longer in carrying out the echeme which had doubtless been maturing in his mind ever since he dropped the key of his father's house into his own pocket. His brother's wife must die, but not in a hotel room with him for a companion. Though scorned, detested, and a stumbling-block in the way of the way of the whole family's future happiness and prosperity, she still was a Van Burnam, and no shadow must fall upon her reputation. Further than this, for he loved life and his own reputation also, and did not mean to endanger either by this act of self-preservation, she must perish as if undiscoverable that it would be laid to natural causes. He thought he knew how this might be brought about. He had seen her put on her hat with a very thin and sharp pin, and he had heard how one thrust into a certain spot in the spine would effect death without a struggle. A wound like that would be small; almost indiscernible. True it would take skill to inflict it, and it would require dissimulation to bring her into the proper position for the contemplated thrust; but he was not lacking in either of these characteristics; and so he set himself to the task he had promised himself, and with such success that ere long the two left the hotel and proceeded to the house in Gramercy Park with all the caution necessary for preserving a secret which meant reputation to the one, and liberty, if not life, to the other. That he and not she felt the greater need of setrecy, witness their whole conduct, and when, their goal reached, she and not he put the money into the driver's hand, the last act of this curious drama of opposing motives was reached, and only the final catastrophe was wanting

"With what arts he procured her hat-pin, and by what show of simulated passion he was able to approach near enough to her to inflict that cool and calculating thrust which resulted in her immediate death, I leave to your imagination. Enough that he compassed his ends, killing her and regaining the letter for the possession of which he had been willing to take a life. Afterwards——"

"Well, afterwards?"

"The deed he had thought so complete began to assume a different aspect. The pin had broken in the wound, and, knowing the scrutiny which the body would receive at the hands of a Coroner's jury, he began to see what consequences might follow its discovery. So to hide that wound and give to her death the wished-for appearance of accident, he went back and drew down the cabinet under which she was found. Had he done this at once his hand in the tragedy might have escaped detection, but he waited, and by waiting allowed the blood-vessels to stiffen and all the phenomena to become apparent by means of which the eyes of the physicians were opened to the fact that they must search deeper for the cause of death than the bruises she had received. Thus it is that Justice opens loop-holes in the finest web a criminal can weave."

"A just remark, Mr. Gryce, but in this fine-spun web of your weaving you have not explained how the clock came to be running and to stop at five."

"Cannot you see? A man capable of such a crime would not forget to provde himself with an alibi. He expected to be in his room at five, so before pulling down the shelves at three or four, he wound the clock and set it at an hour when he could bring forward testimony to his being in another place. Is not such a theory consistent with his character and with the skill he has displayed from the beginning to the end of this woeful affair?"

Aghast at the deftness with which this able detective explained every detail of this crime by means of a theory necessarily hypothetical if the discoveries I had made in the matter were true, and for the moment subjected to the overwhelming influence of his enthusiasm, I sat in a maze, asking myself if all the seemingly irrefutable evidence upon which men had been convicted in times gone by was as false as this. To relieve myself and to gain renewed confidence in my own views and the discoveries I had made in this matter, I repeated the name of Howard, and asked how, in case this whole crime was conceived and perpetrated by his brother, he came to utter such equivocations and to assume that position of guilt which had led to his own arrest.

"Do you think," I inquired, "that he was aware of his brother's part in this affair, and that out of compassion for him he endeavoured to take the crime upon his own shoulders?"

"No, madam. Men of the world do not carry their disinterestedness so far. He not only did not know the part his brother took in this crime, but did not even suspect it, or why acknowledge that he lost the key by which the house was entered?"

"I do not understand Howard's actions, even under these circumstances. They seem totally inconsistent to me."

"Madam, they are easily explainable to one who knows the character of his mind. He prizes his honour above every consideration, and regarded it as threatened by the suggestion that his wife had entered his father's empty house at midnight with another man. To save himself the shame, he was willing not only to perjure himself, but to take upon himself the consequences of his perjury. Quixotic, certainly, but some men are constituted that way, and he, for all his amiable characteristics, is the most dogged man I ever encountered. That he ran against snags in his attempted expanations, seemed to make no difference to him. He was bound that no one should accuse him of marrying a false woman, even if he must bear the opprobrium of her death. It is hard to understand such a nature, but re-read his testimony, and see if this explanation of his conduct is not correct."

And still I mechanically repeated: "I do not understand."

Mr. Gryce may not have been a patient man under all circumstances, but he was patient with me that day.

"It was his ignorance, Miss Butterworth, his total ignorance of the whole affair that led him into the inconsistencies he manifested. Let me present his case as I already have his brother's. He knew that his wife had come to New York to appeal to his father, and he gathered from what she said that she intended to do this either in his house or on the dock. To cut short any opportunity she might have for committing the first folly, he begged the key of the house from his brother, and, supposing that he had it all right, went to his rooms, not to Coney Island as he said, and began to pack up his trunks. For he meant to flee the country if his wife disgraced him. He was tired of her caprices and meant to cut them short as far as he was himself concerned. But the striking of the midnight hour brought better counsel. He began to wonder what she had been doing in his absence. Going out, he haunted the region of Gramercy Park for the better part of the night, and at daybreak actually mounted the steps of his father's house and prepared to enter it by means of the key he had obtained from his brother. But the key was not in his pocket, so he came down again and waked away, attracting the attention of Mr. Stone as he did so. The next day he heard of the tragedy which had taken place within those very walls; and though his first fears led him to believe that the victim was his wife, a sight of her clothes naturally dispelled his apprehension, for he knew nothing of her visit to the Hotel D—— or of the change in her habiliments which had taken place there. His father's persistent fears and the quiet pressure brought to bear upon him by the police only irritated him, and not until confronted by the hat found on the scene of death, an article only too well known as his wife's, did he yield to the accumulated evidence in support of her identity. Immediately he felt the full force of his unkindness towards her, and rushing to the Morgue had her poor body taken to that father's house and afterwards given a decent burial. But he could not accept the shame which this acknowledgment naturally brought with it, and, blind to all consequences, insisted, when brought up again for examination, that he was the man with whom she came to that lonely house. The difficulties into which this plunged him were partly foreseen and partly prepared for, and he showed some skill in surmounting them. But falsehoods never fit like truths, and we all felt the strain on our credulity as he met and attempted to parry the Coroner's questions.

"And now, Miss Butterworth, let me again ask if your turn has not come at last for adding the sum of your evidence to ours against Franklin Van Burnam?"

"It had; I could not deny it, and as I realized that with it had also come the opportunity for justifying the pretensions I had made, I raised my head with suitable spirit and, after a momentary pause for the purpose of making my words the more impressive, I asked:

"And what has made you think that I was interested in fixing the guilt on Franklin Van Burnam?"

FACTORY BURNED.

Fire In Quebec Results In a Loss of About $50,000.

QUEBEC, Dec. 16.—A fire which yesterday morning destroyed a boot and shoe factory, causing a loss of about $50,000, and throwing 450 hands out of employment, besides injuring a girl and two firemen.

Just as the employes in Tourigney & Marois' boot and shoe factory, at the corner of Arago and St. Velier streets, were about to start work for the day, a fire was discovered in the stock room. An alarm was at once sent in, and on the arrival of the first section of the fire brigade two other alarms were given in quick succession.

Just after the fire started, Miss Cote, an employe, who was on the fourth floor, in endeavering to reach the street, was overcome by smoke, and would certainly have lost her life had not a young man, Adolphe Duchaine, pushed his way up the stairs and brought her down safely.

Fireman O. Fortin was also overcome with smoke and had to be taken home. Fireman A. Godbout, while working on a ladder, at the second storey, fell to the ground and broke a thigh. He was sent to the Hotel Dieu Hospital.

FINGER NAILS DROPPED OFF

Skin Beneath Lifeless. Fingers Painful. Sleepless Nights. Used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. Complaint Gone.

70 Agricola St., Halifax, N. S.—"Some time ago my finger nails began to drop off, the result it was believed of lead poisoning. The nails themselves were brittle and dry, the skin beneath being lifeless looking. My fingers were excessively painful causing sleepless nights. I was treated for about three months and the nails grew again but away from the flesh of the fingers and then fell off again.

"Having heard a great deal of Cuticura Soap and Ointment I sent for a sample of both in the hope of their healing my fingers which were very painful. At night after washing my hands well with the Cuticura Soap I rubbed the Cuticura Ointment all around the finger ends and wore gloves to prevent the Ointment from being rubbed off, then again in the morning washed my hands with the Cuticura Soap. The Cuticura Soap and Ointment had a cooling effect and after using them for a short while I was surprised to feel fingers much less sore and beginning to assume a more healthy appearance; the fungus which had grown under the old nails disappeared and then new strong nails formed. This trouble had lasted about eighteen months before using Cuticura Soap and Ointment yet after using same for three months my finger nails had grown strong and complaint had entirely gone." (Signed) Ernest Beckford, Oct. 12, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. A single set is often sufficient. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

SURVEY IS COMPLETE.

Manitoba May Go In For Hydro-Electric Development.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16. — The water power branch of the Interior Department has just completed a report on the extensive water power potentialities of Manitoba based on the work of a staff of engineers who have been engaged on the investigation for the past six months and closely surveyed the streams in all parts of the province. The object of the report is to help the Government of Manitoba to decide whether it is wise for it to follow Ontario in the working out of a big public ownership hydro-electric scheme.

Mr. Justice Robson was appointed a commission to report on the whole problem, and it was at his request that the Interior Department sent out its engineers to report on the question of available water power.

The shooting occurred within a few feet of the latest Black Hand murder three months ago. The gunman, like his predecessor, escaped.

Wife Wants Alimony.

WELLAND, Dec. 16. — Setting forth in her statement of claim that her husband, August Kleiner, forced her to do all the farm work and chores and that he greviously abused her, Mrs. Helen Kleiner of Humberstone Township, is bringing action against him for alimony. The case will be heard in high court to-day by Justice Latchford.

Leading Cattle Man Dead.

GODERICH, Dec. 16.—The funeral took place yesterday of the late John F. Andrews, who died after a short illness, in his 42nd year. He was known as one of the leading cattle buyers in Western Ontario and as a citizen was held in high esteem. He is survived by a wife and two children.

NOBLE SACRIFICE.

He was a good little boy and very thoughtful. He had heard about the great scarcity of water throughout the country. He came to his mother and sliped his hand into hers.

'Mamma," he said, "is it true that in some places the little girls and boys have scarcely enough water to drink?"

"That is what the papers say, my dear."

"Mamma," he presently said, "I'd like to give up something for those poor little boys and girls."

"His mother gave him a fond look. "Yes, dear. And what would you like to give up?"

"Mamma," he said in his earnest way, "as long as the water is very scarce I think I ought to give up being washed.

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled, a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles, and the doctor told me I was in a bad condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was pretty well run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My troubles soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

WOMAN'S LOVE OF JEWELS.

Even in the Stone Age woman was fond of jewels. But it was man, the brutal master, who wore them. The heavy necklace that descended upon his breast was the emblem of his superiority and power. Even before he had progressed so far as to cover himself with the skin of the stag he wore a necklace of shells, of teeth of animals, or glittering flint. The elegant dame or demoiselle who rolls by in her limousine is not so distant a relative of the cave man as she may try to appear. She likes jewels better than dress, since each season we see her more and more bejewelled and less and less clothed. The joy of jewels is of the same infantile quality with the coquette of to-day that it was in the early barbaric times. A thread of metal, upon which are strung some shining pebbles, a thread of silk over which are placed some small round concretions of lime, found rolling in the liquid of a diseased oyster!

Darken Grey Hair, Look Young, Pretty

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens so Naturally That Nobody Can Tell

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay grey! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

AN UNREASONABLE HUSBAND

By RUTH CAMERON

A feminine letter friend asks me to please write on the subject, "Should the mother be able to lay aside all household worries and cares when the father gets home?"

Can't you picture exactly the conditions behind that request? The husband coming home from his day's work, tired and irritable, wants his wife to drop everything and be ready to greet him with a smile and devote the rest of the evening to making things comfortable for him; she for her part has also had a hard day, and more than that she is still busy; there is the dinner to serve and clear away, the baby to feed and put to bed, sewing, mending, preparations for to-morrow, all the innumerable details of that work that is never done. He claims that she ought to manage somehow so that she should be completely at his disposal during the few hours which he is at home. She declares that it is impossible. He says that is because she doesn't know how to manage. She cries over the baby as she puts him to bed. He sulks over his newspaper or goes out with a wooden damn.

This idea that a busy wife and mother ought to be ready to drop everything and spend her evening making things pleasant for "himself" is as common as it is absurd. Suppose, in the first place, she were free to do it (which no woman who is nursemaid, cook, waitress, seamstress and general housewerker possibly can do), even so, why should she? The chances are that she has worked every bit as hard as he and at more monotonous work. Why shouldn't he exert himself to amuse her? That would be just as reasonable.

We hear a great deal about the woman who drags her poor, tired husband out to social functions. As a matter of fact she is a product of a small upper class and not half so common as the woman in the humbler home whose husband wants to keep his poor monotony-maddened wife cooped up within the four walls of her home seven evenings a week, and who furthermore expects her to look pleasant and exert herself to make him happy by way of recreation.

Did you ever hear the expression "KHJ?" It means "Keep Him Jumping," and is supposed to describe the way many women treat their husbands. Now I'm going to invent a new code, "KHH," which means "Keep Him Happy," and which I think describes the average woman's greatest care. A friend of mine who was caling with her husband ended the call very abruptly one evening. Afterwards she apologized for her rudeness, "I knew Arthur would be cross if we didn't catch that car," she said. That little incident is typical of the attitude of constant anxious watchfulness, of willingness to sacrifice anything to placate his lordship, which many women take toward their husbands.

To my mind all these matters should be compromised. Each should be willing to give up something of personal comfort for the other's happiness. The wife ought not to pour out the annoyances of the day into her husband's ear; the husband ought not to expect a hard-working housekeeper and mother to be ready to cheer him up and wait on him.

The only right basis of happiness in married life is reasonableness and justice, and the husband who expects this is not reasonable or just.

NOT QUALIFIED.

The archbishop had preached a fine sermon on "Married Life and Its Duties." Two old Irish women were heard coming out of church commenting on the address.

"It's a fine sermon his reverence would be after giving us," said one to the other.

"It is indeed," was the quick reply, "and I wish I knew as little about the matter as he does."

ENGLAND LEVIED TAX ON BEARDS.

Not so very long ago the old believers at Moscow would have had to pay for their devotion to the beard. For Peter the Great levied a tax on the beards of his subjects, varying from a rouble on a noble chin to a copeck on that of a commoner. Compulsory, and not very tender shaving awaited those who were remiss in payment. And Peter could point to an English precedent. Both Elizabeth and Edward VI. imposed a tax on beards, gaining, one imagines, more gratitude from the barbers than revenue from the unshaved.

What is the connection between the beard and religion? Has it anything to do with Aaron's beard, which, I believe, is the only beard mentioned in the Bible? In this country the beard is (if one may say so) a recent growth. And its revival was a religious festival. The late George Jacob Holyoake told his readers that he remembered "when only four men in Birmingham had the courage to wear beards. They were followers of Joanna Southcott. They did it in

WHEN I FACED DEATH

BY HUDSON MAXIM.

NO man really knows when he has come the closest to meeting his fate. A hair's breadth one way or another would have settled his combat with death; but there is a varying thickness in hairs, just the same as there is in all earthly things.

Some men think they have been near death because they missed a train that was wrecked or were stopped by either physical or intuitive means from passing over a bridge that was destroyed just as they would have been on it, or were kept from a building that was burned.

I have had close calls in the business of inventing and handling high explosives—to which I have devoted many years of my life. Some of these close calls seemed closer than the proverbial hair's breadth, while others were more or less of the negative kind, like being prevented by some outside circumstance from going where I would have met death.

The greatest source of danger in working with explosive compounds is not the conscious carelessness of the worker, who becomes accustomed to the danger of the compounds and the risk in handling them, but is due to the fact that many of the voluntary acts become automatic, and therefore unconscious. When an act becomes unconscious a man does not really know at times whether he has performed it or not. And sometimes he has not—as others, not he, find out when he is blown to pieces.

It was such an unconscious act that caused me to have my left hand blown off at the wrist when I was experimenting with fulminate of mercury compound. I was trying out this explosive—one of the most dangerous and deadly known to science—when I forgot to take a slight precaution and the compound exploded. It was a close call for me and I might just as easily have been killed.

[redacted] time when I was experimenting with this same compound one of my assistants was weighing out some of this dangerous material in the laboratory. An iron weight fell from the arm supporting the scoop of the scales, striking less than an inch from the fulminate of mercury. Had the iron struck the explosive I would not be here writing of that close call. There were ten pounds of the compound in a jar standing on the bench, and ten pounds of that explosive can perform wonders in the way of destroying men and material close to it.

The fact that one time I could not find a suitable vessel to put dry guncotton in for an experiment I was making saved my life. I was delayed from going to the guncotton storehouse while a vessel was being cleaned for me to bring the explosive back in. While I was waiting the storehouse blew up.

Taking it all in all, however, I think the closest calls I have had were in my experiments with motorite. Motorite is a compound consisting of about seventy per cent nitroglycerine and thirty per cent guncotton, which is combined with the nitroglycerine, forming a somewhat rubbery substance. Motorite cannot explode; it can only burn from the exposed [redacted] like a piece of celluloid, only with greater rapidity than that substance. When it is burned in a confined space the rapidity of combustion increases directly with the pressure. If the container explodes from the pressure the motorite which has not been consumed will be extinguished by the expansion of the gases.

Motorite does not require air to support its combustion and will burn under water. It is used as a fuel to evaporate water for steam by mixing the water and the flame together.

When I first made this material I had many narrow escapes from death. They were of both the positive and negative kind.

Of the negative kind was the carelessness of an old nitroglycerine maker, who, with an assistant, was helping me. The weather was cold and there was a roaring fire in one of the houses in a big barrel stove. My wife, who was with me, kept warm by this fire.

It was due to her that the danger was removed. She called my attention to a big pail, full of a suspicious looking substance, which she said one of the nitroglycerine makers placed there to warm. She said he returned frequently to stir the substance. Occasionally a spark would crackle out from the fire into this pail. The spark would be extinguished by a very thin film of water upon the top. My wife concluded that it might be dangerous if the substance happened to be nitroglycerine. She called my attention to it. It was nitroglycerine. The maker was scolded and the pail was removed.

Ten minutes later, having occasion to visit the boiler house, fifty feet distant, I discovered the maker with the same pail of nitroglycerine near the furnace. He had spread his body out between where the pail rested and where the fireman was stirring up the furnace. Sparks were flashing out all around him while he stirred the nitroglycerine, as cool and calm as though it were the proper place for him to do this work.

I made the first motorite in round bars and got them the proper size by stuffing them through a die. These rods of motorite were then varnished and sealed into steel tubes, so that when the rod was ignited on one end it could not fire down the side of the rod, but must be consumed from the exposed end only.

These rods, as I discovered later, contained longitudinal flaws, which were too small to be seen by the naked eye, but which permitted the flame to enter under pressure and cause an explosion. Several of them exploded at the wrong time before I found out what the trouble was.

When I made the first test on the material the first two rods went off in the way I expected. The third exploded with the noise of a 10-inch gun. There were three of us near it and we all thought it was the end for us. We found that the machine itself had not exploded, but had blown out through the safety valves; but it was a close call for us.

Repeating the test, after making [redacted] changes in the machine and the explosive that I thought would remedy the danger, I was almost done for again. This time a young Irishman and myself stood near the machine. I asked him if he was afraid to stay. He answered not if I was not—and the button was touched to ignite the motorite. There was a flash and a terrific bang. The machine was blown to fragments, which were hurled in all directions around the room, some of them going through the walls. The windows were blown out, sash and all, but, fortunately, the young Irishman and myself escaped serious injury.

The next time I made the test it was in a specially constructed shop, where provision was made for touching off the charge without standing close to the machine. My wife and I made this test alone. The button was pressed and a fearful explosion followed. One piece of the machine came out at the door and was embedded in the barrier that protected us.

[redacted] this test showed me the trouble and I was able to remedy the longitudinal flaws down the tube. I thereafter made my tubes from circular disks cut from sheets of the material and sealed them together, building up the rods in that fashion. These rods were then made smooth, varnished and sealed into steel tubes, and the problem was successfully solved.

Another case of not being on the ground when an explosion took place was when, in the midst of my experiments on a torpedo apparatus, I was called to Morristown, N. J., from my home at Lake Hopatcong, as an expert in a case being tried in court. When I returned home I learned at the station that there had been an explosion. It was my torpedo apparatus that had exploded. It was in charge of an experienced explosives man and I could not understand how the accident had happened. Had I been there it might have happened just the same. The explosives man was killed and the shop was burned.

Some time ago I was conducting experiments with detonators for my safety delayed-action fuse, since adopted by the United States Navy as the service detoning fuse for high explosive projectiles. I had some fulminate detonators made at the torpedo station of the navy and received notice that they had been received and were being held for me at Fort Lafayette. I was told to go to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, thence I would be taken in a tug to Fort Lafayette.

I procured the package according to the directions given me, but when I had it I concluded I could save time by going home by trolley car, instead of by tug, via the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

It was perfectly safe to carry the fulminate detonators, if handled in an ordinarily careful manner. Of course, it would not do to jump on or kick them around, for, in that case, there would be sudden and surprising results.

I found a seat on the trolley car and put the package alongside of me. I kept my eye constantly upon it to see that it did not fall off the seat and that no one touched it.

I had scarcely arranged things to my satisfaction when a huge, determined woman entered, brushing a few small men, who were standing in the aisle, aside. She discovered the small space occupied by my package, and since all the seats were occupied she decided that she would take that one. She measured the distance with her eye, then turned and hurled herself backward and plunged downward.

She was so quick in her movements that I had barely time to throw my left arm out to protect the package. I am unusually strong, but I had all I could do to support her enormous bulk.

When she felt my arm beneath her, protecting the package, she was all the more indignant and determined to crush the package in order to teach me a lesson. She said not a word but glared at me furiously. I succeeded in toppling her sufficiently to get my package away from her bulk by throwing the weight of my body against her shoulder. Then I removed the package with my right hand and let her sit down in the seat.

She did not know what she missed, nor did the other passengers in the car, but it is safe to say that she would have arisen more rapidly than she sat down had her bulk been allowed to descend [redacted] package of fulminate detonators.

The package was not a particularly large one, but there was enough high explosive in it to wreck the car, and while some of the people in it would have escaped they would have been lucky. There was absolutely no danger carrying it that way except for the militant lady who was ready and willing to do anything to secure what she thought were her rights.

I never permit myself to write verses to ladies when I know they will not be gratefully received, but in this instance I decided to break my rule. Taking my memobook from my pocket I wrote the following, which I folded up carefully, and when the car reached my street I handed the folded paper to the militant one just before I alighted from the car:—

Dear madam, I'm an anarchist,
That package was a bomb.
I'm on my way
Some one to slay
And—this is really true—
I didn't want to waste that bomb
On just the likes of you.

[redacted] who was surprised to get this missive and may have put the police on my trail as a dangerous character.

THERE WAS A FLASH AND A TERRIFIC BANG.

Unless complications set in, owing to the surgeons not being able to trace the bullet, the boy's condition is satisfactory at present.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Two Masquerading Cops

Each Played His Game Well

By RYLAND BELL

When I was a roundsman at Arlington I was sitting down to breakfast one morning when there came a hurry call for me to report at once at the station. I found two or three other roundsmen there, listening attentively to Inspector Harker, who was giving them instructions.

"Hello, Blaney!" he said as soon as he saw me. "I want you. Come here and listen to a statement of a case we have on hand."

I joined the row in front of the desk, and the inspector continued:

"This morning an old man named Hennessy, who keeps a little store at 12 Union street, went to his place of business at 6 o'clock as usual to open up. He kept no clerk, doing everything himself. About half an hour after he entered the store a policeman in uniform was seen to come out of it. The person who saw the cop was on his way to Hennessy's store to buy some coffee for breakfast. He found the storekeeper lying dead, shot through the head, before a little open safe in which he kept his funds.

"The man who made the discovery ran out for a policeman and met

"THERE HE IS. HELP ME TO RUN HIM IN."

O'Neill, who went back to the store with him, and at once sent in a report of the occurrence. What money had been taken from the safe is not known, since Hennessy is dead and can't tell us how much was there.

"The queries are: Who was the policeman who came out of the store after the murder? Was he one of our force? If so, was he the murderer? Had he adopted a policeman's uniform to enable him to escape detection? Is he or has he been a policeman in another town who has gone to the bad?

"We have no time to lose, because there is a hope that we can get him before he can take off his uniform and put on citizen's clothes. I think that if I were in his place I would try to get out of town as a policeman. He would run some risk in taking off his uniform before doing so, since should we find it we could work from it to its owner or rather to the man who had worn it whereas if the murderer could get beyond our bullwick it would be much easier to get it off and conceal it."

That was just like Harker. He always began a hunt for a criminal by going over the ground just as if he was the criminal himself. But Harker used to say that what was most likely to throw him off the track was some foolish move on the part of the fugitive.

"I shall work on two theories," he continued—"the one that he remains for the present in town, the other that he tries to get away in uniform. You men will be used to work on the latter theory. You have one advantage—you can hurry, while the murderer can't. Haste would give him away. I shall give each of you as many degrees of the circumference of our town limits and trust to your perceptive faculties to spot the man."

He gave us our positions, and each man made his way to where he was to go by the quickest possible means, some going by trolley, some on horseback and some in hacks hired for the purpose. I was assigned to a section where our own city limits met those of the neighboring town of Burtonville, the two towns being built up continuously. I took a trolley car and got out at the end of the route, and a few steps took me into Burtonville.

The uniforms of the police of the two towns were alike or so nearly alike that there was not enough difference to act upon. This was both an advantage and a disadvantage to us. We need not be recognized as Arlington policemen, but the man we were after could not be detected wearing our uniform. Indeed, we did not know what special uniform he wore, except that it was a policeman's.

I was but one of some twenty men who were covering the ground, and there was but one chance in twenty, if the criminal was captured at all, that I would run across him. Consequently there was mighty little chance of my doing the job. But I kept my attention fixed upon it just as keen as if I knew my man was within reach.

There were two main thoroughfares in Burtonville leading from the trolley stables toward the railroad station, about a mile beyond. I walked to the station by one route, keeping my eye skinned for policemen. The policemen belonging to the town had been notified of the possible presence of the criminal and were much better fixed to take him if he was there than one of Arlington, because they knew their own men. I said nothing about the matter to those I met, confining my attention to meeting a policeman who by some bit of nervousness would give himself away.

Not meeting any suspicious person on my way to the station, I walked back by the other thoroughfare, which was much less frequented than the first. Meeting a cop, I asked him what was the hour for change of the force on duty. He told me that he was then expecting every moment to be relieved. I continued my way back toward the trolley stables and was walking slowly along when I saw a policeman coming.

Some of us fellows of the police have a way when walking along, especially when entering upon our term of routine duty, of throwing our sticks outward, drawing them back by the thong that attaches them to the wrist and catching them. The man coming toward me was doing this. That fellow, I remarked to myself, whatever else he is, is a cop. He is throwing his stick like a policeman and catching it as if he had been doing the trick all his life.

When we met I nodded to him, looking him over carefully, as I did every cop I passed, for anything that might give away the man I was after. There was nothing in his uniform, nothing in his walk, which had the elasticity of a man just going on duty, contrasting with that of one just going off duty. But there is one telltale feature that cannot well be covered, though I have known many persons to do so with marked success. I refer to the eye. It is usually a sure indicator. It is the feature on which one fighting for his life keeps his own eye fixed without a moment's removal. The man I met looked me in the eye. I looked him in the eye and saw in it an uneasiness that was in strong contrast with his careless walk and otherwise confident appearance.

While there was not enough in this to warrant my assuming that he had an uneasy conscience, it was sufficient to induce investigation. I stopped for a bit of chat.

"Just going on?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied. "Are you?"

Here was a probable giveaway. I knew by sight every person connected with the police department of Arlington, and this man should have known those of Burtonville.

"Let me see," I said. "I don't exactly place you. Haven't you recently come on the force?"

He saw danger in the question, and I saw dread in that telltale eye of his.

"Not so very recently. I've been mostly on night duty."

"That's the duty I've been on," I said, in order to push him further. "It's singular that I haven't ever seen you at the station."

"It is queer we haven't met," he half stammered. "But I must go on. I'm a bit behind time and have some distance to walk."

"I'll go with you," I said. "I'm not satisfied at seeing a man on the force that I never saw before. I'm going to investigate you."

No will power could keep the blood in the man's face when he saw that he was in imminent danger of being exposed as masquerading in the Burtonville police force, to which he did not belong, for this would almost surely connect him with something worse. But he pulled himself together, saying that I was welcome to investigate him as much as I liked.

He walked beside me sullenly. I did not jump at a conclusion that he was my quarry, but I believed there was a fair chance of it. At the same time I didn't care to place myself in a ridiculous position by making a mistake.

"How do I know," he said presently, "that you are a member of the force? I've never seen you before."

"You'll find that out," I replied, "when we meet a policeman."

Suddenly the man stepped to the curb and began to rap on it with his stick. A cop came hurrying toward us, and my companion said to him:

"I'm an Arlington policeman, after a man who is wanted for masquerading as a member of your force. There he is. Help me to run him in."

It was a desperate game to play, but he had no other. It confirmed my belief that I had got the man I was after, and I did not worry as to the result. The Burtonville man looked us both over, then said to me:

"I've been ordered to look out for you myself. Come along."

"Not without my accuser," I said.

The real criminal's eyes were darting about for some method of escape. He put his hand to his hip, but took it away. I watched him closely in order to be ready to shoot first if there was any shooting to be done.

The Burtonville cop settled the matter by rapping for assistance, and when it came we two strangers were taken to the station and held till Harker came out in the police buggy and set the Burtonville authorities right as to my identity.

The man I had encountered was taken to Arlington, where he was questioned and cross questioned till a confession was wrung from him. He was tried and suffered for his crime.

Ortolans as Food.

The ortolan, a bird smaller than our quail, an inhabitant of southern Europe in summer and of Africa in winter, is highly prized, especially among French epicures, for the delicate flavor of its flesh. The ortolan is netted alive, kept in a dark place and fed on millet, oats and other seeds until it becomes enormously fat, when it is killed for the table. This artificial fattening of the ortolan dates back to ancient days of Rome. A Parisian paper tells of a financier who invited four friends to a dinner at his country place and sent to Paris to a famous restaurateur to provide a feast for six persons. When the account was presented it footed up 1,200 francs—that is, $240. "Outrageous!" said the financier. "Monsieur," said the restaurateur, "you have had twenty ortolans at 25 francs each. That alone is 500 francs." This would be much like paying $5 each for well-fattened English sparrows.

VITALITY REGAINED KIDNEYS CURED

Health Restored By "Fruit-a-tives"

HACKERSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 26th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys and liver were not doing their work, and I became all run-down. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them.

Their effect, I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the results all that could have been expected.

My liver and kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever enjoyed, and I unhesitatingly give you this testimonial for publication if you wish"

1913 Traffic Census of Concrete Roads in Wayne County, Michigan

This census was taken on the six main thoroughfares, which are built of concrete, leading into Detroit, for seven consecutive days of 24 hours each, in August and September, 1913.

The table shows, for all kinds of vehicles, a gross total of 97,000, of which 33,835, or 35 per cent., were horse drawn, and 63,165, or 65 per cent., were power driven.

These figures indicate that the concrete road has the ability to stand up, without serious disintegration, under the terrific strain of a great amount of traffic on the Country Road, which equals, if not exceeds, the amount of traffic per foot of width, on many city streets. These figures indicate that, in proportion to population, the farmer is benefited to as great an extent as the city dweller.

Here is a paragraph taken from the Wayne County Road Commissioners' report:

"With the completion of Plymouth Road, we have abandoned every other form of construction and have adopted concrete as our standard. We feel that our experience of the past six years warrants us in arriving at this determination, based on its general satisfactoriness and its annual cost as compared with other forms of construction. In addition to the economy in hauling, the pleasure in driving and touring, and the increase in land valuation, the concrete roads of Wayne County have been the means of bringing tens of thousands of dollars to this locality."

Concrete roads will benefit any locality proportionately as they have benefited Wayne County, Michigan.

The fullest detailed information about concrete roads will be sent to anyone interested, without cost or obligation. Address

Big Postal Strike Postponed.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The executives of the postal unions at a conference in London yesterday defeated a motion to ballot the men with a view to deciding whether an early strike should be declared. It was decided to postpone drastic action until an appeal had been made to Parliament to override the decision of Herbert L. Samuel, Postmaster-General, against the desired increase in pay.

Menelik Dead Again.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—A despatch from Jibuti, South Africa, says that Emperor Menelik of Abyssinia, died on Friday last.

King Mebelik, who was born in 1844, has been reported dead on several occasions. Special despatches from Addis Abeba last February announced his death and the succession of Prince Lidj Jeassu, one of his grandsons.

Five Months for Bad Fighter.

CHATHAM, Dec. 17.—Robt. Stewart, who was tried in the County Court on a charge of biting the ear off his cousin, Hugh Stewart, was yesterday sentenced to five months in the county jail. Both of the parties concerned come from Orford Township, and the case attracted a great deal of attention.

CANADA'S SHARE.

Dominion Has a Work To Do For Democracy, Says Sir Wilfrid.

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—"The only thing I would ask is this: Be firm in the right as God gives you the power to see it. The world is a succession of triumphs and successes. When you meet reverses, stand up again.

"The problems are there, but you are young in the face, and you shall have to do your own share for self and for country."

Such was the keynote of the address made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier last night to the students assembled at the annual dinner of the Literary Society of Toronto University.

Sir Wilfrid traced the development of the democratic ideal down through the ages from the time of early Rome and Greece, the subsequent operation of the feudal system, the uprising of the French revolution, the merging of the American Republic and the American civil war, which resulted in the abolition of slavery, to existing democratic institutions.

It was Britain's glory that she had developed a crowned democracy, the first of its kind in world history, and that her progress had given world leadership and world direction. The new democracy of the present century had tackled the greatest of all problems, the gift of hope and courage where suffering and despair had existed for centuries. But the millenium had not yet been reached, since humanity is humanity and mankind is mankind.

With earnest emphasis Sir Wilfrid then turned his attention to the Canadian problems and Canadian participation in the missions of the growing spirit of democracy. "We must not think," said he, "that because no spirit of feudalism operates in our country, because militarism is not rampant, because our evils of intemperance are of a less heart-rending character than those of the old land, we have nothing to do." Canada had as important a part as any to play the development of the true democratic ideal.

Dr. Morton Pardoned.

GRIPPE PREVALENT

How to Regain Strength After a Severe Attack.

With so much grippe prevalent this winter a few words of advice regarding its cause and treatment will not be out of place.

Grippe is an infectious disease easily taken when the system is in a tired or run-down condition.

The best means of prevention are to keep the blood in good healthy condition, and if the system gets into a weak, run-down condition, take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic.

A lady from Long Branch, N. J., says: "Grippe left me in a nervous, weakened, run-down condition. After taking three bottles of Vinol I am better and stronger than I have been for years, and I cheerfully recommend Vinol to all who have suffered from the grippe and need strength." (Name furnished on request.)

We have never sold in our store such a valuable strength creator and health restorer for the convalescent, the weak and run-down as Vinol, and your money will be returned if it does not do all we claim for it.

WILL CROSS DESERT.

Fleet of French Aeroplanes Will Go Over Sahara Wastes.

Aeroplane Flotilla To Cross Sahara.

PARIS, Dec. 17.—The National Aerial League has completed plans for a flight of a flotilla of aeroplanes across the Sahara, or Great Desert. The aeroplanes will start from Oran, a fortified town of Algeria, and the final landing will be made at Timbuktu, in the military territory of French Soudan, a distance of approximately 1,400 miles.

If the experiment proves successful the establishment of a regular air mail service will be considered.

Looking To Canada.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Speaking at a reception to the New Zealand battleship crew yesterday, Winston Churchill said that the gift of the ship by the Dominion of New Zealand at a time of a serious crisis, was one of the greatest acts of far-seeing imagination which any modern state could claim credit for.

The Admiralty did its best at all times to assist the dominions in giving effect to this universal desire to aid the Imperial Navy according to their means. They recognized the sacrifices Australia had made and looked forward with confidence to the assistance which Canada would bring.

J. J. Hartley for Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

At the urgent request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914. Being born and lived my whole life in Peterborough, and a whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the city.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure.

I will do my utmost to keep down the ever-increasing rate of taxation, consistent with the needs of the growing municipality.

I may say that I am in favour of municipal ownership, and in favour of having all city work done by our own people, instead of bringing in outsiders to do it. I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended. I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being chairman of that board for two years. I was also chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honour to elect me Mayor of our city, I will do my best to serve you to the very best of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

GILLESPIE for MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro:

Ladies and Gentlemen—At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the Municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my success in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval, I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE

MONAGHAN RESIDENTS WANT C.G.E. CAR LINE EXTENDED TO CRAWFORD'S GROVE

Largely Signed Petition Presented to the Township Council—Franchise Requires That Wishes of Council Must Be Acceded To.

BEGUN WITHIN A YEAR

Residents of North Monaghan desire the Radial Railway Company to extend their C.G.E. line from its present terminal south on Monaghan Road.

A petition to this effect signed by L. Mannecola and others was presented to the North Monaghan Council at their meeting on Monday night.

It read as follows:

> We ask your honourable body to notify the Peterborough Radial Railway Company to extend their line from the present terminal at Romaine street and the C.P.R. crossing along Monaghan Road to the Otonabee river in accordance with the franchise granted to the company in November, 1911.

On motion of Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Dobbin, the clerk, Mr. Bruce Johnston, was authorized to notify the company to extend their line on Monaghan Road south in accordance with the franchise given the company. Carried.

It is learned that if the company fails to comply with this notification within one year after it is made, the franchise over the Boundary Road automatically expires.

CAN'T THE CITY GIVE EMPLOYMENT TO THE UNEMPLOYED?

There is no doubt that there is a great deal of unemployment in Peterborough this winter—of many men who are willing to work if work were to be had. This lack of employment is greater than is usual at the end of the season, and there is little elasticity in the situation.

There are as many, and more, unemployed in other centres than in Peterborough in proportion to population. This prevents the working man without employment from going from town to town to get work in one that may not be found in another.

Conditions seem to be worse here now than in other years at the same time. Without some means being found to give employment, there will be a good deal of hardship here the coming winter—unless the situation is relieved by work being provided for those willing to work. It is suggested that the city might do something.

Our civic works are carried on at somewhat of a disadvantage during the summer, when there is abundance of employment of other kinds, when labour is scarce and men are eagerly sought. With the approach of cold weather, work largely ceases and many men are thrown out of employment—at a time when enforced idleness is a serious matter.

Would it not be possible for the city council to carry on during, especially this open winter, work that is usually, owing to climatic conditions, done in the summer? The question of cost of such work might be raised. It is admitted that outside work can not be done as cheaply in the ordinary winter—this season is an exception—as in summer, that is if the same rate of wages is paid. But there are many men now out of work, who from force of circumstances, would be willing to work at a rate of wages lower than is paid in summer time.

But even if the work cost a little more, would it not be better to give employment and help self-respecting men, who might be otherwise compelled to accept, as the city would be compelled to give, charitable assistance.

Might it not be possible for the city to anticipate a considerable amount of outside work, that would, under ordinary conditions, be postponed till summer? This winter promises to be open, and at this date, all over the city outside work is being done by bricklayers and stone masons.

Might it not be possible to do some sort of sewer work or work on water mains or storm sewers that would provide employment?

It seems that it would be worth while to consider the matter of some outside work that would provide employment. The situation is acute and deserves attention. If anything is done it should be done promptly. It may not be easily and regularly done, but when the welfare of many of our honest and hard working citizens and the comfort and even food and warmth, of their families is at stake, we should be justified in straining a point to give the much needed relief that available work would give.

WANT STRIP OF LAND ON RIVER

Monaghan Ratepayers Ask Township Council to Sell at a Nominal Sum—From Locks to Grove

WILL CONSIDER IT

The business of the North Monaghan Council is growing to such an extent that it is running a close second to the City Council.

At the regular meeting on December 15 a delegation was present asking that the reserved land along the Otonabee river between certain limits be turned over at a nominal price to the respective owners of adjacent properties. Among those present were Messrs. H. B. Rye, Alex Gordon, Mrs. Jas. O'Shea and others, including Mr. A. E. Dixon, who presented a largely signed petition in support of the request.

The reserve mentioned extends along the road allowance near the government reserve at the Locks to Crawford Grove. The width of the strip varies from 56 ft. to 60 ft., and possibly a little more in width, to nothing. Mr. Rye stated to the Council that the reserve was washed away along his property and in fact some of his private land had been carried out. But further down the river the strip is sixty feet wide in some places.

The reserve is fenced in and occupied by the owners of land adjoining it. Mr. Dixon and Mr. Rye addressed the Council on behalf of the delegation and told of the inconvenience and trouble with trespassers under the present conditions. The Council was asked to sell this land to the owners of the property abutting on it for a nominal sum. Those who get to purchase the property are virtually the owners of it now. It is understood that to a certain extent they have the use of it.

Reeve Howden assured the delegation that careful consideration would be given the matter. It had never been brought up before and they were not prepared to express an opinion on it.

TO PREVENT OVERLOADING OF VESSELS

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Dec. 17.—It has been decided that during the coming session of Parliament the Marine and Fisheries committee will be convened to take evidence and enquire into the recent disaster on the Great Lakes. The overloading of vessels, it is generally admitted, was responsible in a considerable degree for the impossibility of handling them in heavy seas. It is probable that the legislation will be proposed fixing a capacity load for freighters. It is suggested further that the unstability of deck houses was responsible for the fact that in many cases they were swept away by the heavy seas allowing the water to pour down the hatches to the engine rooms. It is believed that legislation may be framed empowering harbour masters to see that vessels are in ship shape condition before leaving port.

FIRE LOSS IN BRIDGENORTH

Stable of Mr. T. Cullen Was Destroyed by Fire

BUILDING WAS INSURED

BRIDGENORTH, Dec. 17. — Fire destroyed the stables of Mr. Thomas Cullen, Sr., on Tuesday evening, entailing a loss of approximately two hundred dollars. The fire broke out shortly after ten o'clock and was subdued with the aid of a bucket brigade. Adjacent buildings, including the house owned by Mrs. Smith, were saved after a strenuous effort on the part of the fire fighters.

The stable was destroyed, including a democrat, buggy, sleigh and a set of harness. The building was insured.

TO-DAY'S POLICE COURT NEWS

In this morning's Police Court Fred Holland was fined $2 for being drunk. Holland is a minor and said that he got his liquor from a stranger with whom he drove from the G. T. R. to the C. P. R. Station. A few days in gaol did not change his story and, as a result, there will be no prosecution of the person who supplied him with the intoxicating draught.

Thos. Hayland, an inmate of the Protestant Home, pleaded guilty to being drunk. He was put on the blacklist to ensure the officers of the Home that no more trouble would be caused by him returning drunk.

MAJOR LEONARD TO BE HONOURED

OTTAWA, Dec. 17.—It is rumoured here that Major R. W. Leonard, chairman of the National Transcontinental Railway Commission, will be on the New Years honour list and will assume the name of Sir Reuben Wells Leonard. He is one of Canada's best known engineers. Recently a gift of half a million dollars for military training purposes of Queen's University, Kingston, was announced.

MR. WM. HILL WILL NOT BE A CANDIDATE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I notice in the public prints, (to-day's issue), that Mayor Bradburn has signified his intention of entering the field for election to the office of utility commissioner. As my name has been brought before the public in a similar capacity, at the earnest solicitation of many of my co-workers and owners in the various walks of life, and whose many expressions of good will and promises of valiant support I heartily appdeciate, I beg to say that while I endorse the object of such a movement, that is the bringing of the ordinary consumer in his relations to public utilities into closer consideration through his representative, I have no desire, on this occasion, to enter into competition for the honour, conceding to him the preference over all comers, because of the progressive policy pursued during his two years' regime as our Civic Magistrate, and, further, his intimate knowledge of our requirements in the Hydro-Electric proposition now so prominently before the Council in its present incomplete condition. It is a matter to be regretted that he had not the opportunity to complete the work in his present capacity as Mayor, but by all means let us avail ourselves of his services as a commissioner.

Yours respectfully,

Wm. Hill.

RECRUITS FOR THE BRITISH CANADIAN SHIPS.—When addressing the Canadian Club recently, Hon. P. T. McGrath of Newfoundland, said Newfoundland could provide the sailors for Canada's ships if they were needed. The above illustration, showing the rugged fishermen of Newfoundland signaling from the crags to some ship in distress off their coasts, shows the reason for Mr. McGrath's assertion. Few sea coasts are more full of peril than the precipitous crags of Newfoundland. Dense fogs lie off the land, and baffling currents put the navigating skill of the most experienced skippers to the severest tests. The chances are all against the sailing ship, damaged aloft at sea and caught in bad weather with the Newfoundland reefs under her lee. The hardy watchers on the cliffs are ever on the alert to warn off vessels by flares, and ready with life-saving ropes should the worst result.

$600,000 Is Company's Valuation Of The Plant Expropriated By The City

Counsel for Peterborough Light and Power Co. Presents Affadavits Stating Value of Property Expropriated is Over Half a Million Dollars Instead of $94,000 as Estimated By City's Experts.

Six hundred thousand dollars—$600,000—is the valuation set by engineering experts for the Peterborough Light and Power Company on the plan which the City proposes to expropriate under the by-law passed some time ago.

This was brought this afternoon in the adjourned hearing before Judge Huycke, of the City's application for possession of the said plant.

The most striking feature of the statement made by Mr. Colville, counsel for the Company, is the comparison between this valuation and that of $94,000 estimated by engineers engaged by the City.

This is the first intimation of the amount which the company expects for the plant which the expropriation by-law covers.

Those present at the hearing this afternoon were Mr. E. H. D. Hall, representing the City, Mayor Bradburn and Mr. S. R. Armstrong and Mr. A. B. Colville, counsel for the company, and Mr. W. H. Munro represented the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

The proceedings were decidedly brief. At the hearing a week ago, Mr. Hall presented affidavits, in which the property to be taken over by the City was valued at $94,000. Mr. Colville produced affidavits to-day made by H. A. Almert, an engineer of Chicago, and Mr. W. H. Munro, of Peterborough, in which the property was valued at $600,000.

Mr. Hall claimed a right to examine these witnesses, and Mr. Colville argued that Judge Huycke had no juriadiction under the Act to, order such an examination.

Hence a further adjournment was made sine die, Judge Huycke requesting Mr. Hall to present the authority under which he would have juriadiction of ordering the examination of the company's witnesses.

Mr. Almert's Affidavit.

Mr. Harold Almert, electrical engineer, Chicago, in his affidavit, states that he is the manager of the Valuation and Appraisal Department of H. M. Byllesby & Co., of Chicago, electrical engineers, valuators and appraisers, and that he has knowledge of the matters deposed to.

Further, that he has had charge of the appraisal and valuation of the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., which the City of Peterborough proposes to expropriate under By-law No. 1769, and says that the present actual structural and real property value of the same, exclusive of development, costs and other intangible values, is over $600,000.

Also that he has not yet come to a definite conclusion as to the value to be placed on the excluded items mentioned.

Mr. Munro's Affidavit.

In his affidavit, Mr. W. H. Munro states that he has been electrical engineer for the Peterborough Light and Power Company during the past three years; that he had read the affidavit of R. T. Jeffrey, in which he states that the value of the plant is under $94,000, in making which valuation he had taken the inventory given him by the company;

That no such inventory was given or shown to Mr. Jeffrey, nor did he see nor examine the meter books of the company.

In conclusion, Mr. Munro valued the property at over $600,000.

During the discussion Mr. Colville stated that he did not believe the city had taken into consideration all the company's property included under the expropriating by-law which had been passed. They have gone on without knowing the value of our possessions as covered by the by-law. The company owns power house, land dams, head race, etc., in the city, and evidently the city has eliminated these. They have expropriated all our property, let them go ahead and arbitrate on it.

Judge Huycke said he was not satisfied that he had authority to make the order for examination of the witnesses. It would make the city a laughing-stock if an order were made without the required authority.

Mr. Hall—They have never furnished us with any information as to what they own, and there is no machinery with which we could find it out.

Judge Huycke—To some extent he tells us the value.

Mr. Hall—Under the by-law they may or may not expropriate the dam and power house.

Mr. Colville, quoting—All other properties in the City which may be entered upon.

Mr. Hall.—It may be necessary to amend the by-law. They may have included the Street Railway Gas Plant, etc.

Mr. Colville—They are not included.

Mr. Hall.—The City may be willing to take over the Auburn Power plant.

Mr. Colville—You'll have to raise some more money. You may need another by-law before you appear before His Honour.

Nothing further was done at the meeting.

MR. GILLESPIE RE-ELECTED DIRECTOR OF ASSOCIATION

At a Meeting of the District Dairy Association — Striking Results Obtained by Use of Clear, Cool Milk in the Manufacture of Cheese.

THE ALFALFA QUESTION

Mr. G. A. Gillespie was re-elected Director of the Eastern Ontario District Dairy Association. The meeting which confirmed Mr. Gillespie's nomination was held in Norwood on Tuesday afternoon, under the auspices of the Provincial Department of Agriculture and the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario. Addresses were delivered by Mr. Henry Glendenning, Manilla, ex-President of the E.O.D.A., Mr. G. A. Gillespie, Mr. F. Singleton, Assistant Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, and Mr. B. W. Ward, District Dairy Instructor.

The gathering was a representative one and included a number of cheese and butter makers; also others interested in the dairy industry.

Mr. Gillespie, who presided, called upon Mr. Ward to present his report for the past season. The latter gave an interesting account of the work which he has accomplished throughout the cheese making period. The report, which is both informative and instructive, is given in full in another column.

An Alfalfa Specialist.

An address by Mr. Glendenning proved of special interest. It dealt chiefly with the production of alfalfa. Mr. Glendenning remarked that he thought the district surrounding Norwood was adapted to the growing of alfalfa. This particular class of fodder requires a good quality of soil, well drained, and preferably a southern exposure. Many farmers had complained of alfalfa being killed out. This was true to some extent, a fact which had resulted in an appreciable decrease in the yield.

The speaker favoured Ontario seed in preference to the common seed. The former constituted a hardy strain, which originated in the counties bordering on Lake Erie. The sale of the seed was controlled by an association which was formed recently, and the price fixed at $24 per bushel or $20 for two or more bushels.

1,400 Acres of Alfalfa.

Mr. Glendenning referred to a sample of alfalfa seed that he had received from Alberta. The grower had 4,000 pounds, and had prepared 1,400 acres for an alfalfa crop next year.

The variegated seed, explained the speaker, was distinguished only by the bloom.

"Why was the price advanced?" inquired Mr. Gillespie.

Mr. Glendenning—"They have taken a leaf from the cotton Manufacturers' Association."

Mr. Gillespie—"Have you tried to grow alfalfa for seed?"

Mr. Glendenning—"Yes; sometimes you get a good crop and sometimes you don't. One peculiarity about growing alfalfa for seed is the uncertainty of results. You take a field that you believe to be uniform and sow it with alfalfa. You may have a fine crop of hay, but the seed will be uneven and in some places will shade off to nothing. I don't believe it pays to grow alfalfa seed in this section of the country. Besides, you only get one crop of hay, and the seed does not ripen until late in the fall.

Use the Culture.

Mr. Gillespie—"How much do you sow to the acre?"

Mr. Glendenning— "Usually about fifteen pounds. Some years ago we used to sow twenty pounds to the acre. But the seed we get to-day is of a better quality. Also be sure you use the nitro culture, admonished the speaker. You can get it from your district representative, Mr. F. C. McRae.

"What's the best kind of nurse crop to sow with alfalfa?"

Mr. Glendenning—"I consider barley is the best nurse crop. It is less liable to smother out the alfalfa. If you want a really good crop of alfalfa, you would do better to forego a nurse crop.

Mr. Singletons Address.

That one hundred pounds of milk contains eighty-seven and one-half pounds of water and twelve and one-half pounds of solids, was the somewhat interesting statement made by Mr. Singleton. The water, said the speaker, is simply a means of carrying the solids from the cow. The fat is distributed throughout the milk in the form of fine particles. Mr. Singleton exhibited several samples of milk in various stages of preservation. By means of charts, he also demonstrated the results obtained from three classifications of milking, namely, carefully clean and ordinary milking.

The speaker also emphasized the importance of supplying clean, cool milk to the cheese factories, if the best results were to be obtained. He instanced one case where a factory reduced the amount of milk required to make a pound of cheese from 10 1-2 pounds to 9.72, with the result that the receipts were increased by $1.90 per ton of milk.

Three cheese made in the same sized hoop, using the same quantity of milk, weighed 28, 34 and 40 pounds respectively, and ranged in height from 4 1-2, 5 1-2 and 6 1-2 inches. The difference was attributed to the quality of milk used in the manufacture of the cheese.

The director-elect, Mr. Gillespie, in closing the meeting, testified to the good quality of cheese produced in Peterborough County. He characterized the dairying industry at a "nation builder."

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Gillespie, after which the meeting was brought to a close.

NEW LIGHTS ON TO-NIGHT

Mayor Bradburn will Press the Button at 8 O'clock Sharp

BANDS WILL BE OUT

The magnetite arc lamps will be turned on in all their brilliance to-night. The system has been tuned up thoroughly to-day, and everything is in readiness to flood the business streets with light to-night.

Arrangements have been made to inaugurate the commencement of the new system with proper ceremony. The citizens are asked to assemble at the corner of George and Charlotte Streets at 8 o'clock, when Mayor Bradburn will deliver a short address and then press the button. The City Fathers will all be present at this ceremony. The Salvation Army Band has volunteered to take part in the jubilation and the other City band may also turn out to add to the festive nature of the occasion.

KINGS DAUGHTERS' CHRISTMAS CHEER

The tenth annual distribution of Christmas cheer, under the auspices of the King's Daughters will be made on Tuesday next from the market hall, which, through the courtesy of the city authorities, has been placed at the disposal of the organization.

Contributions in cash or kind — groceries, toys, clothing—or anything which goes to make Christmas brighter for the less fortunate, may be sent to the Market Hall, and will be thankfully received and wisely distributed.

Contributions may also be sent to the president, Mrs. Hasen Ritchie, corner Rubidge and Hunter Streets, or to the secretary, Miss English, 544 Charlotte Street, or left at the Examiner office.

SHOP EARLY

It is remarkable weather. It cannot be expected that it will continue much longer. If you have not taken advantage of the fine days to do your shopping you should not hesitate another day. It is so pleasant out of doors now, not cold, blustery or disagreeable in any way, which makes shopping a leasure, but see that you do not wait too long and have regrets for so doing.

The Peterborough shops never showed such a handsome range of Christmas articles or prices, all most reasonable and quality excellent. There is no need whatever of buying a thing outside of this city.

THE ORIENTAL PROBLEM AS VIEWED IN AUSTRALIA

Editor Examiner:

In view of the disturbances now arising in the British colonies with regard to the influx of Orientals, the Australians, as a whole, regardless of politics, are determined on a policy of exclusion. To quote, in part, from one of their papers: "The lot of the future Australian. . . will depend very largely on his ability to keep this a white man's country. . . . The Australian people . . . must be able to draw the colour line; if not, it must be prepared to face the prospect of submission to a foreign power and ultimate absorption by it. The compulsory military training of every growing lad in the Commonwealth must help more than anything else to keep its boundaries intact," etc., etc., and the paper urges every Australian to make sacrifices, and even great sacrifice, for his country's good.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 17, 1913

A STATIONARY MINISTER.

Hon. James Duff, alleged Minister of Agriculture in the Whitney government, indignantly denies that he has the intention to do anyhing to promote the interests of agriculture. It was reported that he would build a much needed arena in Guelph for the Winter Fa irand Fat Stock Show. Mr. Duff indignantly denies this statement. He knows his place too well to promise anything that would in the slightest way promote agricultural interests. People expect too much from him. "Speed the plough" is not in Mr. Duff's official lexicon.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

"My young friends, go out into the world to service. Make the highest thought of civilization your inspiration. Problems there are, big problems. To-morrow, the day after to-morrow, it will be your turn to grapple with them. Serve God and your country. Be firm in the right as God gives you to see the right. You may not always succeed. Progress is often punctuated by reverses. You may meet reverse, but the following day stand up again and renew the conflict, for truth and justice shall triumph in the end."— Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Message to Young Canada, spoken to students of Toronto University.

CHRISTMAS KINDNESS.

In another place will be found the announcement of the annual distribution of Christmas cheer, under the auspices of the King's Daughters. This is commended to the attention of the kind-hearted and charitable, who are in sympathy with every effort made to brighten the Christmas season for those who but for such effort would be left destitute in this as well as other regards. This distribution is specially emphasied since it is an organised effort made to meet a definite and ascertained need, and will be systematically and therefore, economically, made. It is said that the new organization, the Big Brothers, is cooperating with the King's Daughters, one of the affiliated bodies of the local Women's Council. Much can be done to brighten the lives of the less fortunate members of our great civic family. With earnest and generous cooperation of the public with organizations making appeal for gifts of Christmas cheer there should not be a soul in Peterborough on Christmas day unblessed by the visit, in tangible form, of the spirit of Christmas. All of us can, in an individual capacity, do some brightening in our own neighbourhood, and most of us can send in contributions—a trifle from each would make an adequate aggregate. Attention is called to the notice mentioned, to be found in another column.

CIVIC ABATTOIRS.

Toronto has established its civic abattoir and now the citizens can count upon having their meat supply furnished under conditions that insure absence of meats coming from diseased animals and conditions of slaughter that tend to cleanliness and appetizing meats. A civic abattoir permits of the proper inspection that eliminates meats from diseased animals. Our paternal government provides for the inspection of meats intended for export, thus practically descriminating in favour of foreigners, who have the quality of their meat so far as freedom from disease is concerned, officially guaranteed. But the most of the meats killed for home use are not subject to any systematic inspection, and we have to take chances of eating meat from a tuberculous cow or diseased pig. With a civic abattoir such inspection would be possible and would be made obligatory. With the high prices of meats — and everything else—we should be assured that they are wholesome and above suspicion. We have taken the first important steps in civic cleanliness by the provision of a garbage collecting system—and the establishment of an incinerator. We have arranged to prevent a nuisance and indirect menace to the public health arising from what we don't put into us, but we have no provision for assuring the wholesomeness of what we do put into us, in the form of meats. The next logical step would be the establishment of a civic abattoir, though logically such a step should have been the first. Peterborough is largely committed to public ownership of public utilities, and would it not be worth while to go a little further in order to create canditions that would assure a meat supply above suspicion?

CODDLING THE COMBINES.

Sir James Whitney's friends boast or he boasts himself that he is "bold enough to be honest and honest enough to be bold." He is neither one nor the other; at least he is not bold enough to be honest always. Under his government have occurred the only two instances in the history of British institutions in which a parliamentary return made to the House by the Government has been falsified by the deliberate withholding of matter it should contain according to the wording of the order of the House for all papers, etc., connected with the matter in question. The first was the withholding of the notorious Elk Lake telegram sent by Sir James Whitney on the eve of polling to influence an election in the Government's favour. The sending of the telegram was in itself a corrupt act, but the withholding of the telegram from a return purporting to contain "all" correspondence of any kind on the subject was dishonourable and dishonest in the abstract, and especially so in the case of a Premier who boasts that he is "bold eniugh to be honest." The other instance was that in which he suppressed in a return a letter showing how the Government favoured a powerful member of the Fish Trust, at the expense of honest fishermen who fish for a living and favour combination to fleece the consumer by a conspiracy to advance prices.

There is evidence that the Whitney Government is in practical league with the combines that put their highwayman's levy on most of the articles of food on its way to our mouths. Hon. Mr. Hanna, Provincial Secretary in the Sir James Whitney cabinet, complained at a dinner at which he made a speech that the fish trust had its tentacles upon the public institutions under his charge. Yet he complains while the Attorney-General's Department encourages, nurses and coddles the food combines by neglecting to prosecute the notorious infractions of the law of which they are guilty every day. And these combines are not the only ones. There is combine between the Ontario Government and the Dominion Government to keep up the high cost of living. The Laurier Government passed a law by which combines can be disciplined. It is the duty of the Ontario Government to enforce this law. By neglecting to do so, the Ontario Government aids and abets the combines whose sole business is to increase profits by artificial advance in price of nearly all the necessaries of life. The Dominion Government aids and abets the combines by failure to remove or modify the duties by whose help the combines can exercise their will upon the pockets of the consumer, as effectively as the highwayman, whose levelled pistol emphasizes his "stand and deliver."

HOW WHITNEY GOVERNMENT HELPS TRUSTS

It Nurses Fish Trust Like a Darling Child—Helps Place Hook of High Prices in Consumers' Jaws

The Ontario Government's collapse in dealing with combines in restraint of trade occasioned no surprise among either its political friends or opponents. No one, with the exception of a deluded coterie of admirers, expected such an organization to enforce the law against powerful entrenched interests. Illegal operations, that should and at one time would bring a police raid and arrests with the seizure of books and accounts, are now carried on not only without fear, but with free publicity. With law-breaking combines thus protected by the men appointed to enforce the law against them and the Government at Ottawa straining the law to prevent relief through outside commerce. Ontario's cost of living can easily be understood.

With regard to the fish trust the Ontario Government has done more than promote by failing to enforce the law. It has allowed the report to go abroad that the fisherman who sells away from the rust will lose his license, and has certainly done nothing to change that impression. More than this, the Government has permitted a Canadian company, a part of the trust, to fish in the Lizard Island preserve while prohibiting all other fishermen. The letter in which this decision is announced to Mr. A. Calbeck, Game and Fishery Overseer of Sault Ste. Marie, by Superintendend E. Tinsley, is as follows:

Toronto, 31st August, 1911.

"Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 5th inst. in which you state that the fishermen at Batchewana were going to move up the lake to the Lizard Island preserve since it had been opened for fishing. The Department, in allowing the Dominion Fish Co. to set their nets in this preserve (until September 15) is only doing it as an experiment, and these other fishermen, of course, will not be allowed to go on these waters."

This letter was withheld from a return made by the Government to the House purporting to contain all correspondence in relation to this special favour to the trust. When Sir James Whitney withheld his notorious Elk Lake telegram from a return of "all" coresepondence and telegrams to the House it was the first time in the history of British political institutions that a return by a Government was thus falsified by the deliberate and deceptive withholding of matter it should contain. The above letter, first revealed by being read from the Opposition benches after the deceptive return had been brought down, seems another example. The year before this special permit was granted the favoured company was permitted to move a tug from one fishing ground to another, while the Canadian fishermen were made to pay $10 in fees for similar privileges. Last year the favoured ones were allowed to use pound nets. A natural result was the cutting of the price paid other fishermen from 5 cents to 4 cents, and the charging of 14 cents and 15 cents to consumers in Sault Ste. Marie. Here is a case fr those who think it impossible to give the fisherman more money for his fish and the buyer more fish for his money.—Globe.

"What makes the trains on this road always late?" asked the passenger.

"Probably the fact that the employees have to waste so much time answering needless questions," replied the weary conductor.

MANVERS COUPLE CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Fifty Members of the Williamson Family Present at a Large Dinner —Forty-four Grandchildren

IN EXCELLENT HEALTH

Fifty years ago Monday, in the Town of Manvers, Durham County, Rev. Mr. Windell, now deceased, solemnized the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Williams, last Monday evening, over fifty of their children, grand-children and great grandchildren gathered at the residence of the happy old couple to celebrate the anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Williamson are both natives of Manvers, the former having been born there 88 years ago and the latter 73 years ago. For the last seven years they have resided in residence of the happy old couple to Toronto.

At the banquet, so great was the number it was necessary to take dinner in three contingents. Their great grandson, just one year and eleven months old, presented his great grandmother with a gold wedding ring. In the cake, baked for the occasion, was a glass containing $60 in gold from the children.

The couple were blessed with nine sons and four daughters, all of whom are yet alive. The sons are: William of Brandon, Man.; Heber, of Lindsay; Milton and Emil at Grand View, Man.; Louis at Pontypool; Barney, at Manvers; Elmer, Clayton and Dalton, of Toronto. The daughters are: Mrs. I. Dewell and Mrs. Olive Mitchell, of Manvers; Mrs. Cain and Mrs. Sanderson of Toronto. Besides the thirteen children are 44 grandchildren and two great grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson are in excellent health.

ADVOCATES MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—In regard to Mr. Robinson's position on the bridge, frankly speaking, I see nothing definite in it to the benefit of the ratepayers.

Suggesting two other sites as a cheaper and more feasible outlay is to my mind more of a shuttlecock business.

Where is there a more feasible or cheaper plan than the municipal ownership of the street railway extending to the East City. The general public would contribute to expense of same and to other similar expenditure. By-laws are passed, firms locate here, all vote it a good thing which is certainly is.

The assessment is put on, the rents go up, and the workingman still loves his neighbour.

The letters of Independent Ratepayer and Taxpayer bear direct in the interest of the city and its inhibitants, and to relieve the taxation they mention strong candidates. Municipal ownership is the only remedy. No doubt the prospective candidates will freely, and I may say boldly, put their views before the electorate.

Yours, etc.,

Semper Fidelis.

STREET RAILWAY CO. EXEMPT FROM TAXES.

That is What They Claim When Presented With a Tax Bill From North Monaghan Council.

The Peterborough Radial Railway Company claim that it is exemtp from the taxes charged them by North Monaghan's Council for the property on which their "Y" is built at the south terminal of the C.G.E. line. They have been charged with $4.05 taxes, but claim that they are exempt. The Council has laid the question over for further consideration.

DO YOUR SHOPPING EARLY.

Do your shopping early, and bear it thus in mind.
You must try and come before the crush, which at Xmas time you find?
Do your shopping early and do it right away;
For you will find the crowd, get larger, nearly every day.
Do your shopping early, you will not feel quite so sad;
You got your gift, you wanted, it makes you feel quite glad.
Do your shopping early, not leave it till next day,
For you will make the rush much lighter, in shopping right away.

A TRIBUTE TO A PETERBORO' BOY

A tribute to the energy and administrative ability of a Peterborough boy is found in the following taken from the Sydney (N.S.) Daily Post.

"As far as I can see there is only one man in Sydney, at the moment, to be depended upon, should the Y.M.C.A. be again started, to put it upon its feet and keep it alive and flourishing," said a one-time member of the Sydney organization to-day to the Post, "and that man is Mr. Harry Frowde, who during the boom times was General Secretary of the Sydney branch for several years.

"During Mr. Frowde's regime the Y.M.C.A. flourished and grew and spread out, and did a wonderful lot of good. In those days the membership was counted by hundreds, and the rooms of the institution were crowded day and night.

"Following Mr. Frowde's resignation the association showed symptoms of decline, interest in the work began to wane until the end. Mr. Frowde possessed the happy knack of arresting and holding peoples' attention which no doubt largely accounted for the success of the Y.M.C.A. under his regime."

"MARY ELLEN" HAS RETURNED HOME

After a Three Months' Sojourn on the Upper End of the Jackson Park Line.

They brought the dusty "Mary Ellen" home this morning. The name is a term of endearment which the Street Railway Company have applied to the car that was isolated at the north end of Jackson Park run while the two bridges were under construction. It is three months since they dragged "Mary Ellen" from the car barns and rolled her out on the lone end of the line. For weeks her limits were the Bonner-Worth factory and Jackson's Park. Then when the bridge on McDonnel Street was completed the route was extended to Park Street. At 10 o'clock this morning the "Mary Ellen" trailed down after the regular "green" car, signifying that the line is again complete. Her window panes need cleaning and the sides would have looked better after a dusting. But "Mary Ellen" is a maiden of the old days. You might call her a maiden aunt to the fledgling cars of the new "P.-A-Y-E" type.

EDITORIAL

Looking at the advertising in some Outside City papers just now, one would think you could buy Furs at half their regular price, which is obviously an untruth. One has only to have these goods sent down on approval, and to look carefully into their merits, to find, in our own City, without any cutting in price, in many instances, that they can get better values in Furs.

We don't pose as a philanthropic institution, yet any article in Fur that is now being advertised in these "Slaughter Sales of Furs" can be had at Barrie's at equally as low prices and in some cases lower prices. The values quoted in a great many of these Furs are largely mere fiction, or else they are "Out-of-Style" Furs which any one would be glad to dispose of at a loss.

She'd Love One of These Evening and Party Gowns as a Gift for Her Many Social Engagements.

Such clever Evening and Party Gowns as one studies and admires in the French Fashion Books are these which are now arranged for Christmas Giving in our Newly Fitted Ready-to-Wear Show Rooms.

The exceptional Social Whirl of the coming few weeks demands that Milady look her best. These adorable conceptions are so stunning, so becoming, so graceful and of such a distinguished character that they are bound to win the warm praise and admiration of the many friends with whom she now associates in the exercise of her Social duties.

A word, therefore, by way of specific description about the Evening Gowns that serve so charmingly as a Christmas Gift.

A most charming Dancing Gown, yet very simple in outline, is a Shrimp Brocaded Satin with pointed train, loose shoulders with White Crepe Undersleeve, and soft folding Crepe outlining the neck, finished around waist with handsome Crystal Girdle and Rose Bouquet. The price for this one is 37.50

Another very striking Evening Gown is very artistically designed with a White Satin Draped Skirt with slashed front, shoulders being draped over Shadow Lace with Tango Chiffon, forming a Butterfly sleeve. Soft Satin Girdle with Pearl Tassel finishes this becoming Gown. The price 35.00

Dolly Varden Ninon over White Satin is used to develop a very simple but Girlish and dainty Evening Frock. The short Tunic of Ninon is trimmed with brilliants and the Bodice is of a Ninon over a fine patterned Net. A wide shirred Girdle of Blue Satin completes this charming Dress. Price 30.00

Draped Ivory Satin is the foundation of a charming Gown whose deep Tunic is of Floral Tinsel Chiffon in Mauve shade. The Chic touch consists of dainty little drapes over the shoulders, caught up with buckles of pearls and brilliants. Price 40.00

TO LIGHTEN THE LOAD OF EMPLOYEES

Trifles, Which If Attended to, Will Conduce to a Happier Christmas For the Postal Employees

SUGGESTIONS

Now that Christmas is drawing near, evidence of "goodwill to all mankind" will be seen everywhere. Friends will exchange the usual customary greetings by verbal speech if near, and by written word, if afar off. As the latter method will be very much in evidence between those resident away from their near and dear ones in other towns, cities and far-off corners of the globe, it is but reasonable to believe that much written correspondence will be passing hither and thither through the mails, besides countless presents, in parcel form.

The Mail Handlers.

Consequently, all this written correspondence, and these parcels containing presents, will have to be handled many times by various persons before each and every letter, parcel and other items of postal matter reach their respective destinations.

Entails Much Hard Work.

Accordingly, it therefore stands to reason that those who have to handle it will, notwithstanding the employment of extra help, be hard worked. Mail carters will have to work harder and longer; the postmen will have heavier loads, longer hours and longer walks.

However, the postal employees expect that they will be harder worked at this season of the year than at any other, therefore, they never grumble at it, but accept it as a matter of course.

Could Lighten Work.

Yet, disregarding the fact that the mail sorter, though tired and jaded, smiles as cheerfully as possible and the postman tries to walk as jauntily as he can during this period of extra work, it is possible to do away with a considerable amount of this extra labour.

Suggestions.

Hereto is appended a list of suggestions given out by a mail-carrier of considerable experience both in the Old Country and Canada, which might help to lighten the load for the postal employees of every department:

The millions of circulars and other advertising literature, which is sent through the mails throughout the year might be, without being unduly detrimental to business, kept out during Christmas week.

Election literature might be curtailed exceedingly without interfering with the prospects of the various candidates.

Business firms could relieve matters by sending only the most urgent business communications.

Weekly papers could be despatched a little earlier or a little later.

If this plan were adopted, and Christmas week left open entirely for purely Christmas mail of a personal nature, a considerable amount of work and worry would be obviated.

Other Obstacles.

Many other obstacles which cause unlimited hard work, worry and mistakes may be cited, i.e., the writing of the wrong number upon the envelope, the writing of such-and-such an avenue when street or road is meant and vice-versa. All these trifles are trying to the ragged tempers of postal employees amid the Christmas hustle and bustle, and could easily be avoided.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL IS FACING BUSINESS OF GROWTH

Question of Taxes for May's School the Subject of a Petition — Accounts That Were Ordered to Be Paid—Other Items of Interest

TO HOLD REVISION COURT

The regular monthly meeting of the North Monaghan Council was held in May's school house on Monday, December 15, commencing at 7 o'clock. All the members were present, Reeve Howden presiding.

Moved by Mr. May, seconded by Mr. Morrow, that the several motions passed at the meeting on October 29, granting money to be spent in various way on the roads of the township be rescinded and the grants withdrawn as it developed after the grants were made that the bank overdraught was exceeding the amount which the Reeve and treasurer were authorized by a by-law to borrow for current expenditure.

Mr. Robt. Byers complained that there was a balance of $16.83 due him for work performed on the public highway.

The treasurer, Mr. W. H. Bradburn presented the financial statement for the year. Moved by Mr. Morrow, seconded by Mr. Forster, that it be confirmed and that it be printed according to the usual law.

A communication was received from Mr. H. Johnson regarding an error in his assessment.

School Question.

A communication was received from the trustees of S.S. No. 2, May's School, requesting the Council to collect taxes from the Public School supporters of the section who occupy houses owned by Roman Catholic landlords, who are paying their taxes to the Separate School in Peterborough.

It is understood that heretofore several Catholic landlords have requested that the school taxes from their land be paid to the Separate Schools in Peterborough. As a result the trustees secured no revenue from the Protestant tenants whose children attended May's School.

Accounts to Be Paid.

Moved by Mr. Morrow, seconded by Mr. Forster, that the following accounts be paid:

Geo. Ward, re. culverts, $20.

Geo. Ward, re Cavan boundary, repairs on road, $2.

Bruce Johnston, postage, publishing the minutes, $18.10.

G. H. May, re voters' list, court, $2.

Geo. Bidgood, cleaning ditch and repairing culvert, Con. 10, $23.45.

Bruce Johnston, voters' list, court, $10.84.

R. Sanderson, re. culvert, $3.30.

Municipal World, printed forms, $1.79.

Peter Hamilton Co., repairs, $2.85.

Jas. Lillico, 72 yards of gravel, $7.20

Robt. Byers, repairing road, $7.13.

H. Johnston, refund, $2.00.

Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. May, that the communication from the school trustees be referred to the township solicitor for advice in the matter, the same to be given in writing.

The account of Taylor and Hall, culvert tile manufacturers, for $206, was left in the hands of Mr. May and Mr. Morrow to have the same certified to by the various road commissioners.

Moved by Mr. Morrow, seconded by Mr. Forster, that the following pay sheets, chargeable to the roads and bridge accounts of the township, be passed and paid.

Pay sheet—Men cutting brush on Erskine avenue and the 10th Con., $28.75.

Pay sheet—Men and teams repairing bridges and culverts, $31.05.

This last account was presented in bill form with a request to pay each man separately. Hence the necessity of a pay sheet. The Council adjourned until Dec. 20 at 2 p.m., at the Court House, when a court of Revision will be held in connection with sidewalks just completed.

ASSESSMENT APPEAL WAS DISMISSED

By His Honour Judge Huycke —"Lands Were Assessed at Less Rather Than More Than Their Actual Value"

PROPERTIES INVOLVED

His Honour Judge Huycke has dismissed the appeal of Mr. N. T. Laplante. The latter appealed against the decision of the Court of Revision, which confirmed the assessment on properties situated at the corner of George and Lock Streets, and a small piece of land east of Lock Street. A boathouse has been erected on the latter. This is the first year it has been assessed.

The judgment confirming the appeal, which was heard on December the fourth, is as follows:

Re Laplante Appeal.

"There are a number of assessment appeals from the findings of the Court of Revision for the City of Peterborough. Evidence was taken on the 4th inst., but judgment was withheld, I being informed an application was being made for reception of new evidence or argument or both. This has not been done, so I proceed to dispose of the appeals.

The essential matter in considering speals from assessment is the "actual value" of the land. See Assessment Act, Oct. 4, Ed. VII., Chap. 23, Sec. 36. On the evidence before me and the weight of it I must conclude the lands, the assessment of which is complained of, are assessed at less, rather than more, than the "actual value," which is the absolute criterion before me. It is true that to a minor extent another element comes in, ie., reference to the assessment or value at which similar land in the vicinity is assessed, but bore on this basis, I do not think the evidence justifies me in interfering with Assessment Act 865,-S. Sec. 16.

The various land assessments appealed against must therefore be confirmed. The appeals are dismissed accordingly."

E. C. S. HUYCKE,
County Judge.

Dated Peterborough, 15th Dec., 1913.

Mr. Laplante complained that he was over-assessed on the homestead property at the corner of George and Lock Streets.

Mrs. Pankhurst Is Released Again

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 17.—For the sixth time since she was sentenced on April 3rd last to serve three years' imprisonment, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst was released from Holloway jail this morning very much enfeebled by her hunger and thirst strike. She has actually served only twenty-five days altogether of her sentence. Immediately on her release this morning she was conveyed by her followers to handsome and comfortable apartments in Lincoln Inn House. It has been announced that she will go to Switzerland in a few days.

Cardinal Rampolla Passes Away

Special Cable to The Examiner.

ROME, Dec. 17.—"He was one of God's men, but God's will, will be done," said Pope Pius this morning on receiving the news of Cardinal Rampolla's death. His Holiness was not told of the event till he awoke today, as the physicians feared the effect of it on the aged prelate. It was expected that Cardinal Rampolla would be the next Pope. It is thought that Merry Del Val, formerly ambassador to Canada, is the most likely as successor.

Steamers Collide

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 17.—Speeding toward Boston with 500 passengers aboard, the steamer Tennessee was rammed amidships by an unknown steel schooner this morning in a heavy mist. The Tennessee returned to this port with all speed and tied up to the dock in a sinking condition. The other vessel was not located and presumably went down with all on board.

TRIED TO WRECK EXPRESS TRAIN

Special Wire to Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 17.—Special Wabish detectives were hurried to New Sahum this morning to investigate a diabolical attempt to wreck the company's fast train running from Buffalo to Detroit, through Canadian territory. Shortly after midnight the engineer on the St. Louis flyer with 200 passengers aboard, when approaching a bridge, noticed several ties jammed in between the rails, and the bride in such a manner that a train approaching from the east would be thrown clear down a steep bank into the creek 125 feet below. He threw on the emergency brakes and brought the express to a standstill just as it struck the ties.

NO MORE TRIPS FROM THE CITY DOWN THE RIVER

G. T. R. Swing Bridge, Usually Closed in November, Remained Opened Until Yesterday

A LATE CLOSING

Yesterday, December 16th, the Grand Trunk Railway swing bridge, spanning the Otonabee River, was closed for the winter. That means that although the river is still open, no steamer can make a trip down the River from the City Wharf until next Spring. The locks below the bridge are also closed until next Spring.

It is still possible, however, to make journeys from below the locks.

December 16th is a very late date to close the bridge. One of the veteran employees of the G.T.R. system said to the Examiner this morning, that the closing of the bridg this year has been considerably later than any season for many years. Usually the even takes place in the month of November, but the mild weather has resulted in the bridge remaining open until yesterday, making in all probability a record for the late closing of the bridge.

The closing of the bridge for the winter is always welcomed by the employees and officers of the Company, particularly the engineers, as a great deal of danger is eliminated when the swing remains closed. A great deal of trouble is avoided, too, in approaching the swing, and in waiting for it to close when a boat happens to be passing through.

Loads of freight can still be brought to the Street Car Wharf from Harwood and Gore's Landing.

ANOTHER PLEA FOR THE BRIDGE

Editor Examiner:

I have no intention of interfering with the discussion between Mr. W. S. Robinson and his opponent re the building of Dalhousie Street bridge, but I do think that Mr. Robinson's contention is utterly untenable. A gentleman who is seeking the suffrages of the electorate on the eve of a municipal election, and who admits that he could only get his bearings by looking "over the map of the City," is not a safe guide and expert in bridge building. He states in the same breath that no bridge is necessary and that one should be built like a half moon in an out-of-the-way place at an enormous expense, and again that an unsightly high level bridge on stilts should be built at a still greater expense, from the height of land on the west side of the river, to the height of land in Ashburnham and pull down the costly bridge on Hunter Street, all for the accommodation of the C.P.R. and the Quaker Oats Co. He also assumes that one bridge is sufficient in a two mile stretch of river in the heart of the City. He also assumes that the City has no right to use its own streets should these two multi-millionaire companies need them. He evidently thinks that the voters of his ward will take a narrow view of the matter, and not one in the general interests of the City, but he will find out his mistake on election day.

Taxpayer.

A ROSE BUD IN BLOOM

A souvenir of the remarkably mild weather of the present month was shown the Examiner yesterday in the shape of a rose bud of the Baby Rambler variety, picked by Mr. John Best in his garden at 428 Donegal Street yesterday. Rose buds growing outside a few days before Christmas are somewhat of a novelty.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE DISTRICT DAIRY INSTRUCTOR

Mr. R. W. Wood, District Dairy Instructor, presented the following report at the District Dairy meeting, which was held in Norwood on Tuesday afernoon:

Gentlemen,—It is with your pleasure I now make my report of work done and some observations on the season of 1913.

As you no doubt are aware, there was a change made in my section this season.

My section, this season, consisted of the factories lying east of the City of Peterborough to Norwood and Killarney cheese factories and all factories northeast of Peterborough in Peterborough County; also all factories in Hastings County, north of Millbridge, except two.

In this teritory we inspected twenty-seven (27) cheese factories, and one (1) creamery, but only twenty-four (24) cheese factories were operated, and one of these was closed at the last of August.

To these twenty-four (24) factories I made forty-six (46) full-day visits, and two hundred and eight (208) call visits.

I visited, met and conversed with two hundred and thirty-seven patrons.

There were three hundred and seventeen (317) samples of milk tested for adulteration.

One of these was found to be deteriorated, but owing to some facts in connection with the case, the party was let off with a warning.

The average butter fat of all tests made was 3.54. Average butter fat test of whey was .22. Average pounds of milk per pound cheese—. Number new silos built, 28. No new factories built, but about $1000 spent on improvements.

Owing to the change in the sections, I am not in a position to draw comparisons between this year and last, the same as in former seasons. But the nature of the work has been much the same and the success of it on the whole has been quite satisfactory.

The delivery of milk and quality of cheese made, on the whole, has been good, fully equal, if not better than former seasons.

The quantity has been short. Montreal report gives it as two hundred thousand (200,000) boxes, exactly what I heard Mr. Publow predict over three months ago.

This storage, no doubt, has been brought about by a number of causes. We have had a very dry season, more milk and cream being consumed by an ever increasing population; an increase in butter-making and the raising of stock.

This country is rapidly undergoing changes that has produced these and other results.

The true principal underlying successful agriculture is the maintaining of soil fertility at the highest point possible and to my mind, there has never been a time when it has been as necessary for owners of cheese factories, cheese-makers and producers of milk to stand together and work together, to save the situation of the cheese industry, that has been such a boom to agriculture in this country for the last forty years.

My recommendations for next season's work would necessarily be much the same as in former reports, which I think every one quite understands.

TURNBULL'S

FAREWELL ADDRESS MADE BY REV. DR. MARSH PRESENTATION IS MADE

At the annual meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society, held in the Collegiate Institute, last night, the Rev. Dr. Marsh, of Springville, was presented with a handsome club bag. Dr. Marsh is soon to sever his connection with the local centre of the Royal Astronomical Society, and it was in recognition of his services to the Society that the presentation was made.

The address was read by the President, Mr. T. A. S. Hay, and the presentation was made by Mr. W. A. Logan.

In reply, Dr. Marsh said that next to his duty to his Church and family he considered that of the Astronomical Society. The privilege of being connected with it he had enjoyed greatly.

Dr. Marsh spoke of the success of Mr. H. B. Collier, along astronomical lines. Mr. Collier had lectured in Toronto, Hamilton and Guelph, and had contributed articles to the leading scientific journals of America. He received his start (astronomically) in this City.

Dr. Marsh wished to thank the Society most heartily for the club bag. Some thought astronomy was merely a pastime, but in reality it was a very important study. And if he had done anything to aid the progress of astronomy in this City, it had been a great deal of pleasure and profit to him.

His Honour Judge Huycke spoke briefly in praise of Dr. Marsh's work in the society. When Dr. Marsh came to Springville some years ago, it was a benefit to the whole community. He had been not only an educator but an inspirer. He had been the mainspring of the society.

Farewell Address.

For the subject of his farewell Dr. Marsh chose "Solar Phenomena."

The speaker said that he could not exhaust this subject if he spoke every night for twenty-five years. Consequently his treatment of the subject was somewhat abridged.

The sun could be regarded in two lights. The first as a dominating body in relation to the planets; the second as a typical star—the word "star" being defined as a body that gave forth its own light.

Mercury, Venus, Jupiter, Neptune, etc., all appeared to be stars, but in reality, are not, for they do not shine by a light of their own. By the new telescope being made in Canada it would be possible to see 100,000,000,000,000 (one hundred thousand million) stars. These stars are so far away that when viewed through a telescope they look merely like a point of light. But, small as they are, their composition can be determined by means of a spectroscope.

The sun was 864,000 miles in diameter, though it appears to contract and expand in size.

The size of the sun, its mass, density; its various motions, its chemical composition, radiation of light—any one of these subjects could be made the subject of a life study.

The sun was travelling nine miles a second toward the constellation Hercules—and with it was going all its dependent planets.

The fact that the sun seemed to radiate more light in the past two years than previously was due to the conditions near the earth. "Astronomy," said the lecturer, "is on the very eve of being able to predict the seasons far ahead."

Dr. Marsh dealt with the sun spots that are to be seen on the face of the sun. He described the older theories—that they were objects between the sun and the earth, or clouds, or waste material. The most probable theory was that they were the collections of the cooler gases on the surface of the sun.

In conclusion, Dr. Marsh dealt with the three-fold appearance of the sun, and what were the causes for each.

For some years Dr. Marsh has been the moving spirit in the local branch of the Astronomical Society, and his lectures and his personal work and knowledge in astronomical affairs will be very greatly missed. Himself, an astronomer of considerable reputation and experience, the community is losing one of its most prominent and useful members in Dr. Marsh's departure.

The officers of the Peterborough Centre for 1914 were elected as follows:

President — Mr. T. A. S. Hay (re-elected.

Sec.-Treas.—Mr. T. C. Elliot.
Council—Messrs. H. O. Fiske, D. E. Eason, W. A. Logan, H. Carveth, S. J. Keyes and F. H. Dobbin.

MR. ROBINSON AND THE BRIDGE PROPOSITION

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I see, while looking over the columns of the Examiner of Dec. 16th, Mr. W. S. Robinson expresses himself very largely on the Dalhousie Street bridge. He opposes it and tries to point out other sites. Well, it looks as if Mr. Robinson has had a dream and dreamed that the people of Peterborough do not know what they are asking for, or in other words, it is a great pity that our City Council will send to other places for a municipal engineer when there are such smart men here in the City.

If Mr. Robinson loves his neighbour, I think it is the ones just at his door he has forgotten. The people in East City in the last two years supported by-laws to the extent of some twenty-seven thousand dollars for factories in the south end. Now, because the people of East City are asking for a bridge to enable them to get to their work in these factories, he at once turns it down and is trying to influence others to do the same.

I regret that our friend, who is coming out for alderman, is so narrow-minded. If we get a few like Mr. Robinson and Mr. Langford in the Council, we will have easy taxes to pay.

I don't agree to spending money unnecessarily, but I think this bridge is a necessity. There are other things we can better do without. If it was another factory for the south end, Mr. Robinson, I suppose, would support it with both feet. Well, I hope the ratepayers will look at the bridge question in a different light. I am,

Yours truly,
Ratepayer.

FACTS ABOUT HALIBURTON

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Enclosed please find a letter "Facts About Haliburton," which I will be pleased if you will insert in the first issue of your paper.

Facts About Haliburton.

During the past three and a half years there has appeared in the local papers a large percentage of fiction as to conditions in Haliburton under Local Option, and I believe the time has come to give the public a few facts. As outsiders may be getting the opinion that Haliburton has been killed by Local Option. When the real facts are, that Haliburton has grown more in the three and a half years than in the previous thirty years.

Three and a half years ago Haliburton has seventy-one houses, to-day it has one hundred and eleven. That is forty houses have been built in three and a half years. (Any intelligent person will at once recognize that this is a large growth for a village situated as we are.) But this is not all, as a large number of houses have undergone improvements, as remodeling, enlarging, stone foundations, bricking, verandahs, painting, etc. Then, about a dozen of more other buildings have been erected as barns, stables, and drivesheds. Besides, we have built a Methodist church, photo gallery, bakeshop, butchershop, blacksmithshop, boathouses, rink, two pool-rooms, and a large store house. Bolender Bros. have erected a stone crushing mill, Wm. Laking has built a splendid saw mill. Maloy and Bryans have improved their mill and made additions. Several large drying sheds have been built by the mills. Then, two churches, one school and the town hall have undergone considerable repairing and painting. Two magnificent bridges have been built, the old oil lamps on the streets have been given place to gasoline lights, the G.T.R. have put in extra siding, and last but not least the G.T.R. have frequently to send in special trains to take out the extra freight, etc., notwithstanding this advancement it is frequently said that there is nothing doing in Haliburton, "It's dead."

Well, the only thing that I can say is, that such persons ought to have their eye sight tested.

THE NEW GIRL.

Litho and slender, independent and self-possessed; complexion rather too pale or sallow, perhaps partly on account of the climate; looking a little bit tired and worn; given to sitting up too late at night and to wearing shoes that are too thin; addicted to too much steam heat, too much candy and too little sleep; lacking the staying power of the English girl; but alert, well informed and exceedingly interesting.

Such is the new type of American girl that Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch says has been evolving during the past few years. Her outline sketch of the new girl can easily be filled in from observations on the street any day; for the new girl is the most striking of modern social phenomena, and the most conspicuous. She is the newest thing out. She has changed because her environment has changed. Economic conditions, with their inevitable influence upon the home, have forced her into the industries. The self-supporting girl could not possibly be the same creature as the supported girl, in either appearance, manner or character.

But the changed environment has not lessened the charm who exerts upon the people of the opposite sex, if such may be inferred from the number of marriage licenses issued in the month of weddings.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-morrow's market should exhibit a continuation of the recovery tactics. The general list has been liquidated and very much over sold. The shortage may develop into a substantial improvement according to some competent observers of speculative operations. A feature of the market impressing itself upon the close observers is the limited supply of offerings of stocks for sale on appearance of hardening and strength in the leading issues. Inquiries among commission houses indicate that they are more hopeful. It seems to be the impression that the currency bill will supply a needed impetus. Special attention is directed to the stimulation of investment by the tendencies in money rates toward lower levels. These can be seen by those trained to observe. Buying of U.P., G.Q., St. Paul, N.P., N.W., L. and L, S.P. and P.A. is inclusive of investment on account of monetary tendencies The leader is U.P., and Rdg. is being bought by speculative interests.

DRAW FOR FIRST ROUND OF THE ENGLISH CUP

Games Will Be Played on January 10th--Hull City Will Play Bury--Football Betting is Rampant--Pennington is Wise

The draw for the first round of the English Cup is now before us, and on January 10th, 1914, on which day the games are due to be played, there is promise of much excitement. Here are a few of the tit-bits:

Newcastle v. Sheffield United.
Liverpool v. Barnsley.
Swindon v. Manchester U.
Millwall v. Chelsea.
Bradford City v. Woolwich.
Hull v. Bury.
Blackburn v. Middlesboro.
Sheffield Wed. v. Notts County.

Pros. For St .Louis.

A professional team, chaperoned by Mr. W. Hilton, is scheduled to visit St. Louis during Christmas week. As this St. Louis club is not affiliated to the United States F.A. the fact of the Toronto pros. visiting them may affect the latter's application for affiliation to the D.F.A. The professionals not yet being affiliated are quite within their rights, but with the affiliation scheme pending, it does not seem to be judicious.

Football Betting.

In the old country football betting is rampant, and a bill with the view of expelling it is presently before Parliament. I am sorry to say that the coupon system is in vogue in Canada also, but as the games on the list are restricted to the old country it cannot affect the players here.

One of the worst cases yet heard of is that where one Sam Johnstone agreed to present Jesse Pennington with $235 on the termination of the match played at West Bromwich with Everton on November 29 if the result be a draw or a loss for the home team.

Penington Wise.

Johnstone was prosecuted at court with committing an offence under the Corruption Act under the name of Fred Pater.

Penington communicated with Mr. Bassett, chairman of the directors, who approached the police and it was arranged that if the man came forward to carry out his proposal a trap should be set for him. None of the other players knew anything of the arrangement. By a singular coincidence the match resulted in a draw.

Pater was on the ground and Pennington went to him and said. "What about that money?" In the presence of Sergeant Barker, Detective Mollatt, Mr. W. I. Bassett, and Mr. Fred Everiss, Pater handed over to Pennington a bag of gold and asked him to count it in the office. The money was found to be correct and as he was about to leave the man was arrested.

Pennington described how he was handed the bag of gold, which was to be divided equally between the team, £5 for each player.

The aplication for a week's remand was granted.

English Soccer Draw.

London, Dec. 16.— The following change and addition to the cup draw, as cabled yesterday, are announced:

Preston N. E. will play Bristol Rovers.

Clapton Orient v. Notts Forest.

Oldham Athletic v. Brighton and Hove.

Old Country Soccer.

London, Dec. 16.— Merthyr to-day defeated Stalybridge by 2 goals to 1, thus qualifying for the first round of the cup.

Glossop defeated Notts Forest, 3—0.

HAS BATTLE HYMN.

Ulster War Song Written By a Unionist M. P.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Mr. Ian Malcolm M.P., has written a stirring "Hymn of Empire," which is intended to be sung at Unionist meetings in England and Ireland while the fate of Ulster hangs in the balance.

There are four stanzas, of which the following is one:—

God is our strength. Though men betray
Our kinsmen, comrades, blood and bone,
Though all forsake us—even they
Who share our faith, our flag, our throne—
We shall not flinch, we will not bend.
The oath that our forefathers swore
Is ours to carry to the end,
Confident in the God of War.

A good Christmas Present for your boy—a ticket for the Y. M. C. A. 3d-142

Hockey--That's All

The Toronto papers announce that Denison of Peterborough is out at practice with the Toronto Rowing Club Seniors. The player referred to is Frank Denison who several years ago was with the Lindsay Juniors. He is a cousin of Fred Denison.

No workout at Brock Street Rink to-night for the hockey squad, but there will be a full turnout on Friday night.

About time that Medicine Hat should open the door and let out a little cold weather. It's badly needed in the hockey business.

The Bankers and the De Laval Factory are new applicants for franchises in the Mercantile League.

The Junior City League will meet to-night to arrange the schedule for the season. The League will probably open on Jan. 7th.

Gerow, who played rover for the Belleville Intermediates several years ago, is in Town, and will try for a place on the Intermediate line-up.

There will be a keen battle for the position of goal on the Intermediate O. H. A. team. Joe Dwyer, net guardian of the Bear Cats two years ago, and with the Seniors, last year; Walter Flowers of last year's Juniors, Meldrum and Lees, who formerly played for the Collegiate, and A. R. James, goaler for the Regina Capitals in the Allan Cup series, will all try for the position. James is living in Cavan and is therefore eligible to play here under the clause regarding players in rural districts.

A meeting of the Junior City Hockey League will be held at 8 o'clock to-night in the Oak Hall store. The officers and representatives of the four teams are asked to be present.

BASEBALL

BUFFALO, Dec. 16. — Manager Billy Clymer, of the Buffalo team, last night announced the purchase of a walloping young outfielder who last year made a name for himself in the Canadian League. His name is William Wright, and according to the dope in the guide book he lives right up to his monicker.

William, who gamboled in the outer garden for the Guelph team of the fight little circuit across the border during the season just closed, was second in the batting list of Fitzgerald's league. He was at bat 384 times in 98 games, came across the plate with 76 runs, and walloped out 152 safe bingles, which entitled him to the munificent and magnificent batting average of .396 according to all the rules of arithmetic, and other means of figuring percentages. The 152 swats that tingled off Monsieur Wright's war club yielded a total of 231 bases, including, as they did 19 two-sackers, fifteen triples, and no less than ten clouts over the fence for the circuit. All of which would indicate that Wright has something very much akin to "the punch" when it comes to putting wood to the leather, as a good baseball writer might be expected to say.

Wright is but twenty years old, and is a product of western New York. He lives in Jamestown, and last year was his first in fast company, if you want to call the Canadian League "fast." Buffalo boys who played in the Canuck circuit told President Stein and Manager Clymer of Wright's ability and advised his acquisition. His record was looked up and negitiations begun that resulted yesterday in his purchase. He is still to be classed as an "experiment" owing to his age and the fact that he has but a year of experience, but Clymer soon will get a line on what promise there is in the lad, when he has had a chance to give him the "once over" on the southern training trip.

Oh, yes, we forgot, or almost forgot, to mention that Wright rang up a record of 39 stolen bases along with his batting ability and fielded for an average of .949 over the bumpy pastures and uncertain footing of the outfields on the Canadian circuit. With speed and the punch, the boy looks like a good investment. Anyway, his acquisition is in line with the Clymer idea—youth and speed behind good pitching.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 16. — The London Baseball club, of the Canadian League, has lines out for Nick Altrock to manage the team next season. Altrock was last season with the Washington team. A movement is afoot here to start an amateur athletic association along the lines of the one in Montreal. Some 400 athletic enthusiasts are identifying themselves with the proposal. It is intended to gather teams to represent the city in all branches of sport.

GUELPH, Dec. 16.—While no information of a positive nature is available at the present time regarding the securing of the Guelph Maple Leaf baseball franchise from George O'Neil, of London, who purchased it from W. A. Mahoney, of Guelph, there is little doubt but that the club will be here doing business at the same old stand in 1914. Mr. O'Neil has assured the citizens that he is open to a proposition from Guelph parties, and it is understood the money necessary for the purchase is about all secured and will be paid over in plenty of time. Several of Guelph's business and professional men are getting behind the club, and will see that this city retains its place in the Canadian League.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—That an ex-big leaguer as manager of a Canadian team, or even a player, is a huge drawing-card, was proved decidedly when Frank Bowerman jumped the London team. The moguls, when the season ended, found that their receipts did not come near the mark set when Frank decided to shake the dust of this city from his feet, hence the powers-that-be are once more angling for an ex-big leaguer, and this time the name of no other than Nick Althrok has been mentioned.

A shareholder of the London club stated Saturday afternoon that there was little doubt but that an ex-player from either the National or American leagues would be manager of the London Canadian League team for 1914.

Nick Altrock is given credit by Clarke Griffith for the good showing of more than one Washington pitcher, but Ban Johnson, the czar of the American League, has banned Nick on account of the burlesque work pulled off by him and his co-star, Germany Schaeffer, and Nick's arm having gone the way of many others his fondest hope is to manage a minor league club.

The shareholder of the local club already mentioned stated that Altrock's name and a recommendation of the former American leaguer's work had been brought to his notice, and that the London club would get in touch with Altrock immediately.

Suffragettes Protested.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 17.—Very extensive damage was done to St. Ann's Church, Liverpool, yesterday by an incendiary fire started by the militant suffragettes as a protest against the rearrest of their leader, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst. The stalls on the south side of the church were destroyed and the splendid organ was seriously damaged. Entrance was gained to the church by the "arson squad" through a stained glass window which they smashed. The usual suffrage literature was left scattered about the place.

Cashier Held Up.

MONTREAL, Dec. 17. — Grabbing with one hand at the revolver in the coat pocket of his victim and with the other at the bag containing $50 in cash, an unknown hold-up man got away with $500 in cash in two envelopes in The Herald building at five o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The highway man, stopped in the attempt to get away with his boodle by Wm. C. Hall, shot the latter in the leg and made good his escape.

MINERS PERISH.

Thirty-Eight Men Are Killed In Explosion In Colliery.

NEW CASTLE, Colo., Dec. 17.—Thirty-eight men were killed in the Vulcan mine of the Rocky Mountain Fuel Co yesterday by an explosion of coal dust. Two miners were rescued after the underground workings had caught fire. All the victims were married, and all but six or eight were Americans.

Men in charge of rescue work asserted last night that it probably would be a day or two before the bodies could be recovered. Before sundown the mine had been cleared of gas and a thorough exploration of the wrecked workings was made.

Many of the bodies were frightfully mangled and burned.

Father J. P. Carrigan of Glenwood Springs, near here, hurried to Newcastle at the first news of the explosion. The priest rushed into the smoking pit among the first rescuers, in search of the dying, to whom he might administer the last rites of the church.

Duke's Offer Refused.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Mr. Lloyd George has replied to the offer of the Duke of Sutherland to sell the Government a portion of his deer forests. The text is not published, but it is understood that the reply is equal to a refusal of the offer. The duke being en route to the West Indies on a holiday trip, it is contrary to official etiquette to publish the text of the letter prior to its receipt by the person to whom it is addressed.

Harwich Farmer Loses Arm.

CHATHAM, Dec. 17.—John F. Jordan, son of Richard Jordan, of Raleigh Township, had his arm so badly mangled in a corn shredder that it had to be amputated. Mr. Jordan was running a shredder on his own farm in Harwich, when the accident happened. He was brought to this city and the arm was amputated shortly after the accident, and yesterday he was making favorable progress.

Canada has a fishing fleet of 1,660 vessels, and 38,977 boats, manned by 68,610 men. 24,978 employed on shore—a total of 93,588.

PRETTY FRUIT STORE ON CHARLOTTE STREET

Messrs. Jos. Longo & Co.'s Italian Fruit Store, on Charlotte street, has been decorated in showy Christmas attire, and looks like a bright, busy and eastern bazaar. WELCOME NEWS FOR OTONABEE POWER USERS

Communication Will Be Placed in Hands of Council Containing Proposal Ensuring a Continued Service to Otonabee Customers

MEETING WAS NOT HELD

Mr. W. G. Ferguson, President of the Otonabee Power Co., was interviewed this morning regarding the statement of Alderman Buller, that referred to a meeting alleged to have been held yesterday between the Electric Power Co. and the Hydro-Electric Commission, to arrange for providing light and power for the Otonabee customers. Mr. Ferguson stated that no meeting regarding Otonabee matters had been held or ever contemplated as far as the Electric Power officials knew, but he stated that he had today been in communication with Mr. Colville, the Vice-President of the Electric Power Co., and that a joint communication from the Otonabee Power Co., and the Peterborough Light and Power Co. will be placed in the hands of the Council to-night, containing a proposal that will ensure continued service to the Otonabee customers until such time as the City obtained possession of the plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. Mr. Ferguson further stated that the proposal was such a fair and reasonable one that he had no doubt the Council would consent to it, and the citizens using Otonabee power would therefore be caused no loss or inconvenience.

C. P. R. Dance This Evening

A big time is promised for those who attend the dance being given by the C.P.R. employees to celebrate the opening of the new freight sheds at the end of Charlotte street, to-night. Free transportation for the the employees of the company from Toronto, Havelock, Port McNichol and intermediate stations, is being provided by the company, and it is expected that a large number will take advantage of the opportunity and come to Peterborough for the dance to-night.

Men were busy at the sheds to-day getting ready for the affair to-night. The "hall room" has been very liberally decorated with flags and streamers. The floor has been waxed to perfection, and provision made to have the hall brilliantly lighted. The office is being arranged for dressing rooms, and every indication points to a brilliant affair this evening.

STORM AT ENQUIRY

Dr. Edwards Says Prison Commission is Whitewashing

OFFICIALS DENY CHARGES

KINGSTON, Dec. 18. — Deputy Warden O'Leary and Dr. Phelan appeared before the Prison Commission yesterday and entered sweeping denials of the charges made against them during the present probe into the affairs of Kingston Penitentiary.

Deputy Warden O'Leary denied having persecuted guards. He also denied making statements as alleged by convicts, with regard to seeing one of them in a box, or that he would kill another before he get out of the prison. Neither was there any truth, he said, in the statement that he had shown favoritism by giving some guards easy posts.

The deputy said there were about 500 convicts in the penitentiary and about 50 per cent. were free from reports against them.

"How many troublers have you in the prison?" asked Mr. Whiting.

"From 35 to 40." Incorrigibles had been 'hosed' and among these were Bonner, Jones, Kelly and Buckley."

Daniel Phelan gave a most emphatic denial to charges made by convicts that men in the hospital had been neglected or that death resulted from his neglect. He further denied the charge by convicts that they had been refused medicine. "I never refused to give a man medicine when he needed it," said Phelan.

After O'Leary's testimony a storm broke loose.

The chairman of the commission wanted to know just where the commission stood, and as to whether there would be any additional evidence offered against the deputy.

Mr. Downey said Dr. Edwards had stated that the charges arose out of information he had been given by Inspector Hughes.

Dr. Edwards asked to make an explanation of the matter and immediately the chairman repeated his declaration that Dr. Edwards should not do more than put his questions through counsel.

Dr. Edwards charged that the commission was trying to bluff him out of evidence. He had made certain charges and had been restricted by the chairman in securing evidence.

OTTAWA REJOICES.

Hydro Commission Gives City a Liberal Reduction.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—From Toronto yesterday came good news as regards a reduction of lighting rates for Ottawa. The Ottawa Municipal Electric Department will conclude this year with a net profit of $45,000.

This announcement was made yesterday by Mayor Ellis in a statement definitely declaring the promised reduction in light and power rates. The reduced schedule of rates has been approved by the Hydro-Electric Commission, and Ottawa and Welland will have lower rates than any other municipality under the jurisdiction of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. The reduction in the price of power will vary from 10 to 30 per cent., according to the quantity used, and whether it is used on or off the peak of the load. Commercial rates will be reduced at least 10 per cent., and possibly more.

Objectionable Play Altered.

MONTREAL, Dec. 18.—The management of the Novelty Theatre, where the French piece, Baptiste on Tour, which contained a caricature of King George and the Prince of Wales, was played, has agreed to eliminate the scenes in which reference is made to His Majesty and His Royal Highness, and have substituted the King of Zanzibar as the monarch who entertained the Mayor of St. Scholastique, his wife and daughter, in his pyjamas.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 18.—Slashed trousers, purple socks and red neckties—especially on depressing days—will be proper schoolroom attire for male professors and instructors in the near future, if they listen to the advice given the Washington County Teachers' Institute yesterday by Miss Harriette Cook of Washington, Indiana.

Rebels Expelled No Other Foreigners Says Gen. Villa.

HERMOSILLO, Sonora, Mexico Dec. 18.—Gen. Francisco Villa, in a long report received here yesterday by Gen. Carranza, denied that any foreigners were molested in Chihuahua city, with the exception of the Spaniards, who were expelled. Villa suggested to the supreme leader of the revolutionists that the Chihuahua state capital be made his national provisional capital.

"The foreign consuls asked for guarantees for their countrymen, and these were given in full for all except Spanish," Gen. Villa said in his report.

"These, as you know, a most entirely have taken an undue part in the internal struggle of our country, and have put themselves always against the cause of the people, of whom we are the defenders."

Gen. Villa told of the institution of a civil government at Chihuahua city and of the enlistmen. of 200 Federal soldiers who were sent to Juarez on their own recognizance. In requesting Gen. Carranza to move his military headquarters to Chihuahua, Gen. Villa argued that the state was in the hands of insurgent forces, and that its central location would make the move most advantageous.

It was said here that Gen. Carranza had made no decision in the matter, but was considering it. Villa took occasion to reassure the Constitutionalist commander-in-chief of the "loyalty and constancy of your most affectionate subordinate."

Want Notes Guaranteed.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 18.—A Presidential decree making the state bank notes legal tender throughout the republic; a guarantee fund to be subscribed by the state banks and deposited in the National Bank, and finally, a Government guarantee of the bank notes, is the program decided upon by a committee of five bankers, representing the National, the Bank of London and Mexico, and two or three other concerns, who met yesterday afternoon with the acting head of the finance department.

COMMISSIONS CUT.

Express Companies Must Charge Less on Freight Bills.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—The Railway Commission yesterday issued an order reducing express charges for the handling of freight bills of lading and collection of moneys thereunder.

At present the express companies forward bills of lading for freight shipments, they, however, charging for the collection and return of money under the bill of lading one per cent.

By the order signed yesterday a change in the expres classification has been made. Under this a new rule provides for the charge of one-eighth of one per cent. with a minimum of one per cent. on $100 on one company's line and one and one-half per cent. when carried by more than one company.

In practice, present and proposed rules will work out as follows: On $100, present $3, proposed one line $1, two line, $1.50; on $200, present $3, proposed one line $1, two line $1.50; on $500, present $5, proposed one line $1, two line $1.50; on $1,000, present $10, proposed one line $1.25, two line $1.50; on $2,000, present $20, proposed one line $2.00, two line $2.50.

Government Puts Restrictions on Entry of U. S. Unemployed

RIGID TEST IS IMPOSED

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—In order to protect the interests of the workingmen of this country from undue competition during the winter months, so far as Government regulations can do so, the very strictest regulations regarding the immigration of laborers into Canada have been put in force.

Labor condition in the United States are much worse than in the Dominion, with the result that there is an exceptionally large number of United States workingmen at every port of entry trying to get into Canada. Were they allowed into the country wholesale, the labor market would be flooded worse than it is at present, and much misery and privation would ensue.

The most stringent regulations, therefore, have been put into force to keep them out. They must possess cash to the amount at least of $50, and prove to the immigration officials that they are capable of sustaining themselves during the trying winter months. The sum which non-agricultural immigrants must possess under usual conditions is $25. To-day, therefore, the immigrants may fairly be said to be hand-picked as never before for the usual regulations apply not only to every port of entry along the United States border, but to ocean ports as well.

Canadian and Irish Experts Ready For Embargo Hearing.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—G. F. O'Halloran, Deputy Minister of Agriculture of Canada, arrived here yesterday to be present at a hearing today at the Department of Agriculture on the question of modifying the Department's embargo on potatoes from Canada and certain European countries. T. P. Gill, Secretary of Agriculture of Ireland, also will be present, and some other countries will have representatives.

The question to be considered is whether the plant quarantine board shall allow the importation of potatoes, as it does of trees and shrubs provided they have been examined abroad by experts and declared to be free from infection.

HOPE FOR NERVOUS.

Entrance Exams. May Be Avoided If Principal Says So.

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—The sting has been taken out of the entrance examination. Amendments just published which have been made in the Ontario regulations governing admission to high school courses give the principals of public schools the power to declare pupils fitted for high school work. The possession of such a recommendation will admit the pupil to a collegiate or high school without a departmental examination.

Under the old rules injustice often resulted when a pupil whose work during the year had been of a high standard failed on the departmental examination through nervousness or indisposition.

The "clever" boy will no longer deceive the school principal as to the amount of his knowledge as easily as he did when he merely passed a departmental examination; while the "plodder" will get more credit than he has in the past.

Ontario Schools Condemned at Annual Grange Meeting

WESTERN FARMERS SPEAK

TORONTO, Dec. 18. — Education in the rural districts of Ontario was the subject of a vigorous discussion at the afternoon session of the 39th annual meeting of the Dominion Grange, held in Victoria Hall yesterday.

A report was read by the educational committee, which has studied conditions in the rural districts during the past year, and many changes were recommended, including a decrease in the grants to the public schools, an increase in the grants to the high schools, less power for rural trustees who have become buffers between the inspectors and the ratepayers, and the assumption of the educational powers of the county councils by the school trustees. It was also suggested in the report that consolidated rural schools were beneficial and should be considered as a means of reducing the present overcrowding in some districts.

James McEwing, M.P.P., was of the opinion that the Education Department set much too high a standard for rural school teachers. He stated that it cost so much now to get these qualifications that the applicants were making high salaries, that the people could not pay. The majority of teachers holding first-class certificates, he said, now wanted better positions than could be offered in the country schools.

J. C. Dixon supported Mr. McEwing.

E. C. Drury, Crown Hill, did not altogether side in with the views of the others, and stated that in the rural schools of Ontario yesterday over half the teachers hold no certificates whatever, and two-thirds hold only third-class certificates. Mr. Drury advocated the highest standard of education possible, and said that this could be gained only by having teachers who are most highly qualified.

The discussion is to be resumed to-day.

Several delegates from the western provinces were present and spoke briefly of the work being done there by the granges. R. C. Henders, president of the Canadian Council of Agriculture in Manitoba, believed that party politics should be entirely abandoned by the farmers if they wished for the best results in the governing of the country.

Mr. Henders hoped that all the agricultural forces in Ontario would consolidate with the Grange and link up with the western organizations. Farmers would then come into their own, and be able to enforce their demands for fair play and better conditions.

Mr. T. A. Gree, president of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Grain Company, said the direct interchange of produce between east and west would enable the consumer to buy cheaper in the west and the producer to get more in the east. A great organization of farmers from the Atlantic to the Pacific, operating on the direct interchange system, would raise one class of the community and tend to benefit the whole country by eliminating what has developed into a dictatorship under the exorbitant grasping of the middleman and the exploiter."

J. A. McHarg, Winnipeg, explained the system of elevators, owned and operated by the farmers themselves. The western people, he said, were being charged for fruit three times the amount that was being paid the producers in Ontario, and said that the west could use all the fruit that Ontario produced if handled co-operatively, between farmers' institutes in the east and west.

In his annual address the Master of the Grange, Mr. W. C. Good, urged removal of the protective tariff, tax reform, and initiative and referendum in politics.

"We must organize our industries upon a co-operative basis for mutual service, and not for profit. We need co-operative producing associations, co-operative stores, and distributive agencies, co-operative credit associations, and so forth. We have already made some progress in this direction, and I sincerely hope that our discussions at this convention may lead to further progress."

Kingston To Have Commission.

KINGSTON, Dec. 18.—By a majority of 23 votes yesterday it was decided to place civic utilities under a commission of three members. The vote was as follows: For commission, 180; against, 157. This was a very small vote in view of the fact that there are about four thousand qualified voters for the election.

The commissioners will be selected at the municipal election.

Naturalization Settled.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—(C. A. P. TUNNEL CO. WILL PAY.

Windsor Reaches Agreement by Which It Gets $32,000 Taxes.

WINDSOR, Dec. 18.—The long standing litigation between the city of Windsor and the Detroit River Tunnel Co. was terminated yesterday when the company entered into an agreement which settles the question of the tunnel assessment for some years to come. The new agreement provides that the tunnel be assessed at one million dollars for fifteen years and the lands of the Michigan Central Railway Co., comprising forty-five acres, at $450,000 for fifteen years.

This agreement will be submitted to the Legislature for ratification.

Under the agreement of 1913 the city secured only a $10,000 assessment for two years. Later the Ontario Railway Board held that the tunnel was non-assessable.

By the present agreement the city of Windsor will get $32,000 a year taxes, at the rate of 23 1-2 mills.

Mayor Clay expresses himself as entirely satisfied with the result. "I believe the settlement to be in the best interests of Windsor," he said yesterday. "The city has achieved the victory by unity among the citizens. The Board of Trade and Council have acted together and have succeeded, as in the case of the London street level crossing. When the people stand together nothing is strong enough to defeat them."

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

XXXII.

ICONOCLASM.

The surprise which this very simple question occasioned, showed itself differently in the two men who heard it. The Inspector,, who had never seen me before, simply stared, while Mr. Gryce, with that admirable command over himself which has helped to make him the most successful man on the force, retained his impassibility, though I noticed a small corner drop from my filigree basket as if crushed off by an inadvertent pressure of his hand.

"I judged," was his calm reply, as he laid down the injured toy with an apologetic grunt, "that the clearing of Howard from suspicion meant the establishment of another man's guilt; and so far as we can see there has been no other party in the case besides these two brothers."

"No? Then I fear a great surprise awaits you, Mr. Gryce. This crime, which you have fixed with such care and seeming probability upon Franklin Van Burnam, was not, in my judgment, perpetrated either by him or any other man. It was the act of a woman."

"A Woman?"

Both men spoke—the Inspector as if he thought me demented; Mr. Gryce, as if he would like to have considered me a fool but dared not.

"Yes, a woman!" I repeated, dropping a quiet curtsey. It was a proper expression of respect when I was young, and I see no reason why it should not be a proper expression of respect now, except that we have lost our manners in gaining our independence, something which is to be regretted perhaps. "A woman whom I know; a woman whom I can lay my hands on at a half-hour's notice; a young woman, sirs; a pretty woman, the owner of one of the two hats found in the Van Burnam parlours."

Had I exploded a bomb-shell the Inspector could not have looked more astounded. The detective, who was a man of greater self-command, did not betray his feelings so plainly, though he was not entirely without them, for, as I made this statement, he turned and looked at me; Mr. Gryce looked at me.

"Both of those hats belonged to Mrs. Van Burnam," he protested; "the one she wore from Haddam; the other was in the order from Altman's."

"She never ordered anything from Altman's," was the uncompromising reply. "The woman whom I saw enter next door, and who was the same who left the Hotel D—— with the man in the linen duster, was not Louise Van Burnam. She was that lady's rival, and let me say it, for I dare to think it, not only her rival but the prospective taker of her life. O, you need not shake your heads at each other so significantly, gentlemen. I have been collecting evidence as well as yourselves, and what I have learned is very much to the point; very much, indeed."

"The deuce you have!" muttered the Inspector, turning away from me; but Mr. Gryce continued to eye me like a man fascinated.

"Upon what," said he, "do you base these extraordinary assertions? I should like to hear what that evidence is."

"But first," said I, "I must take a few exceptions to certain points you consider yourself to have made against Franklin Van Burnam. You believe him to have committed this crime because you found in a secret drawer of his desk a letter known to have been in Mrs. Van Burnam's hands the day she was murdered, and which you, naturally enough, I acknowledge, conceive he could only have regained by murdering her. But have you not thought of another way in which he could have obtained it, a perfectly harmless way, involving no one either in deceit or crime? May it not have been in the little handbag returned by Mrs. Parker on the morning of the discovery, and may not its crumpled condition be accounted for by the haste with which Franklin might have thrust it into his secret drawer at the untoward entrance of some one into his office?"

"I acknowledge that I have not thought of such a possibility," growled the detective, below his breath, but I saw that his self-satisfaction had been shaken.

"As for any proof of complicity being given by the presence of the rings on the hook attached to his desk, I grieve for your sake to be obliged to dispel that illusion also. Those rings, Mr. Gryce and Mr. Inspector, were not discovered there by the girl in grey, but taken there; and hung there at the very moment your spy saw her hand fumbling with the papers."

"Taken there, and hung there by your maid! By the girl Lena, who has so evidently been working in your interests! What sort of a confession are you making, Miss Butterworth?"

"Ah, Mr. Gryce," I gently remonstrated, for I actually pitied the old man in his hour of humiliation, "other girls wear grey besides Lena. It was the woman of the Hotel D—— who played this trick in Mr. Van Burnam's office. Lena was not out of my house that day."

I had never thought Mr. Gryce feeble, though I knew he was over seventy if not very near the octogenarian age. But he drew up a chair at this and hastily sat down.

"Tell me about this other girl," said he.

But before I repeat what I said to him, I must explain by what reasoning I had arrived at the conclusion I have just mentioned. That Ruth Oliver was the visitor in Mr. Van Burnam's office there was but little reason to doubt; that her errand was one in connection with the rings was equally plain. What else would have driven her from her bed when she was hardly able to stand, and sent her in a state of fever, if not delirium, down town to this office?

She feared having these rings found in her possession, and she also cherished a desire to throw whatever suspicion was attached to them upon the man who was already compromised. She may have thought it was Howard's desk she approached, and she may have known it to be Franklin's. On that point I was in doubt, but the rest was clear to me from the moment Mr. Gryce mentioned the girl in grey; and even the spot where she had kept them in the interim since the murder was no longer an unsolved mystery to me. Her emotion when I touched her knitting-work and the shreds of unravelled wool I had found lying about after her departure, had set my wits working, and I comprehended now that they had been wound up in the ball of yarn I had so carelessly handled.

But what had I to say to Mr. Gryce in answer to his question. Much; and seeing that further delay was injudicious, I began my story then and there. Prefacing my tale with the suspicions I had always had of Mrs. Boppert, I told them of my interview with that woman and of the valuable clue she had given me by confessing that she had let Mrs. Van Burnam into the house prior to the visit of the couple who entered there at midnight. Knowing what an effect this must produce upon Mr. Gryce, utterly unprepared for it as he was, I looked for some burst of anger on his part, or at least some expression of self-reproach. But he only broke a second piece off my little filigree basket, and, totally unconscious of the demolition he was causing, cried out with true professional delight:

"Well! well! I've always said this was a remarkable case, a very remarkable case; but if we don't look out it will go ahead of that one at Sibley. Two women in the affair, and one of them in the house before the arrival of the so-called victim and her murderer! What do you think of that, Inspector? Rather late for us to find out so important a detail, eh?"

"Rather," was the dry reply. At which Mr. Gryce's face grew long and he exclaimed, half shamefacedly, half jocularly:

"Outwitted by a woman! Well, it's a new experience for me, Inspector, and you must not be surprised if it takes me a minute or so to get accustomed to it. A scrub-woman too! It cuts, Inspector, it cuts."

But as I went on, and he learned how I had obtained definite proof of the clock having been not only wound by the lady thus admitted to the house, but set also and that correctly, his face grew even longer, and he gazed quite dolefully at the small figure in the carpet to which he had transferred his attention.

"So! so!" came in almost indistinguishable murmur from his lips. "All my pretty theory in regard to its being set by the criminal for the purpose of confirming his attempt at a false alibi was but a figment of my imagination, eh? Sad! sad! But it was neat enough to have been true, was it not, Inspector?"

"Quite," that gentleman good-humouredly admitted, yet with a shade of irony in his tone that made me suspect that, for all his confidence in and evident admiration for this brilliant old detective, he felt a certain amount of pleasure at seeing him for once at fault. Perhaps it gave him more confidence in his own judgment, seeing that their ideas on this case had been opposed from the start.

"Well! well! I'm getting old; that's what they'll say at Headquarters tomorrow. But go on, Miss Butterworth; let us hear what followed; for I am sure your investigations did not stop there."

Child Had Bronchitis

Once people get acquainted with the wonderful control which Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine exerts over bronchitis, whooping cough, croup and colds it is not easy to persuade them that anything else is "just as good." This is why the imitators never get very far.

In 1902 Mrs. Eugene Iler, King street, Truro, N.S., wrote as follows:

"From an infant one of my children was troubled with bronchitis, and the least cold would aggravate the trouble. We could not get anything to help her, and were often greatly alarmed. Hearing of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a treatment for bronchitis, we used it, and are glad to state that it effected a complete cure. If any of the children take a cold or cough I give this medicine, and have never known it to fail to bring relief."

Mrs. Iler now writes that she has since proved this medicine to be a cure for whooping cough, and would not be without it in the house.

Christmas Customs.

It is interesting to trace the origin of festival customs to those connected with Druidical superstitions of classic observances, and it will surprise many to learn that present-day sports very closely resemble the celebrations observed of old in honor of Saturn or Bacchus.

The Roman Saturnalia, which occurred in the winter solstice, were a season of great festivity and rejoicing, honored by many privileges and exemptions. The spirit of gaiety had free charter, and even quarrels were suspended, to be resumed after the holidays.

As a manifestation of the gratitude felt at the renewed prospects of the returning march of the sun, gifts were exchanged and special hymns were sung. These latter were really the Roman representatives of the modern carol.

At the Saturnalia the Roman feasted, sang and danced, as we do at Christmas. A ruler or king was appointed, who enjoyed certain prerogatives. He presided over the sports of the season. Probably he is the ancestor of the lord of misrule, who exercised a similar power in more recent times.

Merriment was a matter of general concern, and the joyous spirit of entire districts is now narrowed to family parties.

It is the touch that makes the whole world kin, and it is a pleasant reminder that, after all, history repeats itself.

Not Blessed.

The pessimist you forget to give to others who don't forget to give to you are not so blessed.

HASTINGS NEWS

Man Who Was Injured in Wreck is Improving

Examiner Special:

HASTINGS, Dec. 15.—On Tuesday of last week there passed away in Toronto, a former resident of Percy, in the person of Mr. Wm. Dickie. Deceased was well and favourably known here, having spent a number of years in the vicinity of Hastings. The body was brought per C.P.R. train to Norwood on Thursday, and interment was made in the Trent Valley cemetery.

A very successful tea meeting and entertainment was held at Elgin on Friday night, which was well attended. Several of our people drove out and report a most enjoyable evening. The entertainment was furnished by the members of the Sunday School, addresses being given by Revs. Mr. Snyder, of Norwood, and Mr. Anderson, of Hastings. The committee in charge are well pleased with the proceeds of the evening.

The collectors for the Bible Society have been making a tour of the district in the interest of that body and have met with a hearty response from the people upon whom they called. A meeting is called for Wednesday night of this week, at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Edmison, to consider the advisability of forming an organized Bible Class, under the direction of Mr. C. Jones, the efficient Bible Class teacher in the Methodist Sunday School.

The funeral of the late Mr. John Butler, formerly of Percy, was held on Thursday last, and was largely attended. Deceased had many friends here who extend sympathy to the bereaved family.

Mr. T. Walsh spent a few days in Peterborough last week.

Miss Belle Humphries, of Keene, is visiting her brother, Mr. Walter Humphries.

Mrs. Jas. Stevenson is in Oshawa, whither she was summoned to see her husband, who was seriously injured in the railroad collision on Friday last. Latest reports represent the unfortunate man as badly shaken up, but great hopes are entertained for his recovery. His many friends are hoping that he will soon be home again.

Our dressmaker, Miss Ingram, has closed shop for the 'Xmas vacation and is holidaying at her home in Campbellford.

Rev. Wm. Burns on Saturday last disposed of his household effects by public auction sale. Those present report keen bidding. The reverend gentleman has resigned his charge in Hastings and leaves at once for a new field of labour.

Rev. H. Anderson attended the fowl supper at Roseneath on Monday of last week.

Mrs. J. Moore and Miss Eva, took a trip to Peterborough last week.

The Bazaar held recently under the auspices of the ladies of the Anglican Church, was a decided success and netted the society a handsome sum.

Another extra large shipment of cattle bought by Kohler Bros., left the yard here on Thursday last. There were some 20 carloads, carrying in the neighbourhood of 600 head. The men in charge left in good spirits, but ere Toronto was reached, one poor fellow was dead, and two others seriously, if not fatally injured, their train having collided with the fast express.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was dispensed in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning, preparatory services being held the previous Friday.

Mrs. J. Greenley, of Campbellford, is spending a few days here with her mother, Mrs. Hermiston, who is ill.

Christmas decorations are everywere in progress, and our town is putting on her holiday attire.

Mr. Nelson Beavis shipped a large shipment of fowl from Birdsall's Station on Friday last. The consignment consisted of 2,000 lbs. turkeys and 200 lbs. geese; price paid was 16 1-2 cents for turkeys, and 10 cents for geese (live weight). They were sent to Mr. Robt. Campbell, Keene.

Mr. Hugh Robb, of Norwood, motored into town on Monday.

A member of the house of representatives has suggested a plan by which rolls may be called and votes taken in the senate and house by members pressing electric buttons at their desks and registering in coloured lights on bulletin boards.

Nerves Were So Bad

THOUGHT SHE WOULD GO OUT OF HER MIND.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and worn out by household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with the nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the nerves, strengthen the heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. Archie Goodine, Tilley, N.B., writes:—"When I was troubled with my heart two years ago, I was very bad. My nerves were so unstrung that sometimes I would almost go out of my mind. I doctored myself with everything I could get, until at last I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they have cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this wonderful remedy, and will recommend it to all sufferers."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

I do not envy him who ne'er
Has borne the bruises of defeat,
Whose pathways have been smooth and fair,
Whom Chance has never learned to cheat;
For he has never claimed the sweet
Reward that comes to those who dare
To be triumphant, to possess
The splendid solace of success
Won after failure and despair.

I do not envy lovers who
Have never found their love betrayed
Who love but once and journey through Life by one little passion swayed;
For they have never gladly laid
Aside the false love for the true,
And they have missed his splendid thrill
Who having loved in vain, can still
Forget the ache and love anew.

I do not envy him whose day
Have all been peaceful days and bright,
Who has not looked with envious gaze
On luckier men who scorned his plight;
For he has never won the right
To proudly listen to the praise
Which is reserved for those who gain
Their honours after bitter pain
And many storms and long delays.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active, and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

WARSAW NEWS

Preparations for Concerts to be Given During Holiday Season

Examiner Special:

WARSAW, Dec. 17.—Preparations are being made by the teachers and scholars of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches for their annual Christmas and New Year entertainments. The former will be held in the church on Christmas night, and the latter on New Year's night in the Town Hall.

Miss Loretto Mahoney, who has resigned her position as teacher at S.S. No. 5, Douro, is holding an entertainment at the school on Monday next.

An entertainment was given by the pupils of Carmel Methodist Church on Tuesday, Dec. 16. The programme consisted of dialogues, recitations and readings, and was a splendid one.

Mr. Wm. Miller had the misfortune to lost a valuable hound in a very uncommon manner on Wednesday of last week. A party consisting of Mr. Miller and friends had the dog out for a fox chase, and after being raised the fox went over the high banks of Quarry Lake and across the thin ice, closely followed by the dog which, however, was too heavy for the ice and when about half way across went down and could not get out.

Mr. W. B. Aitken, Peterborough, is spending a few weeks at his home.

Messrs. David and J. McManus, of Medicine Hat, Alta., arrived at their old home on Wednesday, where they were called to the bedside of their mother. Mrs. McManus has since revived and her condition is favourable.

Mr. Wm. Cuffe arrived home from Moose Jaw on Tuesday.

Nervous Energy Is Limited

There is only so much energy in the human body. A few people have an abundance, but more have not enough. Hence the necessity of conserving vitality.

If wasted by mode of living, disease or worry there must be a reckoning, and trouble is sure to come. It may be headaches and weak, aching eyes; it may be nervous indigestion, or it may be merely lack of energy and ambition, and feelings of fatigue or helplessness. Of course, sooner or later exhaustion of the nerves leads to prostration, paralysis or locomotor ataxia, but there is no need to let the trouble develop that far.

By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you can restore to the feeble, wasted nerve cells the energy they have lost. It will take some effort on your part to give up worry and anxiety, but you should realize your serious condition. Rest and use this great food cure and you are bound to improve in health and vigour.

WHAT PAT NEEDED.

The conversation turned to Pat in a Washington club, and Congressman Henry A. Cooper, of Wisconsin, was reminded of how an esteemed citizen of that state got tangled up in a recent railroad wreck.

When the smoke had cleared away and the wreck, which wasn't a very serious affair, was pulled apart, Pat's friends found him sitting beside the track holding his head in one hand and his leg in the other, said members, of course, not being detached.

"How are you feeling, Pat?" asked one of the party, stepping to assist the wounded man. "Are you badly hurt?"

"Shure, an' that Oi am," answered Pat, whose worst injury was a bunch of bumps, "Oi fale as if a road roller an' a bloomin' mule had stepped on me durin' a fright."

"Never mind, old fellow," sympathetically returned the other. "It's not so bad as it might have been, and you will get damages."

"Damages"' exclaimed Pat. "Be gorra, an' Oi've had enough av thim. It's repairs that Oi'm after now."

SEVERE COLD ON LUNGS AND CHEST QUICKLY RELIEVED

by Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne

Mr. J. Seward, Bromptonville, Que., writes:

"Two weeks ago I took a severe cold which settled on my lungs and my chest was very sore, breathing tight and severe hacking cough. I was feeling miserable. I bought a bottle of Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne and after a few doses I felt great relief and I went into a sound sleep, a thing I was not able to do for some nights. Next day I was able to be around again, and before completing the bottle, felt as well as ever. It is a fine cough and cold cure."

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne relieves the irritation and "stuffed-up" feeling in the air passages, soothes the tickling which makes you cough, loosens the phlegm and drives out the cold before it gets troublesome.

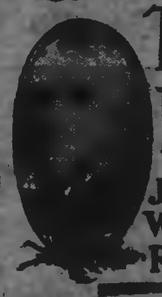
Little Mandy's Christmas Tree by JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY



LITTLE Mandy and her Ma
'S poorest folks you ever saw!
Lived in poorest house in town,
Where the fence 'us all tore down.

And no front-door steps at all—
Ist a' old box 'g'inst the wall;
And no door-knob on the door
Outside.—My! but they 'us poor!

'Wus no winder-shutters on,
And some of the winders gone.
And where they 'us broke they'd pas'e
Ist brown paper 'crost the place.

Tell you! when it's winter there,
And the snow ist ever'where,
Little Mandy's Ma she say
'Spec' they'll freeze to death some day.

'Wunst my Ma and Me—when we Be'n to church, and's goin' to be Chris'mas party soon,—we went
There—like the Committee sent.

And Sir! When we're in the door,
'Wus no carpet on the floor,
And no fire — and heels—and—head
Little Mandy's tuck-ed in bed.
And her Ma told my Ma she Got no coffee but ist tea,
And fried mush—and's all they had
Cause her health broke down so bad.

Nen Ma hug and hold me where Little Mandy's layin' there;
And she kiss her, too, and nen
Mandy kiss my Ma again.

And my Ma she told her we Goin' to have a Chris'mas-Tree
At the Sunday School, 'at's for
All the children, and for her.

Little Mandy think—nen she Say, "What is a Chris'mas-Tree?"
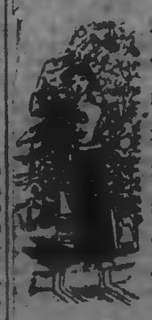
Nen my Ma she gived her Ma
Some pie 'at I saw.

And my Ma she must take it,—and
She 'ist nacherly bet
Keep her hand
Wite close shut, and nen she kiss
Her hand—shut 'ist like it is.

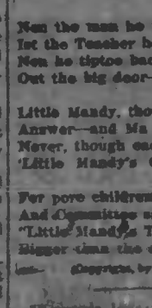
Nen we comed away . . . And nen
When its Chris'mas Eve again,
And all of us children be
At the Church and Chris'mas-Tree—



THEM all git our toys and things
'At old Santy Claus he brings
And puts on the Tree;—wite where
The big Trep 'us standin' there.

And the things 'us all tooked down,
And the childerns, all in town,
Got their presents—nen we see
They's a little Chris'mas-Tree.

Wite behind the big Tree—so we can't see till nen, you know,—
And it's all 'ist loaded down
With the puttiest things in town!



And the teacher outle and say:
"This here Tree 'at's hid away
It's marked 'Little Mandy's Tree!'
Little Mandy! Where is she?"
Nen nobody say a word.
Stillest place you ever heard!
Till a man tiptoe up where Teachers' still a-waiting there.

Nen the man he whispers, so
Ist the Teacher hears, you know.
Nen he tiptoe back and go
Out the big door—ist as slow!

Little Mandy, though she don't Answer—and Ma say "she won't Never, though each year they'll be 'Little Mandy's Chris'mas-Tree.!'

For pore children"—my Ma says—
And Committee say they guess
"Little Mandy's Tree" 'all be Bigger than the other Tree!

"Farm and Dairy" Live Stock, Produce and Grain Market Report

Toronto, Monday, Dec. 15.—In spite of reported hard times the retail Christmas trade is showing surprising strength. Wholesale dealers, however, still complain of small business and slow receipts. The easing of the money market, which so many predicted for the middle of December, is not yet in evidence, and call loans are still being taken at six and one-half per cent.

Food prices have reached such a stage that consumers are rebelling. Milk strikes from the consumers' side are now in progress in both Hamilton and Berlin. An egg strike is on in Montreal. To the south of the line consumers have been successful in their boycotting, and in Chicago have reduced the price of eggs to 35c or even lower. We hardly anticipate a boycott on meat, the most expensive article of all. Supplies are too scarce for that.

WHEAT

Wheat has been advanced to an all-rail basis, following the close of navigation. The shipments of Canadian wheat since the crop was harvested have been enormous, the increase being due to the greater railway and terminal facilities. Prices will now be determined by conditions in the southern hemisphere. There the Argentine crop is reported somewhat short, as is also the crop of India. Australia, however, will increase her exports. Quotations follow: No. 1 Northern, 94½c to 95½c; No. 2, 91½c to 92½c; feed wheat, 65c to 70c; Ontario No. 2, 83½c to 86½c; outside, 82c to 85c.

COARSE GRAINS

Coarse grain quotations are practically as a standstill. Business in this line is very quiet. A little more rye is moving than usual. Quotations are as follows: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 41c; No. 3, 39½c; Ontario No. 2, 33½c to 34c outside; 37½c to 38c here; corn, 76½c to 81c; buckwheat, 65c to 70c; rye, 65c to 66c; barley, malting, 54c to 56c; peas, $1.50 to $1.55. Montreal quotations are: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 45½ to 46c; No. 3, 43½c to 43¾c; corn, 80½c; rye, 72c to 73c; buckwheat, 56c; peas, $1.75 to $2.25; feed wheat, 72c to 74c.

MILL FEEDS

Supplies of bran are running short and quotations have advanced accordingly. Toronto prices are: Bran, $23; shorts, $25.50 to $26; middlings, $28 to $30. Montreal dealers ask for bran, $20 to $21; shorts, $22 to $23; middlings, $25 to $26.

HAY AND STRAW

The hay market is quiet. Small quantities are going forward to United States points, but the demand from that direction is not great. Reports from Montreal indicate that shipments to England, an important part of the trade two weeks ago, have now dropped off as English dealers find that they can lay in supplies more cheaply elsewhere. Wholesale dealers here quote: No. 1 hay, $14.50 to $15; No. 2, $12 to $14; No. 3, $3 to $9; baled straw, $8. At Montreal the situation is similar. No. 1 hay, $16 to $16.50; No. 2, $13 to $15.50; No. 3, $10.50 to $11.

POTATOES AND BEANS

Maritime province potatoes now feature on the market and, as usual, are quoted at a premium over Ontario potatoes. Wholesale quotations are: Delawares, $2.05 to $2.10 out of store; 75c in car lots; Ontario's, $1 out of store; 85c to 90c in car lots. An easier feeling has developed in the market at Montreal, offerings for Green Mountains being heavy at 85c; Quebec whites, 80c.

Beans here are quoted at $2.10 to $2.20 for primes; $2.20 to $2.30 for hand picked. At Montreal three-pound pickers bring $2.

SEEDS

Local merchants are buying from farmers at the following prices: Alsike, No. 1, $7.75 to $8.25; No. 2, $6.50 to $7.00; No. 3, $5 to $5.50; red clover, $6 to $7; timothy, No. 1, $2.50; No. 2, $2.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

Apples: Spies, No. 1, $4.50 to $5; No. 2, $3.50; No. 3, $2; Greenings and Baldwins, No. 1, $3.50 to $4; No. 2, $2.50 to $3; No. 3, $1.50 to $1.75; carrots, bag, 75c to 85c; parsnips, 75c to 85c.

HIDES AND WOOL

Hides are now more plentiful and quotations lower. Cured, 14½c to 15½c; part cured, 13½c to 14½c; green, 12c to 13½c; horse hides, $3.50 to $4; horse hair, 30c to 31c; calf skins, 17½c to 18c; deacons, $1 to $1.20; lamb skins and shearlings, 45c to $1.10.

Wool quotations are: Unwashed, coarse, 16½c to 17c; fine, 17½c to 17½c; washed wool, rejects, 19c to 19½c; coarse, 23½c to 25½c; fine, 25½c to 27½c.

MONEY

Wholesalers are quoting to the retail trade as follows: Strained clover honey in 60-lb. tins, 11c to 11½c; 10-lb. tins, 12c; 5-lb. tins, 12½c; buckwheat, tins, 7½c; bbls., 7c; comb honey, No. 1, $3 a doz.; extra, $3.25; No. 2, $2.40.

EGGS AND POULTRY

The prices that consumers are here paying for fresh eggs, 45c to 70c a doz. would seem to indicate a lucrative income for the man who can make hens lay in winter. Most of us, however, are using cheaper eggs. Wholesale quotations average: New laids, 40c to 42c; storage selects, 35c to 37c; country quotes, 30c to 40c; storage, 28c to 32c. There are also limed eggs being offered at Montreal. Quotations: Fresh fall stock, 45c; No. 1 stock, 34c; selects, 30c; new laids, 25c.

Dressed poultry is reaching the market in good quantities. Prices are: Dressed fowl, 16c to 18c; live, 13c to 14c; dressed spring chickens, 14c to 17c; live, 11c to 14c; geese, 16c to 18c and 8c to 10c; turkeys, No. 1, 17c to 20c and 12c to 16c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

Storage supplies are being rapidly depleted, and before spring there will be a big market in this country for foreign butter. New Zealand is already shipping in largely. Small shipments are going from here to Western Canada. Wholesale dealers are quoting farmers' separator prints at 29c to 30c and ordinary prints at 28c to 29c; fresh creamery prints, 30c to 31c; fresh solids, 28c to 29c; storage, 1c to 2c lower. Cheese quotations are: New large, 14½c; twins, 15c; old large, 14c to 14½c; twins, 15½c to 15½c.

LIVE STOCK

The outstanding feature of the live stock market in the past week was the sale of the high-class cattle, sheep and hogs exhibited at the Fat Stock Show. Good prices are always realized at that sale, but this year every record was broken, any extra well-finished beast selling for $15 per cwt. The large number of cattle then thrown on the market that next served to decrease prices in the least. All receipts since have been taken up greedily, and on the final market everything was sold at an early hour. It would seem that we are getting near the end of the Canadian beef supply. We quote as follows:

Christmas cattle, $9 to $10; export cattle, choice, $8.50 to $9; medium, $8 to $8.50; choice butchers, $8.25 to $8.75; common, $7 to $8; bulls, $6 to $6.50; heifers, $6 to $8.25; cows, choice, $6.50 to $7.25; common to good, $5 to $6.50; butchers' bulls, $6.25 to $7.40; feeders, $6 to $7; stockers, $4 to $6.25; canners and cutters, $3.50 to $4.50.

Choice milch cows sell at $80 to $100; common to med., $40 to $65; springers, $40 to $100. Veal calves are strong at $9 to $10.50; inferior, $4.50 to $7.

Lambs are in great demand at $6.50 to $7.25; buck lambs, $7.40 to $8; ewes, $4.50 to $6.25; bucks and bulls, $4.50 to $6.

Hogs are stronger, being quoted $6.25 to $6.35, weighed off cars.

The Christmas demand has forced Canadian prices higher than the prices ruling in Buffalo, and practically none are being exported. Quotations now are: Best Canadian steers, $7.25 to $7.65; handy steers, $6 to $6.50; fair to good, $7.25 to $7.75; best cows, $6.50 to $7; best heifers, $7.15 to $7.60.

MONTREAL HOG MARKET

Montreal, Saturday, Dec. 13.—The demand for hogs was good and the market was active, with a steady undertone, and sales of selected lots were made at $9 to $9.25 a cwt., weighed off cars. The demand for dressed hogs is fairly good and prices are unchanged. Abattoir-killed are selling at $13 to $13.50; country dressed light weights, $12.75 to $13 and heavy at $12.50 to $12.60.

MONTREAL BUTTER AND CHEESE MARKETS

Montreal, Saturday, Dec. 13.—There has been considerable demand this week for export and several sales have been made for shipment via St. John and Portland. The demand has come principally from Bristol and there will probably be 2,000 or 10,000 boxes shipped there this month. This will make a big hole in the stock of cheese left here unsold, and a week of active trading will probably clean out the balance of the stock in the hands of the exporters here. Stocks as published at the beginning of this month show quite a shrinkage as compared with a year ago; and as the arrivals of fresh made New Zealand have been delayed somewhat, this has resulted in a fairly active demand. Receipts of cheese have practically finished, the total for this week amounting to only 1,879 boxes, and next week should see not more than 200 or 300 come to hand. The amount

Market for butter is firm with a fairly active demand from the city and also from out of town buyers, and finest Townships September-October make is quoted at 29c and other sections of finest quality at 28½c to 28¾c; June make can be bought at about 28c.

True Detective Stories

THE LUCK OF A SEXTET.

BY A. L. DRUMMOND, FORMERLY CHIEF OF THE U. S. SECRET SERVICE.

THIS story has to do with certain incidents, amusing and otherwise, that arose from the efforts of six Irishmen to restore prosperity along the New York docks in the summer of 1875. The Irishmen were stevedores, and, times being bad at their trade, they started a mint. Let one of them get a genuine trade dollar, half dollar or quarter to use as a pattern—or as a "daddy," as they called it—and they would turn out "shiners" in abundance. But such were the vicissitudes of fortune that the lack of a "daddy" often plunged them into poverty.

It was during such a period of unfortunate financial depression that I first met James Maher, or "Brock" Maher, as he was called.

Maher was a big, raw boned fellow, perhaps fifty years old, leader of the band. An old counterfeiter had offered to introduce me to him, and we found him one evening sitting on a truck in a dark corner near the Battery. Left to ourselves, he told me his story.

"Me frind," he said, "you come to me at a most unforchinit time. This is the sixt' of July. On the Fort I got droonk, came home in a horrible condition, and while I was a-sleeping it off me old woman went through me clothes. And not a dollar or a cent did she leave me."

"That's bad, 'Brock,'" said I, "but such a thing ought to trouble you less than it would almost anybody else. You can make your own money."

"I can, can I?" he replied with feeling. "How the divvle can I make me own money when I haven't a 'daddy' to me name? Tell me that."

I couldn't tell him, and he went on:—

"Now I'll tell ye what to do, me frind. Ye're like meself—ye want money and ye don't want to wor-rk too hard for it. If ye had come to me any time but this I could 'a' sold ye all ye could carry. But just now, as I said, I'm on me uppers. I haven't an ounce iv lead, and if I had a ton I couldn't make a nickel for the lack of a 'daddy.' Now, I'll tell ye what ye do. Give me eight or nine dollars and come back here in two days and I'll have ye all the nice 'shiners' ye want."

I didn't like the idea of furnishing a man capital with which to commit crime, merely for the purpose of arresting him, so I told him I did not have the money with me and did not know, just then, where I could get it. I told him, however, that I expected to get a little money soon, and we parted good friends.

When I went back to the office I related the conversation to Chief Washburne, and he asked me why I didn't give Maher the money.

"I didn't give it to him," said I, "because if I had done so, and afterward arrested him, his attorney at his trial would have cross-examined me something like this:—

"'Where did you first meet this defendant?'

"'Down on the docks.'

"'What was he doing?'

"'Sitting on a truck.'

"'Did he tell you whether he was out of work?'

"'Yes. He said he was.'

"'Did you give him any money?'

"'Yes.'

"'Was anything said with regard to what use the money you gave him was to be put?'

"'Yes.'

"'What was to be done with it?'

"'He was to use it to make counterfeit money.'

"Then you found an idle man sitting on the docks and furnished him with money with which to become a criminal. Is that it?'

"And I should have been compelled to say, 'Yes.'"

"Well, I guess you are right," said the chief. "We'll go over to the United States District Attorney's office and see what advice we can get there."

We saw one of the assistant attorneys, and he was most emphatic in his declaration that I should have given Maher the money for which he asked. He finally went so far as to tell me to do it.

"I'll do nothing of the kind," said I, "no matter who may tell me to. If Maher can be caught in no other way than this he will never be caught by me."

The chief stood by me, and this means of getting evidence was definitely abandoned.

A few days later, however, the man who had introduced me to Maher told me that "Brock" wanted to see me—that he had raised a few dollars with which to buy materials and now had some counterfeit trade dollars to sell. A night was set for me to meet him, and I found him sitting on the same old truck, near the Battery.

"How are ye, Tom, me boy," said he (I was known to him as "Tom Moran"). "I wonder if ye are still broke, as ye was the other night? I hope ye have money with ye this evening, as I've got something good."

"Something good, eh," said I; "let's see it?"

"Don't be so fast, me boy," said the old man. "I want to know first have ye any money?"

"Well, Buck," I said, "I'm corry to say that I am in about the same financial condition that I was when I saw you the other time. But my sister has a gold watch, and I know where there is a pawnshop. I hate to hock the girl's ticker, but I'd rather do it than to miss anything."

"And how long would it take you to go home and get the watch?" asked the old man.

"Oh, I've got it with me," I said, pulling out my wife's watch, a timepiece worth about $17, that I had pawned in such emergencies. I don't know how many times.

"Well, get to yer uncle's in a hurry," said Buck. "Raise every dollar ye can and come back. I'll wait for ye; and I can tell ye now, me boy, that I've got something good."

I left him sitting on the truck while I went to the nearest pawnshop, returning in a little while with a pawnticket, which I showed him, and $7.

"Now, I'll talk business," he said. Pulling out a shining trade dollar from his pocket, he held it before my eyes. "The Skeritary of the Trisury himself," he continued, "couldn't tell this coin from one of his own. His money and mine are like the peas in a pod. The only difference is that he charges ye a hundred cints on the dollar for his, while ye can have mine for a quarter of that. How much do ye want?"

I told him I would invest the whole $7 with him, and he rummaged around in his pockets until he had counted out and handed over to me twenty-eight trade dollars, each as bright as a new tin can.

"Shpind 'em as you would water," said he, "for there's plenty more where these came from. And whin ye want more, remember that I'm the man who can give them to ye."

I told the old man I should never forget him, and we parted. I went home and marked each of the dollars with my initials, so that I could identify them in court. The next morning I looked up the informer who had introduced me to Buck and told him I wanted him to put me in touch with the rest of the band, one at a time, as quickly as possible. Maher's confederates were Michael Boyle, Bernard Quinn, James McGrath, Michael Tague and another man whose name I have forgotten. Maher and McGrath were manufacturers of counterfeit. The others were "shovers," or distributors.

Before night I had been introduced to Michael Boyle, and had made an appointment to go out with him the same evening to "shove." The art of "shoving" is to go into as many places as possible, make the smallest purchase consistent with appearances, pass out a piece of counterfeit money and get good coin in change. Saloons and cigar stands are usually selected for this purpose by those who deal in counterfeit silver coins. And the practice is for one man to go inside and turn the trick while another waits outside to watch for the police.

A little after nightfall I met Boyle and he gave me a counterfeit half dollar with which to begin my operations. I had already provided myself with perhaps fifty fifty-cent shin plasters that he didn't know about, and while he was outside a cigar store waiting for me I bought a nickel cigar with a shinplaster and received forty-five cents in change. In the middle of the block he overtook me and I turned over to him, by agreement, forty-five cents. Boyle then gave me another counterfeit half dollar which, as soon as I entered a cigar store I marked, paying for my purchase with another shinplaster.

Before we quit business that night, I had spent every one of my shinplasters and had in my possession as many of Boyle's counterfeit dollars. Then we divided up the change that I had turned over to him. I also gave him half of my cigars, and he went home, presumably feeling that the evening had been profitably spent.

At one night intervals I went out with the other members of the band. From McGrath, a manufacturer of counterfeit, I bought some half dollars and quarters, while with each Tague and Quinn I spent an evening "shoving."

Having obtained enough evidence, as I believed, to convict the whole crowd, the next thing was to get them under arrest. More than that, the arrests must all be made within a few hours of each other, otherwise the taking of one into custody might cause the others to flee. So I made an appointment with each one to meet me at a certain hour on a certain day, representing to each one that I was about to make a considerable investment in counterfeit. And I arranged that secret service men should cover each meeting point and arrest the man with whom I might be.

The first meeting came off at eleven o'clock in the morning. I was standing on a corner talking with James McGrath and we were discussing whether we should go into a saloon to conduct our transaction when a man stepped up to McGrath and told him he was a prisoner. At the first sign of trouble I took to my heels. For the purpose of completely deceiving McGrath, one of the officers gave chase and eventually caught me. McGrath had just been locked in a cell at the Bleecker street station of the secret service when my captor and myself, panting hard, entered the front door. I was led past McGrath's cell, in order that he might see me, and locked up. But in ten minutes I was quietly let out the back way to keep my next appointment.

At two hour intervals during the afternoon I was arrested with Boyle, Tague and Quinn, respectively, in each case sprinting for my liberty and eventually being captured, locked up—and released. All were then under arrest but old Brock Maher himself, and my appointment with him was for nine o'clock at night. He was a little ahead of time, and I found him waiting for me. I at once broached the customary subject of where we should go to make our deal when a Secret Service man tapped him on the shoulder and told him he was under arrest.

Maher didn't think so. He was a powerful six footer and instantly began to fight. The other five counterfeiters having been arrested, there was no necessity for me to run in this case, and I closed in upon Maher with the others. In the midst of the scuffle I saw an opportunity, while the rest were serving as targets for his fists, to grab him by the throat. Harder and harder I shut down upon him, until finally, gasping and almost black in the face, he ceased to struggle, and handcuffs were put on him.

The next morning the six prisoners met at breakfast in the station house.

"Have inny av ye seen Tom Moran?" asked McGrath. "Poor Tom! He was with me when I was pinched, but I haven't seen him since he was locked up."

"Tom was with me when I was caught," said Quinn.

"Ye don't say so," said Boyle, in amazement. "He was with me too."

"Well, Tom himself pinched me," said old Brock Maher, and then the other five for the first time realized how they had been trapped.

"I knew ye were a copper the first time I saw ye," said McGrath, when I saw him the next day.

"Of course you did," I laughingly replied; "that's why you sold me those counterfeit halves and quarters."

"Well, ye did me no dirt when ye fooled me," said old Brock, with his customary good humor, "and I bear ye no grudge. Ye did yer jooty, and to show ye I think none the less of ye I'll shake yer hand."

One by one the cases came to trial and convictions followed as rapidly as the juries could go through the forms prescribed by law. I was feeling very good over the outcome, when one day I met Louis F. Post, attorney for the Irish sextet. Post, by the way, is now the editor of the Public, a single tax publication issued in Chicago.

"Drummond," he said, "I am going to free every one of those counterfeiters that you convicted."

I laughed as if I thought he were joking, as indeed I did, and he continued:—

"There is no joke about it. The indictments in those cases are not worth the paper upon which they are written. In every one of them is omitted the phrase required by law, 'then and there, with intent to defraud.' I am going to make a motion before the trial judge to set the convictions aside and discharge the defendants. And, under the law, he can do nothing but grant the motion."

Investigation proved all that Post said to be only too true. He procured the reopening of the case, made his motion, the convictions were set aside and all of the prisoners except McGrath, who had broken from the Ludlow Street Jail and stowed away on a steamship bound for England, were discharged. McGrath, by the way, was captured as his ship was descending the Delaware River, and he received a short term for breaking jail. The others went absolutely free.

I was unspeakably angry. Before the cases against the prisoners were dismissed I mentioned the name of the man who drew the indictments to the trial judge and pleaded for an opportunity to tell of an instance in which I knew the man in question had been corrupt in a small way.

"I once knew this lawyer," said I, "to substitute cheap three-for-a-nickel cigars for five hundred twenty-five-cent smuggled Havanas that had been turned over to him as evidence by the customs authorities. When I went to his office to get the cigars to take them back to the customs office I noticed the substitution and called his attention to it. 'What difference does it make?' he asked. 'It makes this difference,' I replied, 'that I will not return the substitutes.' And I refused to take them. I presume he has them yet, if he has not destroyed them or given them away."

The Judge listened to me intently, but the prisoners were, nevertheless, discharged. Post, by the way, was never suspected of being in collusion with the attorney. In the first place, Post is honest. Furthermore, he was not the attorney for the counterfeiters when the indictments were drawn.

Thus it came about, as a grotesque conclusion to these ludicrous cases, that the only counterfeiter who was punished was imprisoned for breaking from a jail in which he was illegally confined. And the last humorous feature was afforded when a German juror, who had voted to convict one of the Irishmen, stepped over to me in the courtroom and said:—

"You fool these Irishmen mit your talk about being a counterfeiter, but you could never fool me. Why? You have gray eyes. I have looked long, but I never yet see a man with gray eyes who gets into trouble and goes to jail. Believe me."

That was thirty-three years ago, and my observation since the German made this remark convinces me there is considerable truth in what he said.

LATEST IN POPULAR SCIENCE

THE ART OF WINE TASTING.

THE mere evidence of the senses is not rated very high by those accustomed to rely upon exact scientific measurement. Occasionally, however, the senses take their revenge. In the analysis of certain foods, for instance, facts too delicate to reveal themselves to the chemical analyst may be detected by the nose or tongue of an expert. Especially is this true of the analysis of teas or wines.

A recent French writer enumerates some of the precautions that must be observed by a good wine taster. He must, in the first place, have been tasting for some little time, and he must not be a smoker. Certain powerful flavors alter the taste of the wine entirely and must be avoided. Such are the salt relishes used to revive a jaded thirst, and even the nuts and cheese recommended by some to lovers of good wines. The expert taster must approach his task with virgin palate. He must try only one wine at a sitting and must drink water after each taste to prepare himself for the next.

Some tasters even go so far as to rinse the throat first with vichy and then with pure water. The wine is then first inspected, then smelled and finally tasted. The inspection may show various things. New red wines, for instance, are bright, older ones are more yellowish. Old wines are always clear when good, but slight cloudiness is not necessarily a bad sign in new ones.

The odor test is very important, as the bouquet reveals many secrets to the expert, who can often tell by it the precise region where the wine was made, besides detecting adulteration, if any has been attempted. The tasting proper, which comes last of all, also depends very largely on the sense of smell, as we are told by the physiologists, and also on that of feeling, by which the expert's tongue, for example, distinguishes between a rough and a smooth or velvety taste. The real sense of taste tells the tester whether the wine is sweet or bitter and enables him to make other similar distinctions.

The wine is well spread over the mucous surface of the mouth in tasting and is retained until warmed. If it is swallowed too soon much of the effect is lost. Often, too, a young wine that tastes somewhat thin and rough at first reveals after an instant that it has body and gives promise of delicacy.

SENDING PICTURES BY WIRELESS.

THE latest application of wireless telegraphy is in the transmission of pictures, a feat already accomplished with ease over ordinary telegraph wires. The wireless apparatus, which is the invention of a Danish electrician named Knudsen, dispenses altogether with the use of a substance electrically sensitive to light, such as silenium, which is commonly employed in such apparatus.

The picture to be transmitted is previously so prepared as to raise the dark portions above the level of the lighter parts, forming a low relief. In the case of a photographic plate, for instance, a metallic powder, which will adhere to the damper opaque parts and not to the transparent places, may be dusted on.

In the sending instrument a style travels rapidly over the picture and closes an electric circuit whenever it is slightly raised by passing over the parts in relief. The current thus caused to flow actuates the wave generator, and the wave ultimately reaches the distant receiving apparatus, where it so acts as to press down a pencil, making a black mark. As this receiving pencil has a motion precisely corresponding to that of the style at the transmitting end, a mark will be made at all places corresponding to the raised or dark portions of the original picture, which will, hence, be exactly reproduced. This apparatus may be adapted to any system of wireless telegraphy. It will send a picture 10x12 inches in size in fifteen to twenty minutes.

THE X-RAY IN THE STUDY OF DIGESTION.

THE processes of digestion have been studied of late by means of the X-ray, the food being made opaque to the ray by mixing bismuth with it, so that its progress may be observed by taking successive radiographs. What may be learned by this method is illustrated by the recent reports of experiments on the action of morphine on the stomach. It has long been known that this drug retards digestion, but the X-ray reveals the fact that this action takes place almost entirely in the stomach. When the food reaches the intestine the morphine has no further effect upon it. It appears, therefore, that the morphine acts by retarding the natural churning motion that plays such an important part in stomach digestion, and therefore causes the process to occupy a longer time than usual.

THE ANCESTOR OF THE POTATO.

FROM which of the known species of wild potato did the cultivated variety arise? This question has long puzzled botanists. A short time ago potatoes equal to those of commerce were said to have been produced from seeds sown in France; but it was finally proved that these came, in fact, from part of a cultivated tuber [illegible] accidentally mixed with the wild ones. More lately it has been asserted that another wild species, grown in the experimental gardens of A. W. Sutton, of Reading, England, has spontaneously shown properties resembling those of the cultivated potato. It has been thought that this wild variety had perhaps been accidentally crossed with the ordinary tuber, or that, as in the case cited above, it was not really a wild species, but an escape from cultivation. Microscopic examination of the pollen grains, however, shows that these have all the characteristics of the wild vegetable, and it therefore seems probable that we have here the ancestor of the familiar "Irish" potato. Special interest attaches to this discovery because the wild species appears to be immune to the potato disease. It may thus be possible to breed an edible white potato that is much less susceptible to disease than the one that is now grown.

THE USE OF MOTOR TRUCKS.

WHEN motor trucks and delivery wagons were first introduced predictions were heard on all sides that the horse, except for pleasure traction, would disappear from city streets in a few years. This result seems still far off. Many of those who have adopted motor delivery report dissatisfaction with the system, and this deters others from adopting it.

The trouble, according to a recent writer, is sometimes that the wrong type of vehicle has been adopted, sometimes that those in charge of the service are incompetent. In one case, we are told, the adoption of electric trucks by a large brewery has resulted in financial loss simply because the drivers' wages remain the same, and the men are unwilling to handle twice or thrice as many barrels as before. Hence they see to it that the speed of the service is not improved.

In another instance where electric traction failed to satisfy it was found that the motors were improperly wired. Drivers of motor trucks frequently run them and feel about enough nervousness to the mere injury of the mechanism. The users of all this is that those who intend to use motor delivery should have comprehensive service. Different types of vehicle will be required for light deliveries with frequent stops and for heavy loads with long hauls. Changes in mechanical traction often enables a manufacturer to handle a larger volume of trade, and this more than offsets the increased running expense.

LOVE'S TRAFFIC.

When the young chief, Money-maker,
First beheld the Willow-blossom,
Painted, clad in softest doeskin
Slim and beautiful he thought her,

Long and long the chieftain sought her;
Willow-blossom, swift as lightning,
Vanishing like April rainbow,
Led the chieftain vainly roaming.

Money-maker, in the gloaming,
Sought the Willow-blossom's mother;
Offered blankets, rings and bracelets—
Pony, loans, for one small maiden.

Then the chieftain, lightly laden,
Homeward bore the Willow-blossom;
All enamored of her blushing.
Little cared that he was cheated.

Snows have come and snows retreated;
Willow-blossom fairly waddles
Like the paleface water chicken—
Grown too solid for her pony.

Money-maker counts his money,
Buys a ride for Willow-blossom
On the railroad's new smoke waggon,
And the company feels cheated.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Zigzag Trail

It Was Difficult, but He Conquered It

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"She came out of Cox's store, got on her pony and went a-kiting for the west bank of the crick. I followed her a little ways, thinking she was a tenderfoot, and I'll be blamed if she didn't turn spang into Zigzag trail and disappear!"

Hamp Tetlow looked around at his companions gathered about the mess table in the bunk house at the Twin Star ranch.

"Zigzag trail, eh?" repeated Jink Prole, helping himself to another hot biscuit.

"Yes."

"Have you ever traveled that devious route?" pursued Jink in his deliberate way.

"No, but I've heard tell that since the landslide there ain't footing there for man or beast."

"No more there ain't," returned Jink, buttering his ninth hot biscuit. "That's why I reckoned you was dreaming when you said you saw a girl and pony disappear down the trail."

"It was bright moonlight and I saw her plain as day," returned Hamp, undisturbed by Jink's skepticism. "Besides, I went back to the store and asked Dan Cox who she was."

"And who is she?" demanded a dozen eager voices.

"Dan said he didn't know; said she never asked for mail, and that, although she bought plenty of supplies from him, he didn't know any more about her than he did at first. Been around these parts about four weeks Dan says."

Hamp Tetlow might have continued to discourse upon his chance encounter with the strange girl, but his companions were more interested in discussing the approaching roundup than listening to him.

Perhaps he would have risked their ridicule and described the singular beauty of the girl, but he had little desire to talk to empty air and presently forget the stranger.

One man among those at the table listened to Hamp's story, and because he was new to the country Bob Deering asked questions about Zigzag trail.

Jink Prole answered the questions readily and went so far as to tell the newcomer that somewhere along the abandoned trail was the tumble-down cottage of a sheep herder, who had left the country at the time when cattle had crowded the sheep from the ranges.

The next day Bob Deering was sent in search of a lost steer.

His search led him down the west bank of Red Spider creek, and eventually he came to the point where there were traces of an old trail that zigzagged down the canyon and disappeared in a heap of broken rocks and earth.

"Zigzag trail!" he exclaimed, bending down to examine the grass grown way.

His ten years of cattle ranching since college days had made the signs of earth and sky as an open book to him.

For the trained eye there was much to be read in the old trail.

"The lost critter went this way," mused Bob, "and the girl goes this way too. Why? There isn't a shroud thing on this trail except the hut—I have Jink's word for that—so the girl must have been bound for the hut.

"I scent a mystery, and, as duty calls me to hunt for the stray critter, here goes!"

Bob Deering left his horse and scrambled along the trail that zigzagged among the rocks in the most puzzling manner. So intricate were its windings that Bob presently found himself scrambling on to the main trail again and staring his horse in the face.

"Daniel, if you laugh at me I'll sell you to a soap factory," panted Bob as Daniel resumed his nipping of the wayside grass. "I've certainly got to get on to the right trail if it takes me all day. I missed a turn somewhere."

Bob turned about and once more scrambled along the trail. At an egg shaped rock he paused and studied the ground, and then, plunging through a thicket of mesquite, he found himself on a well worn trail that circled the shoulder of the hill and gradually led upward.

Occasionally he stooped to study the ground, and each pause only strengthened his belief that he was on the right trail of the lost steer.

"Hands up," came a sharp voice, and instinctively Bob's hands went over his head with quick discretion.

When he could discover the source of the unexpected holdup on Zigzag trail Bob found himself confronting a beautiful dark eyed young woman, who leveled a pistol at him with each steady hand.

She was the most beautiful creature he had ever seen; Bob was sure of that—jet black hair waving about shell pink ears, creamy skin, a pair of wonderful eyes, sometimes black, occasionally almost green. She wore a riding skirt of khaki and a white shirt waist. Her head was bare.

"Well," asked Bob pleasantly, "is it my money or my life?"

The girl laughed nervously, and then tears filled her eyes.

"It's neither one, if you will only go away," she answered in a pleading tone.

"Of course, if you wish it, only I am looking for a stray steer. Perhaps you have seen such a one. It has the twin star brand"—

He stopped short, for the girl's face had turned scarlet and then white. The hands that held the guns wavered.

"I've seen it," she said at last in a rather shaky voice.

"Where is it?" he asked quickly.

The girl's face went very white, and she leaned against a tree for support, the pistols hanging limply from her hands.

"It's—dead!" she said at last.

"Dead?" he echoed, puzzled by her agitation.

"We killed it. We needed it for food. I suppose we will hang for it," she said, with a desperate attempt at calmness, although Bob could see that she was panic stricken.

He sat down on a stone and clasped his sun browned hands around his knee. His broad hat lay on the ground, and the wind ruffled his crisp, fair hair.

"I hope you will pardon me. I'm not a bit curious, but I can see that you are in trouble of some sort. This is a lonesome country to be in when old man Trouble hikes along, so perhaps I can help you out. You may place perfect confidence in me."

The girl studied his face with her wonderful, changing eyes. Then, with a little catch of the breath, she said:

"If I tell you you must never betray my confidence."

"You may trust me," said Bob.

The girl drew a sharp breath.

"My father lies hidden in the hills yonder. He is a fugitive from justice. He killed a man. I came with him!"

Bob smothered an exclamation.

"What can I do to help you?" he asked quickly.

"Keep every one away and help me to get some supplies. Father is almost crazy with grief and remorse, and he is anxious to return and give himself up; but," she ended fiercely, "I have told him he must not—now! In the eyes of God he is innocent, and he should not be punished!"

"Thank you for the confidence you repose in me. I will do what I can to keep others away. Give me a list of things you need, and I will pack them here tonight."

Fifteen minutes later Bob Deering mounted his patient horse and rode about his business for the Red Star ranch.

After supper that night he rode over to Red Spider postoffice and astonished Dan Cox by purchasing a large quantity of supplies, including some fine cigars and a number of magazines and newspapers.

Bob read the papers while he waited for his packages, and when he finally turned into the trail along the creek his face was a study of mingled pleasure and regret.

The trip along Zigzag trail in the moonlight, with his supplies for the needy strangers, was no easy matter, and Bob was quite breathless when he reached the sheep herder's hut.

"Good news, Miss Greyson," he said after he had received her thanks and those of her aged, careworn father.

"Good news for us?" she asked incredulously.

He nodded and, pulling a newspaper from his pocket, held it to the light streaming from the doorway and read a paragraph that turned the current of their lives.

It appeared that the man whom James Greyson had struck in self defense had recovered and every effort was being made to discover the whereabouts of the missing financier and his beautiful daughter.

Bob Deering shared in their rejoicing, and it was he who helped them get away.

When they parted James Greyson held the young man's hand in his.

"The best ranch in the country for you whenever you say the word, Deering. Maybe you'll be getting married some day and settle down."

"Maybe," said Bob dreamily, for he was holding Helen's hand in his. "Maybe"—

His eyes met the splendid ones of the girl he had learned to love, and he read in them that there was no uncertainty before him.

He would be married some day, and to her!

And Hamp Tetlow never guessed why it was that Bob Deering was named him "Cupid."

Two Doctors Said He Had Consumption.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HIM.

Mrs. John Elliff, St. John's West, Ont., writes:—"My little boy was very bad with whooping cough and severe cold. I went to two doctors with him, and they said he had Consumption. I could get no relief for him, he would cough all night long, with a dry hacking cough.

I was persuaded to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and was surprised to see the first bottle did him good. I have had five bottles, and they cured him, he rests well at night now, and is well and hearty. If he gets a cold we always give him Pine Syrup and he is soon better. I did not think I could raise him, but I am thankful to say Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup saved him from being a consumptive."

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the earlier stages of throat and lung trouble, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge "Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is without an equal for all affections of the Throat and Lungs.

THE BASEBALL MASK.

It Was First Used in a Yale-Harvard Game in 1876.

Frederick Winthrop Thayer of Cohasset, Harvard '78, captain of the famous varsity nines of 1876, 1877 and 1878, was the inventor of the catcher's mask. The days when Thayer entered Harvard baseball differed somewhat from the present. A pitcher had to throw underhanded and end his throw with arm stretched out. Then that changed, and as a consequence the ball was thrown much more swiftly. Dr. Harold C. Ernst, a professor in the Medical school, was pitcher on the varsity nine, and James A. Tyng was catcher. They made a wonderful battery.

Thayer noticed that the more freedom given the pitcher the greater became the risk of the catcher. One day he let a few into the secret. He was going to make a mask. A few days before the Yale game of 1876 he came on the field with it. Save for the fact it was made more heavily, it was much similar to the masks in use today.

Thayer attached it to Jim Tyng's head, and from that moment the mask entered baseball. At first the players, other than those in the varsity, and the spectators were inclined to ridicule it, and it caused no end of comment when it was worn by Tyng at the Yale game that year. Harvard won, and two years later team after team adopted the mask.—Boston Herald.

Sorry He Asked.

"Did you read my speech?" asked Senator Sorghum.

"I did," replied the candid constituent, "in fact, I read it several times. The first time I wanted to learn what you had to say, and after that I kept trying to figure out, if possible, what the 'laughter' and 'applause' were about."

The Final Word.

"GOODBYE: We are just leaving the house."

Just before a journey when there are many last words to be said, final directions to be given and last minute details to be attended to, a telephone in the home is invaluable. By its aid a whole day's work is often compressed into a few minutes.

But a residence telephone is not for special occasions alone—it aids the housewife and lightens the burdens in a score of ways every day. In emergencies—and they are sure to arise some day—it is indispensable.

Manchester Hanging Is Unpopular With Mob.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Kelley, a youth nineteen years of age, was executed at Manchester yesterday morning while 5,000 men, women and children, who marched from Oldham, where he had lived, waited outside the prison gates. Their unscientific view of justice was that if the doomed man hanged, his accomplice ought also to meet the same fate. Kelley and an accomplice killed a bookdealer aged eighty years. Great sympathy was aroused for Kelley owing to his age. The crowd had been induced to march to Manchester with a view to rescuing Kelley.

The police, forewarned, were prepared to deal with them. Six hundred constables gathered in the vicinity of the prison. From the crowd came such cries as "You ought to hang none or both," and "One was as bad as the other." Then came three cheers for Kelley, execrations for Home Secretary McKenna, and finally some rag-time songs. No serious attempt was made to rescue Kelley. A few made a movement towards the prison gates, whereupon the police dispersed the mob. Five constables were slightly injured. When the tolling bell announced the fact that the execution was over there was no disturbance, and in a few minutes the pilgrimage back to Oldham began.

BIG CHANGES PLANNED.

Liquor Law Reforms In Quebec Exceed Expectations.

QUEBEC, Dec. 18.—Further details of the bill to amend the liquor license law indicate that the Government will go to greater lengths than at first stated. The proposals include:

The bar shall not open until 7.30 in the morning; shall remain closed on Dominion and Labor Days, and there shall be no delivery of liquor after closing hours, that is, stores after 11 p.m. weekdays and 7 o'clock Saturdays, will be prohibited from delivering orders even if they were placed before closing hours.

Another clause provides that liquors shall not be sold c.o.d. This will, to some extent, eliminate telephone orders.

Another striking clause prohibits statements in advertisement published in periodicals of any kind which claim that the liquor advertised is "beneficial to health and mind." The same applies to illustrations.

Must Check Trespassing.

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—Through a letter sent out at the instructions of the Attorney-General for Ontario the justices of the peace are having their attention called to the fact that during last year 132 persons were killed and 62 persons were injured in Ontario by being run down by railway trains while in the act of trespassing upon railway tracks.

The letter states that the need for protection of life demands the strict enforcement of the law against railway trespassing, which provides that "every person, not connected with the railway or employed by the company, who walks along the tracks thereof" shall incur a penalty not exceeding $10, recoverable upon summary conviction.

Lava Covered Hospital.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—The configuration of the coast of the Island of Ambrim, in New Hebrides group, was changed on the Dip Point or western side by the volcanic upheavals on Dec. 6, according to cablegrams received by the French Colonial Office from the Governor of New Caledonia.

Previous reports are confirmed relative to the formation of new craters in the island, which is volcanic in origin. Vast streams of lava overwhelmed the Presbyterian Hospital, which is controlled by the Presbyterian Churches of Canada and Australasia, while French and English business houses and native cocoa plantations were destroyed.

STORAGE INSPECTION.

George H. Bradbury, M.P., Has Bill For Coming Session.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—George H. Bradbury, Conservative member of Selkirk, Man., will introduce a bill into Parliament at the very earliest opportunity when the House opens in January, which is designed to put in operation a system of cold storage inspection. It will probably be amalgamated with the Government's cold storage measure.

Mr. Bradbury says his bill is based largely on legislation which has gone into effect in the United States, as well as other bills which are before other state legislatures. He has picked from each what he considers the best.

The feature of the bill will be the clause which absolutely prohibits the placing of fish in cold storage. Fish should not be frozen, says Mr. Bradbury. When it is frozen it is apt to be poisonous.

Still at Loggerheads.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, addressing the constituents in Northumberland yesterday, acknowledged that no progress had been made as yet in the direction of achieving a settlement of the Home Rule question by consent.

The Government, he said, actuated by a spirit of conciliation, has opened the door, but, instead of entering in and discussing terms, the Opposition persisted in staying outside and shouting in things at the window. Still, the door would continue to be open, and it would not be the fault of the Liberal party if a peaceful settlement was not reached.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you set both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

This tunic, long at the back, forms the train, which is lined with a frou-frou of lace. The central figure showed a draped gown of black charmeuse, embroidered with beads. The drapery, of white chiffon over the shoulders, ending in a tassel at the back, gives the effect of a shawl. On the right is a graceful frock of soft orange-coloured taffeta, draped under a garland of Saxe-blue roses; the encircling tunic, caught up high on one side of the skirt, is formed of ochre lace.

TRIED TO WRECK TRAIN.

Miscreants Put Ties Between Rails Near a Bridge.

ST. THOMAS, Dec. 18.—A mysterious attempt was made to wreck No. 91, a heavy G.T.R. Wabash freight, half a mile east of New Sarum, about eight miles from here, Tuesday midnight.

There is a bridge 125 feet big over Catfish Creek, and the track had been undermined and the ties taken out at a point six feet from the approach to the bridge. Two new ties had been placed with their ends under the rails, the other ends sticking up together between the rails in such a way that the westbound freight would be derailed.

There has been no trouble on the road and there are no suspicions as to the perpetrators. Detectives are working on the case.

J. J. Hartley for Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

At the urgent request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914. Being born and lived my whole life in Peterborough, and a whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the city.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure.

I will do my utmost to keep down the ever-increasing rate of taxation, consistent with the needs of the growing municipality.

I may say that I am in favour of municipal ownership, and in favour of having all city work done by our own people, instead of bringing in outsiders to do it. I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended. I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being chairman of that board for two years. I was also chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honour to elect me Mayor of our city, I will do my best to serve you to the very best of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

GILLESPIE for MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro:

Ladies and Gentlemen—At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Alderman for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the Municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my success in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval, I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support, in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE

Your Support and Influence is kindly asked for

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1913

SALE PRICE IS FIXED AT SUM OF $48,000

That is Price at Which Otonabee Power Company Would Sell Out to the City—Will Also Supply Customers.

A STAR CHAMBER SESSION

A special meeting of the City Council was held on Wednesday evening from which the press was excluded. It is presumed that the civic legislators dealt with the following communication, containing a proposal from the Otonabee Power Company:

December 16, 1913.

The Municipal Corporation,
Of the City of Peterborough,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Gentlemen,—Owing to the fact that the Otonabee Company's franchise expires on the 1st of January, 1914, and that your Council have seen fit, not only to refuse to submit to the people a by-law for its renewal, but have also ordered that company to remove its poles and wires from the streets of your city, which will leave over 600 of your ratepayers without light and power, we, the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, beg to make the following application to your Council:

Under By-Law 1111, it is provided that no company having poles or wires on the streets of the City of Peterborough shall sell or lease to any other company having similar rights, its poles or wires without the consent of the City Council. We do not admit that this by-law applies to the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, but, without prejudice, we beg to propose the following temporary solution of the difficulty:

You claim the right to expropriate all the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, in the City of Peterborough, and are proceeding with that end in view. If you should purchase this property there is not the slightest doubt that you will need a great deal, if not all, of the Otonabee Power Company's system, which, if torn down by us, will simply have to be rebuilt by you.

We, therefore, ask you to consent to a sale, by the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, of its distribution system and sub-station, and all its property within the limits of the City of Peterborough, to the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, at the price of $48,000.00 which, we understand, is a reasonable value for the same, and we, the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, undertake that, in the event of your expropriating and paying for the whole of our system, to sell you such part of that system that has been acquired under this sale, from the Otonabee system, at the same price we paid for same.

The Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, will also undertake to supply all the customers of the Otonabee system, from the 1st of January, 1914, until such time as the city takes over such of its plant, at the same rates and on the same terms as the said customers are now being supplied by the Otonabee Company.

We beg to point out to you that this seems to be the fairest solution of the difficulty in which your city and ourselves are placed. If you proceed to order the Otonabee Company's poles off the streets, we will take them off, and, as we have before pointed out, will leave several hundreds of your citizens without light or power.

We also beg to inform you that if the Otonabee's system is removed off the streets that the Peterborough Company will immediately proceed, under its franchise which is still intact, to erect poles and wires to serve these people, and you will have to take over these new poles and wires, which will certainly cost more than the purchasing of the Otonabee system.

If you contemplate delay or refusal to allow us to erect these poles, you will simply leave a large body of your citizens without light or power, and they will be the people who will suffer most.

This proposition is made you, without prejudice to any right that the Peterborough Power Company may have, to purchase the Otonabee system without the consent of your Council.

We would be obliged if you would immediately call a special meeting of your Council, to consider this matter, when we would be glad to wait before you and discuss the means of carrying it out. We will also be willing to supply you with an inventory of the plant of the Otonabee Power Company, that is to be purchased by the Peterborough Company, with our values on the same, so that you may have it checked up with your own engineers, in order to satisfy you that the price Peterborough is offering for the same, is a fair, reasonable and just one, not only to ourselves and the Otonabee shareholders, but also the city, if it eventually takes it over.

Yours truly,

The Otonabee Power Company, Ltd.,
(Signed) W. G. Ferguson,
President.

The Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited.
(Signed) A. B. Colville,
Vice-President.

The Examiner was informed today, that by virtue of an old act, still extant, the City Council is empowered to extend the company's franchise for a maximum period of one year.

It is understood that Council will meet on Monday evening next for further discussion of the subject, and that in all probability an arrangement will be made whereby the franchise will be extended from month to month until such time as the city may be in a position to supply power to the customers now served by the Otonabee Power Company.

INTERESTING RELICS FOUND

Stone Pipe Bowl, Fantastically Carved is Picked Up by Duck Hunters on the Shore of Chemong Lake

HUNDREDS OF YEARS OLD

Mr. Dan Whetung, Jr., of Chemong Indian Village, showed the Examiner two interesting souvenirs recently picked up. One of these is the bowl of an Indian pipe made of stone and very cleverly carved in the shape of a man's head. The eyes, nose and ears are easily distinguishable while the wide open mouth constitutes the place for storing the fragrant weed. This interesting relic, evidently hundreds of years old, was found on the shore of Chemong Lake, and its discovery was entirely due to the extremely low water which left bare a section of the bottom of the lake that is usually covered. One of the residents of Indian Village came across it while duck-hunting. The other souvenir is the stone step of a pipe, found at Buckhorn Lake. The interesting relics may be seen at The Examiner Office by any one who is interested.

A "MYSTERY PICTURE," SAID TO BE AMPLIFICATION OF AN ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPH—THE FLEET OF DEATH CLEARING THE SOO RIVER INTO LAKE HURON—The origin of this picture is not known. It is a "mystery picture." In this fleet, beating southward, presumably outside the Detour in Lake Huron, are vessels that never reached port. They were overwhelmed in the great disaster of November 8th, and subsequently enlarged to give the striking result shown above. The Acadian, Wexford, and Hydrus, may be seen, and in the background, indistinctly, the shadow of the bow of the ill-fated James Carruthers. This was the fleet of death. Only the crew of the Acadian escaped.

IS GRATEFUL TO THE TWO BANDS

Ald. Johnston Thanks Salvation Army and Maple Leaf Musicians.

Ald Johnston desires to thank the Salvation Army and Maple Leaf Bands for their generous support in making last night's celebration so successful. Both organisations gave their services freely and their playing was all the more appreciated. It was a big crowd that waited on the main streets to welcome the new offering to Mazda and the Band music was most appropriate to the occasion.

MAGNETITE LAMPS FLOODED CITY WITH THEIR BRILLIANCY

Current Was Officially Turned Into the Circuits and Streets Gleamed With a Light Approximate to a Noonday Effect--Big Crowd of Citizens Welcomed the New System.

HYDRO POWER MAKES INITIAL BOW

Big Ben in the market hall tower was striking eight bells last night when the new ornamental magnetite arc lamps responded to the button which Mayor Bradburn figuratively pressed and the main streets were flooded with a brilliancy that literally held the breath of the throng of citizens who had gathered in the vicinity of Charlotte and George streets.

Then, after a moment's silence the hush was broken and on all sides you heard expressions of delight. "Splendid," "Eh, what," "Jove, that's great," and similar ejaculations sprang spontaneously from the lips of hundreds, while others less effusive, gazed admiringly up and down George street, and away out Charlotte to the Grand Trunk station.

Red Letter Day.

Score Wednesday, December 17, 1913, with a red stroke marking the birth of the Hydro-Electric system of municipal lighting in Peterborough. Let it also be remembered as the date upon which the brilliancy of the magnetite lamps burst upon the city, heralding the passing of the old flaming arcs which a generation ago were regarded as a wonder when they crowded out the old street gas lamps.

Ceremony Was Brief.

The actual ceremony last night was quite brief. Shortly before eight o'clock three cabs in which were the fathers of the city drove from the city hall to the Charlotte street corner on George street. They were escorted by the Salvation Army band who were out in almost full force.

Four counts of eight o'clock had sounded when the lights flashed along the entire west circuit and a second after the east side lamps glowed.

Mayor Bradburn rose and said "Ladies and gentlemen, we are now looking upon the best lighting system in Canada." This effusion was greeted by a cheer, and the Mayor called upon Alderman Johnston, who he said had given a great deal of time and attention to the work as chairman of the Power Committee.

"We are procuring a benefit that will help in saving your dollars and cents in lighting and heating. It may take some time, but as long as the Council remains faithful it will be completed. Peterborough has one of the grandest lighting systems in Canada to-day."

Alderman Johnston eulogized the Hydro-Electric idea, stating that it had placed electric power in the hands of the people and taken it from monopolies.

Inspected the Line.

This concluded the ceremony. The City Fathers drove over the streets on which the magnetite lamps have been installed. They were accompanied by the Salvation Army Band which surely distinguished themselves last night. Down at the sub-station, in the building formerly occupied by Mr. Rollie Wilson as a machine shop the procession halted. Mayor Bradburn called for three cheers for the band, and the latter responded with cheers and a "tiger." They played "Auld Lang Syne," and marched to Simcoe and Hunter streets, where they presented a fine programme of music.

The Mayor and aldermen examined the sub-station and returned up town.

Lights Are Splendid.

The magnetite lights are splendid, and more than live up to all the good things spoken of them while the installation work was in progress. The effect looking north from the C.P.R. station is a glorious one, and may well be styled an Edison Lane. The tungsten clusters in front of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's office on George street are a dull glow beside the soft, white transplendency of the new lights.

To appreciate the new system you have to see it for yourself.

The fact is that the whole city was delighted with the efficiency and beauty of the lamps.

"Toronto has nothing on us," was heard frequently, and that should be sufficient.

"Those are the best lights I have ever seen," said another.

"Toronto has nothing like that," and so on. The big crowd went home deeply impressed, and visitors are bound to congratulate the city upon the progressiveness which is behind the present lighting scheme.

DEBT OF ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH IS WIPED OUT

Bazaar Was Wound Up Last Night at Enjoyable Gathering

Last evening a meeting of the workers and others at the Bazaar was held at St. George's Church in the school room. Nearly all the boothholders and friends who assisted at the Bazaar were present and the evening was spent in a jolly manner, with songs, recitations and addresses.

As usual on these occasions Miss Quartermaine, Mr. Ward, and Mr. O'Flynn, and others assisted in the programme, and Mr. Dickenson acted as organist.

To the great delight of the hard-working members of St. George's Church and their friends, who were present, Alderman Gordon, Alderman Gillespie, one of the candidates for Mayor, ex-Alderman Robert Hicks, one of the candidates for Water Commissioners, and J. J. Turner, Jr., one of the members of the Board of Education, were present and gave addresses, which appeared to be extremely well received and acceptable to the audience.

Mr. Price and his congregation deserve great credit for the success they had at the Bazaar, and it was stated last evening that the whole debt of the church had been wiped out, and all other liabilities of the congregation had been satisfied.

It might be mentioned as an indication of the feeling of the people of the south end, that when ex-Alderman J. J. Turner mentioned that the day might not be far off when the south end and the city would join hands, there was loud applause.

IMMIGRATION HAS INCREASED BY 6 PER CENT.

Total Number of New-comers During the First Eight Months of the Present Year Was 340,899

MORE FOREIGNERS IN

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—The immigration figures for the first eight months of the fiscal year show an increase of six per cent. in the number of arrivals as compared with the same period last year. The total number of arrivals was 340,899. Last year for the same period, the number who entered Canada was 321,978. One satisfactory sign in connection with the immigration to Canada this year has been the big increase in the number of foreign arrivals. During eight months of last year 88,210 immigrants other than British and United States subjects came in. This year the figures have increased to 122,166. There has been a slight growth in the volume of the movement Canadawards from the Mother country. Last year the arrivals totalled 134,913. They have grown to 139,461. A market decrease in number of arrivals from the United States is noted in the monthly report. The figures have fallen from 108,035 to 86,272. The United States' arrivals this year, it is said, include an unusually large number of German origin.

ENGLISH COMMENT

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., Dec. 18.—(Special cable.)—The Daily News to-day editorially comments on the manner in which the free trade propositions are being pushed in Canada, and remarks that it is extremely doubtful whether the Borden government can afford to face a general election without at least a bid for support in the free trade west. The News says: Economically the example of the United States under Wilson tariff changes is likely to soon force Canadian statesmen to those paths of common sense and common justice, from which the power of monopoly, masquerading as imperialism, has so long and unhappily forced them.

WANT TO SAW-OFF TWO PROTESTS

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—There arrived in the capital this morning a deputation, including Senator Donnelly, George Clare, M.P. for South Waterloo, William Weichel, M.P. for North Waterloo, and Hugh Clarke, M.P. for South Bruce, in connection with the protest which it has been announced will be made against the election of Reuben Truax, Liberal, in South Bruce. An attempt is being made to induce the Liberals to consent to a saw-off on the South Bruce protest and on the protest which has been in progress in Chateauguay, where a Conservative, James Morris, was returned, but there will be no saw-off. The Chateauguay protest will be pressed to its conclusion by the Liberals.

HAVELOCK MAN PULLED A REVOLVER

HAVELOCK, Dec. 19. — Messrs. Matthison, Joyce and Duff, Justices of the Peace, heard the case yesterday, which developed from a fight on Saturday night last. As a result Allan Defoe was fined $15 and costs, amounting to $19.20, for carrying a concealed weapon; Horace King was fined $20 and $8.35 costs for assaulting Defoe, and James Toms was taxed $9 for aiding and abetting King. It seems that a week ago Saturday night there was a scrap in which King and Defoe continued an old feud, but the argument was not satisfactorily concluded. On Saturday night it was taken up again, and when Defoe saw a number after him he drew a revolver. It was taken from him by a citizen before any injury was done.

EARLY CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

"Do your Christmas shopping early" is an admonition which is not in danger of losing its effectiveness through frequency of reiteration. This is sentimentary to that portion of the public which appreciates the many-sided advantage of timely buying and puts it into practice. Anticipation of the rush—which means an appreciable lessening of the rush—has its humanitarian and practical aspects.

In the harassed salespeople, whose lot is made much harder by an unnecessary last-hour scramble, is one argument against dilatoriness, the one which should appeal to the humanitarian side of the shopping public, and undoubtedly does to a great extent. The practical side of the early shopping plea speaks more strongly than the one based on sympathy and consideration, nor is it new in its presentation. The purchaser has everything to gain by making the shopping round before the inevitable crush. In the first place, he finds the store stocks fresh and undepleted. He finds salespeople with time to accord him the attention he wishes.

For the timely shopper there is leisure to consider the quality and suitability of purchases. There is even time for exchange if maturer deliberation commends its advisability. If delivery from the store to the home is desired, the early purchaser is assured of its carrying out correctly, whereas even the best equipped and managed delivery system cannot always hold up under the Christmas eve avalanche of work. Friends of the salespeople, merchants and the express companies urge early shopping, each from a different standpoint, and, it has been apparent in recent years, with good effect. But there is still room for improvement.

THE NEW STREET LIGHTS.

The "House of a Thousand Candles" is as nothing compared to the splendid blaze of clear white light that flashed into daylight glow in the business streets last night, when the new magnetite street lamps were turned on. The City Council has certainly enlightened the people in the matter of illuminating the business section of the city. Nothing but praise is to be given to the quality and distribution of the new lights. Not only are they the last thing in effective light but, the mounting is elegant. The uniform hoods are in good taste artistically, and while the light is softened it is not lessened for nothing could be better than the illuminating effect.

So much for the excellence of the lights, but what about the cost? It stands to reason that the lights cost more than the ordinary street arc lights; but it is to be hoped that the increased cost is not in direct ratio to the increased quality and quantity of light—there are about ten magnetite lamps to one of the old arc lights, and each light seems to be ten times brighter than the old ones. What is to be naturally expected is, that civic expenditure in this regard will be increased. In the case of pavements, when the people see what an improvement they are on the old mud streets, there will be demand for their extension that will, in turn mean, if met, a large demand on our financial resources; so, likewise, other streets seeing the brilliant results of the new lighting on the business streets will no doubt make demand for an extension. The people voted for the Hydro-Electric in the belief that they would get better and cheaper light, so that if they are to get cheaper light they will demand that it be better, and this may lead to a demand for better lights, as the magnitite lights certainly are. This suggests that while the city fathers are giving us better light they might enlighten us still further and give us some idea what this admitted advantage is going to cost. As matters stand the City Council and the Light and Power Company, though they may be rather far apart in valuation estimates, are running neck and neck in the last lap of the race which ends for both on December 31st — the electricity is supplied by the Light and Power Company as one of the last acts of its expiring contract—both go out in a blaze of glorious light.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE FISH COMBINE.

Criticism is sometimes useful. It occasionally does have an effect. The Ontario Government, for example, shown by documentary evidence in the Legislature to have discriminated against local Canadian fishermen in favour of the fish trust (an appendage to the American trust), exhibits signs of bowing before the sweep of criticism and of adopting a new policy towards the fisheries of the Province.

There are rumours apparently inspired, that the Government, instead of merely looking after their own narrow sphere of public institutions (a selfish policy which whenever enunciated, led to 'Province-wide objection) is now going to try to secure relief for the general consumer, either by prohibiting the export of fish or by taking over the fishing industry and conducting it as a Government enterprise.

Why is it that Mr. Hanna is the Minister who figures in the reports on the subject? As long as it merely was a matter of supplying fish for public institutions the matter naturally came under the Provincial Secretary's jurisdiction. But if the Government really is going to make a step forward in the interests of the general public, why is it not announced and explained by the Minister charged with the administration of the fisheries—the Hon. Dr. Reaume? Is the latter's incompetence so pronounced and the record of the Department up to the present so unfavourable that another Minister is to take over his work? And what about Mr. Hanna's fitness for the post? Is his record in the administration of the Central Prison industries with the famous Taylor Scott contract and contribution re-assuring?

Moreover, the people of the Province should not be too confident that as consumers they will receive benefit by any action in conection with the fisheries undertaken by this Government. They should be wise and not believe anything until they see it. This instance may possibly be another case of "when the cat's away the mice will play." Last year during the absence of Sir James Whitney, Mr. Hanna spoke favourably of tax reform, and it looked like clear walking in the Special Assessment Committee for the proposed change. Sir James Whitney's return, however, closed all the partially-opened doors, re-imprisoned the forces of progress and—put an end to tax reform for the time being. In one speech he blocked all action, and the Conservative members of the Committee as automatically as a clock, voted against the introduction of assessment reform. Who knows but that Sir James, when he returns from this trip, will have even less mercy on the consumer of fish than on the owner of a house and will cancel all projected developments looking to the relief of the housewife.

AN AGE OF ADVERTISING.

If you want anything, advertise for it. A few years ago it was the popular belif that advrtising was only good for department stores and patent medicines. If you had told a man in Guelph twenty years ago to advertise for a wife he would have looked sadly into your face, and muttered something about an institution on the hill at Hamilton. But the up-to-date man, when he wants a wife, advertises. It has its advantages.—Guelph Mercury.

WHAT THEY THINK.

The following are some of the sentiments expressed by speakers at the annual meeting of the Dominion Grange, in regard to the Ontario Department of Education:

"We are experiencing the worst administration of the Education Department ever inflicted on advanced civilization. It is red-tapeism run mad."—Mr. James McEwing of Wellington.

"Every rural Trustee in the Provinces should resign in protest at the way he is being used by the Administration." — Mr. John C. Divon of Moorefield.

"You can't talk to the horses in French or milk the cows in German."—Mr. John Hyatt of Westlake.

"We don't stand for a lower qualification of teachers, but for a better administration of the system." —Mr. E. C. Drury of Crown Hill.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-morrow will probably witness tactics similar in the stock market to those of to-day, which is due for irregular recovery. There is a change in sentiment which foreshadows improvement of a moderate character in prices until the end of the year. We think conservative purchases on reactions advisable. Unqualified statements are being made now that good securities are cheap at present rices.

Railroads would be bargains were it certain that the higher freight rates' request would be granted. Very seldom do we find pronounced reference to the big exports, the tendency toward lower living cost, the greater economies, being substituted for past inflation the accumulation, of idle money from contracting trade or the low prices based on return at which many high earning power securities are now selling. Yet all these points are facts. We urge buying standards stocks at present levels.

"ALL ALONG BROADWAY

(Written By Herbert Corey)

NEW YORK, Dec. 15. — Paul Thompson found two of his friends in a state of ornate disrepair the other day. They were weping upon each other's shoulders. Every now and then they kicked viciously at bartenders who sought to separate them.

"What's wrong?" asked Thompson.

One lifted a streaming countenance and fixed a pair of misty eyes in Mr. Thompson's general direction.

"Ain—ain—ain't it hell about poor old Columbus?" he sobbed.

"Huh?" said Mr. Thompson, in amazement.

"Puh—puh—poor ole Christopher Columbus," wept his friend. "Found this beautiful country—all full of forests and fields and mines and things—and when he got back to Spain they put him in cha—cha—chains!"

Victor Watson, on information and belief, alleges that Frank Thompson, son of the late Denman Thompson, is singularly unspotted by contact with this more or less sordid world. The other night Thompson was approached upon the street by an old friend of his father.

"Ah, sir," said the stranger, many's the time I've seen your dear old dad play in 'The Old Homestead.' Great but actor that ever lived, sir. Don't deny it."

Mr. Thompson said mildly that he would not deny it.

"He and me," said the stranger, earnestly, "were the greatest pals."

Mr. Thompson was politly interested. The stranger continued at some length. Then he bade Thompson good-bye."

"Er," said he after shaking hands, "I hate to mention it—but could you slip me a buck?"

"A buck?" queried Mr. Thompson vaguely. "Certainly—but how much is a buck?"

"Three dollars," said the stranger.

Irvin Cobb produced a characteristic story the other day. He said that in a small Southern town two negroes kept two restaurants on the same street. One day a large, furbottomed white man entered one restaurant.

"Give me," said he, "about a dozen of your best oysters—and see that they're fresh. And a plate of ham, and long about three mutton chops with some bacon. And then a little fried broiler and some apple pie and coffee. And be quick!"

When he had finished he took out a long, keen, glittering clasp knife and began to pick at the counter with it.

"This other nigger," said he, "down the street—he don't run much of a restaurant, does he?"

"No, suh," said the proprietor. "He suhtainly does not. That niggah he run erbout as triflin a restaurant as I evah did hear of."

"I thought so" said the white man. "I went into that restaurant last night and eat about the same sort of a meal I did in your place, and that nigger had the impudence to charge me a quarter for it. And so I just naturally cut off his ears and made him fry 'em in his own pan."

"Mah Lordy!" said the proprietor.

"Now," said the white man, turning a glare on the proprietor, "how much do I owe you?"

"Um," said the proprietor, "Let's see. You had oysters, and ham and chops and bacon and a fried chicken and pie and coffee—let's call it a dime."

LOVE OF GOSSIP.

One of the chief characteristics of the human race is inquisitiveness—not so much about things and places and ideas as about each other. Every proper person is a born gossip, and the accomplished scandal monger is always welcome—providing, of course, his scandal is about others. You can test this at any time by considering who are the people you like best to meet, and who are always surrounded by the greatest number of idle acquaintances. Invariably you must be forced to the conclusion they are those who have made a business of acquiring information about others and retailing their knowledge in various dressings. This love of gossip is further revealed in the kind of books which claim the widest appreciation. You will find that these books are not poetry, drama, science or philosophy. They are novels, memoirs, diaries, intimate histories, recollections, letters — all of them essential gossip (and sometimes scandal) appealing by their power to attract the peeping sense which exists in all of us.

Going to the blackboard the teacher wrote this sentence; "The horse and the cow was in the stable."

"Now, children," she said, "there is something wrong with that sentence. Who can correct it and tell why it is wrong?"

One small boy waved his hand excitedly and the teacher called upon him.

"It's wrong," he said with importance. "It ought to be 'The cow and the horse was in the stable,' 'cos ladies always ought to go first."

LAURIER AND DEMOCRACY

Nothing could have been farther from Sir Wilfrid Laurier's purpose, as the guest of the Literary and Scientific Society of University College at its annual banquet, than to perpetrate such a solecism as to introduce party politics into his speech; it does not follow at all that the speech was not a stimulus to Liberalism in the highest and best sense of that term. It was a consummate plea for democracy in the State, beginning with a wide view of its historical evolution and ending with a stirring appeal to his student audience to rely on it in practice as a safe political principle.

The best of the Greek States was Attica, but though it was democratic in form it was only an oligarchy of freemen resting on the foundation of slavery. Rome was still less democratic than Greece, for the same and other reasons. In the Middle Ages feudalism, the prevailing institutional organization, was characterised by over-lordship, dominating oath-bound retainers and helpless serfs. The French Revolution did less for the development of democracy than it should, probably would, have done, but for the meteoric career of Napoleon Bonaparte as the all-but conqueror of Europe. Only in Britain was steady evolutionary progress made, and for this reason the only really democratic countries in the world to-day are the United Kingdom, with its over-seas Dominions, an dthe United States, made up at the outset of British colonies, each with a Legislature of its own.

With obviously heartfelt emotion Sir Wilfrid warred his adolescent hearers that only in the spirit of true democracy can this Dominion grapple successfully with its inevitable problems. Social evils must be remedied; militarism must not be permitted to become rampant; "greedy men" must not be allowed to take "undue tolls and undue profits" from their fellow-men; corporations and combinations of corporations are useful for reducing the cost of production, but they must be regulated when they seek to restrict trade, corner commodities, and fix prices one way to the producer and another way to the consumer.

Labour's struggle to secure a fair share of what it produces must be treated on true democratic lines, so that for "strikes" may be substituted some better means of enabling the labourers to vindicate their rights.

To develop industrial training as part of public education is one of the tasks of democracy, and the greatest of all the problems with which it has to grapple is the substitution of "peace on earth and good-will to men" for the horrors, the burdens, and the sufferings caused by war.

Never before in Toronto has there been delivered a nobler address to a more appreciative audience, which embraced academicians of all grades from freshman to President, and included many distinguished and some venerable alumni. In spite of differences of age, rank, and experience, all were alike moved by th classic form and lofty thought of the distinguished French-Canadian statesman.

SHOULD SHE BE GONE?

Should she be gone, you'd find that home,
Ev'n though it might be plain and small,
Would lack a something that should come
As sunbeams through the shutters fall.

Should she be gone you'd find the vine
She trained to meet the morning sun
Would some other way entwine,
And not as she would have it done.

Should she be gone, the table spread
Would not be just so square and neat.
For other hands would care instead,
And save some steps of tired feet.

Should she be gone, the children's noise,
Which to her was music grand,
Would by others in the house
Be checked, but not by mother's hand.

Should she be gone, the little spots,
On table cloth, or anywhere,
That had been made by little tots,
Would be to other ones a care.

Should she be gone, the bed-time pillow
Would not be so clean and smooth.
For she would make it like a billow,
As it were, to rock and soothe.

Should she be gone, the little bird
That carols when she comes around
Would lose some tones that we had heard,
And give to us another, sound.

Should she be gone, the empty chair
Could ne'er be filled by anyone,
For as we sat around her there.
Her smiles and patience were like sun.

Should she be gone, 'tis hard to say,
Wives and mothers fill such space,
As makes this world worth while to stay,
What could we do, who could replace,
Should she be gone?

—J. L. Standart.

OH, WHAT A SLAM!

Six years later he returns. His sweetheart of former years has married. They meet at a party. She has changed; between dances the recognition takes place.

"Let me see," she muses, with her fan beating a tattoo on her pretty hand, "was it you or your brother who was my old sweetheart?"

"Really, I don't know; probably my father."

Police Will See If Youthful Prisoners Are Involved in Other Thefts

The two young fellows, McClellan and Jamieson, who pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing $100 worth of goods, mostly jewelery,, from R. C. Braund's store, and a small amount of money from N. Routley's grocery, came before Magistrate Dumble this morning. They were remanded for a week. In the meantime an investigation into other robberies will be held, and an effort made to see if the young men in custody were connected with any other offences.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the boys, and Mr. V. J. McElderry conducted the prosecution in the absence of Crown Attorney Wood.

The meeting was held in the Town Hall, Lindsay.

THE STENOGRAPHER'S ROMANCE

"Nothing to do but work," sighed the young woman who taps a typewriter in a big office, and who discreetly alters the weird grammar of the boss in transcribing his dictation.

"I used to think it would be the grandest thing in the world to be independent and have my own money," she continued, rubbing the wrinkle between her brows, "but now sometimes I wonder if it wouldn't be nice to have the responsibility on somebody else's broad, 'comfy' shoulders, even though I had to wheedle the price of a new dress."

"A man gets just as tired as a woman," said the credit man. "Just as tired—only he knows there's no use thinking about it, because he's got to keep it up for ever. You women always think you can marry some day and have things different."

"Now, isn't that just what a man thinks?" queried the stenographer, apparently addressing her typewriter. "He never dreams but that every girl has a lot of beaux waiting around for her just to pick out one of 'em and settle down. Say, Mr. Man, if there's any man on earth hankering to marry me, or one who could be persuaded to endow me with his worldly goods, he hasn't made himself conspicuous up to date. I'm in this business for life just as much as you are, and I'm just as scared of grey hairs and wrinkles as you are, only more so. Who wants an old woman for a stenographer?"

Too Shy, Says She.

"You ought to shine up to the men a little more," advised thecredit man, who, being safely married, felt that he could speak freely.

"They're all too shy and distant," she answered. "Where am I to get close enough to any even to be fairly friendly with 'em?

"I'm not bad looking. I'm intelligent, pretty well informed in a general way, can do a thinking or talking act, and dress neatly. I'm domestic by nature and love children. I could love a man. But none of these excellent qualifications seems to attract.

"Once upon a time I was rash enough to invite a man to come up to Sunday evening tea. He came and sat on the edge of a chair and pulled out his watch every fifteen minutes. After ten he ran off, saying he had to go to church. I suppose he had some other girl he wanted to take there. Anyway, he didn't invite me to go with him."

"Perhaps you're better off not being married," mused the credit man. "You never know how a man'll turn out. It's a gamble. And being the wife of a poor man is no cinch. My wife works awfully hard. I know she gets pretty tired."

C.P.R. DANCE OPENED NEW FREIGHT SHEDS

Over One Hundred Couples Had Enjoyable Time as Guests of Local Employees

The new freight sheds at the end of Charlotte Street were the scene of a brilliant function last night when the employees of the C.P.R. held a splendid dance. There were more than a hundred couples present, and a delightful informality prevailed throughout the evening that added greatly to the success of the affair. The floor space was ample for the large company of dancers, and the floor itself was well waxed, presenting a smooth surface that made dancing a real pleasure.

In the office at the north of the building were the cloak rooms, and in one of the larger rooms, tables and cards were provided. These were in constant use by those who preferred a quiet game to the more exhausting pleasure of the dancing that was entered into with such spirit by most of the guests.

The music was provided by the Grand Opera House orchestra. Their offering was splendid, the programme including the latest dance tunes, and the choicest of the more classical waltze and two-step. As well as these dances, seevral varieties of barn dances were arranged for, and were participated in with zest.

The decorations were beautiful. The large hall was adorned with numberless flags and streamers. These, combined with the bright costumes of the members of the fair sex present, made the dance a brilliant scene.

The local employees are to be congratulated on the success of the affair, which very fittingly marked the opening of the new freight sheds, which are themselves one of the many evidences of this City's prosperity and progress.

Jordan Bros., the local florists, gave a button-hole bouquet to all of the freight shed and office staff.

Among those present were: Mr. W. J. Wren, Superintendent, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Dodd, Mr. Jas. Skinner, Mr. A. G. Carruthers, Mr. and Mrs. J. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. W. WAS ON THE WAY.

Speaking of the kids again here is one that was told by Charles A. Smith, of New York, the other day when the conversation drifted to the rising generation.

Some time ago an esteemed citizen made a business call at the home of an acquaintance, the Congressman said, and while waiting for the head of the house to come into the parlour he started to make friends with the 8-year-old son of the house.

"And so your name is Willie," smilingly remarked the caller. "How old are you?"

"Eight," answered the boy, apparently not appreciating the question ing to any great extent.

"Why, you are quite a little man!" was the patronising rejoinder of the caller. "What are you going to be?"

"Nine on the 10th of October," came the unexpected response of Willie.

The late Cardinal Rampolla was a candidate for the Papal Chair in 1910, he died after a very short sickness at Rome on December 10th. He had become even greater since he retired from State affairs."

Railway Mail Clerks Must Take to the Water Waggon.

Railway mail clerks must go on the water waggon, not just now and then or part of the time, but all the time, for ever and ever till they expire from thirst or are pensioned off after years of faithful and absentious service in the employ of the Dominion. If they do not comply with the instructions, the alternative is instant dismissal. That is the information which has been conveyed to the government mail clerks by R. M. Coulter, the deputy postmaster general, on behalf of his chief, L. P. Pelletier.

Resolution Of Condolence

Passed at Meeting of Iron Moulders' Union

At a meeting of the Iron Mounders' Union, held last evening, a resolution of condolence was passed to the family of the late John Johnson, who resided at 545 Bethune street, and whose funeral took place yesterday afternoon. The Union attended in a body to the number of seventy-five, the foundries of the city being closed to enable the men to show their last token of respect to the memory of deceased.

The resolution is as follows:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved Brother John Johnson, who died Dec. 15th, 1913, and,

Whereas, In the death of our departed brother, each member of our Local Union feels a sense of personal sorrow; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of International Moulders' Union, Local No. 191, extend to the bereaved widow and daughter of our departed brother, this united expression of our heartfelt sympathy in this great trial which has bereft them of a loving husband and kind father, and together with the earnest assurance that the hearts of the members of this Local Union are filled with sorrow at the loss of our departed brother, and

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning for a period of ninety days, and

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the records of this local, a copy be presented to the bereaved family, and also published in our Journal and the local press.

Signed on behalf of International Moulders' Union No. 191.

Firemen's Annual Banquet To-night

Everything is in readiness for the Christmas celebration at the Fire Hall this evening. The large dormitory on the second floor of the station has been decorated with flags, streamers and evergreen in a most artistic manner. The presence of a large Christmas tree in the room leaves little that could be added to the decorations of the room that would remind one more quickly of the Yuletide season. And all the preparations have been looked after and executed by the firemen themselves. They have already shown themselves to be efficient decorators, and to-night they will give a demonstration of the ability as hosts to the one hundred guests who are expected to be present.

Unlike men in most other lines of employment, the fireman has no holiday on Christmas. It is to make amends for this that the Annual Banquet is held. To this the families of the men are invited, and after the banquet, which in years past has always been a sumptuous one, presents are distributed from the Christmas tree. The affair will commence tonight at six o'clock.

Pastor Sanctions Wedding.

KINGSTON, Dec. 17. — The first marriage to take place in Kingston between a Chinaman and a white girl was solemnized by Rev. E. Leroy Rice, pastor of the First Congregational church. The groom is F. K. Sam, proprietor of a laundry, and the bride, Ethel Salter, daughter of a well-known Kingstonian.

Sam wanted the ceremony performed over a year ago and although he had the girl's consent and also that of her parents, all the ministers in the city refused to officiate. The matter was discussed at a meeting of the Evangelical Alliance, when explanations were made and the Alliance stated that Mr. Rice would be justified in performing the ceremony.

IMMIGRATION RETURNS SHOW LARGE INCREASE

Ontario Population Was Increased by 62,000—Seventy-five Per Cent. Were British Subjects

HIGH-CLASS SETTLERS

Almost 62,000 immigrants settled this year in Ontario, bringing into the country cash estimated at $315,000. The total number this year is almost 20,000 larger than the preceding year, and according to the reports received from the European agents, it is expected that the rush for the coming year will be even greater.

Following are the monthly figures for the two years:

	1913	1912
January	1,111	611
February	1,603	1,006
March	5,604	4,906
April	11,175	7,013
May	11,314	7,506
June	10,189	6,497
July	7,628	4,470
August	4,859	3,621
September	3,449	3,186
October	2,812	3,538
November	1,827	2,599
December. (est.)	1,000	1,536
	62,571	45,299

The figures show that about 75 per cent. of the settlers were British subjects while the remainder were from other European countries. Of these the majority were Germans, Russian Jews and Scandinavians. A noticeable feature is that during the year there were but a small number of immigrants from the Balkan States.

High-Class Settlers.

It is estimated that Toronto received fully 25 per cent. of the total number, and that over 50 per cent. have settled on farms, while the remainder have scattered throughout the various cities and towns of the province. The latter and those who settled in Toronto are principally mechanics and factory workers.

All were well supplied with capital with the exception of those coming from East London district and it is roughly estimated that the amount of money brought into Ontario this year by the British immigrants would average $50 per head, including men, women and children."

The fact that all succeeded in making a good living was shown by the fact that during the year the Government did not have to pay out $50 to assist any of the immigrants.

ELECTRICITY IN THE BODY

Dr. Arabella Kenealy, of London, England, the distinguished physician and author, has just announced a remarkable discovery in connection with her work upon a new theory of the origin of life. Dr. Kenealy has found that human beings, animals, and plants are all electric batteries, which give out electrical energy capable of scientific measurement.

There is reason to suppose also that it is electricity which is the life-power of the human body, its motive power and the power of consciousness. Dr. Kenealy had for long suspected this, and her theory was confirmed by the fact that in death or injury by lightning it was always the left side of the body, and only the left side, that the current burned or otherwise injured. This showed the two sides of the body to be of different electrical potentials.

Together with G. Thorne Baker, Dr. Kenealy has just completed some interesting experiments. It was found that wires applied to the head and to the foot of a human being, if joined together through a very delicate measuring instrument, pass an electric current. This means that the body acts as a battery, of which the head or upper part is the negative pole. The two sides of the body are oppositely polarized.

The amount of electricity generated by the processes of life varies with different individuals so that every person represents an electric battery of a different strength. It would seem therefore, that electricity, that wonderful, mysterious force, is the origin and energy of all life.

That comparatively powerful electric currents are given off by plants also apepars from G. Thorne Baker's experiments. In the case of plants, the rotos below the ground are positive; the stem above the ground and the branches are negative.

Plants which were faded or "sick" through lack of water gave very feeble currents. The currents became stronger, however, when the plants were watered and cared for.

A link between plants and living creatures and those wonderful plant-like growths which are produced by "planting" crystals in a glass filled with certain chemical solution has been found through Dr. Kenealy's suggestion and Mr. Thorne Baker's experimental proof that these strange growths also give off electricity.

Prof. Sir A. P. Schafer, F.R.S., caused a sensation last year by describing these osmotic growths before the British Association, and by suggesting that their "spontaneous generation" was the origin of life.

The mystery of their growth has now been explained. Their growth shows an intimate relation to growth in real life, because the currents they generate are of the same order as those generated in plant life. They are generated by currents of electricity.

GIRL BURNED TO DEATH

Fatality at Bobcaygeon—Children Played With Matches

BOBCAYGEON, Dec. 17.—A sad and distressing accident happened on Tuesday, when little Margaret Nichols, a child of 3 years, daughter of Garner Nichols, Jr., met her death. Mrs. Nichols had just left the house, on Helen Street, and ran across the road to a neighbour, leaving the children alone in the house. In some unaccountable manner one of the children got possession of some matches, and in playing with them little Margaret's clothes caught fire. She ran out into the yard screaming, Percy Nichols, living close by, ran out, tore off the clothing and put out the fire as well as he could, but she was so terribly burned that she died about six o'clock.

MAKING YOUR MIND MIND

By RUTH CAMERON

If you had an employee who could not work except under certain favourable conditions, and who frequently disobeyed your orders, what would you do to him?

Discharge him, of course.

And yet how many of us, all our lives long, tolerate in our employ, a slovenly worker, who seldom works up to his full efficiency, who is always protesting that he can't work under this or that condition, and who often deliberately disobeys our orders in one way or another! As it happens, we could not discharge this employee, but we could train him, if he would only take the trouble, for the employee I speak of is each man's

"I can't read mind. when there is anyone talking in the room," says one person.

"I can never think of two things at once," says another.

"I can't write when there is a clock ticking," says an author.

"I can't concentrate on my work when I am going out in the evening," says the little stenographer lady.

"I can never listen to every word of a lecture," confesses an educated woman, "my mind is sure to wander o at least once or twice."

All these people are unconsciously admitting the slovenliness and disobedience of a lifelong servant, and hence their own inefficiency in training him.

I wish more attention could be given in the schools to teaching children to train their own minds. The habit of mind control is more valuable than almost any amount of learning, but except in indirect ways, such as forcing the child to apply himself to difficult and uninteresting studies, no effort is made to teach it.

And yet one cannot blame the much belaboured school system after all, for mind control is one of those many things which no one can do for us but ourselves. The only thing an outsider can do it to point out the necessity and wisdom of such training.

The time to commence disciplining this unruly servant is the very first moment he shows the need of discipline. When the young student discovers that he cannot study when anyone is in the room, his first instinct is to humour his mind and find an unoccupied place, but every time he does that he weakens his mind control. The thing to do, if he wishes to be master of his mind, is to stay right in the room and train his mind to work. In spite of the distraction. The ultimate gain in efficiency will be many times worth the temporary discomfort and loss.

No man can be really efficient unless his will is completely master of his mind. And a well trained mind, even if it is not exceptionally brilliant and powerful, is often quite as valuable a factor toward success, as a brilliant mind which has not been well trained.

AH, WELL!

"Well, my son," said a good-natured father to an eight-year-old son the other night, "what have you done today that may be set down as a good deed?"

"Gave a penny to a penny," replied the lad.

"Ah, well, that was generous, and charity is [illegible] orphan boy, while he—"

"I didn't give it to him," replied the son. "I gave it to the monkey that looks like a boy who [illegible]

AN "INQUIRER" WANTS TO KNOW

The Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—Several of your correspondents have repeatedly made inquiries to ascertain the amount of the present indebtedness of the City of Peterborough, and to what extent the ratepayers of Peterborough have been committed to new liabilities by the present Council, but no information has been given.

It is impossible for any ratepayer to cast an intelligent vote in this election without having this information.

Mayor Bradburn retired from the field as a candidate for the Mayoralty and is now asking that the ratepayers of Peterborough place their confidence in him as one of the Water Commissioners to control a half million dollar enterprise, and yet he does not think it is necessary to take the ratepayers of Peterborough into his confidence. Other retiring members of the City Council are asking the ratepayers of Peterborough to put their trust and confidence in them, and yet they deem it beneath their dignity to take the ratepayers of Peterborough into their confidence.

The bald fact remains that the indebtedness of Peterborough at the beginning of the year was over $1,500,000 and our taxes this year are higher than they have been in the history of the City. Why do the ratepayers not have some explanation upon these points by their retiring members of the City Council who are again asking the ratepayers for a renewal of their confidence.

Only yesterday afternoon some information leaked out at appears by your report of some proceedings before His Honour Judge Huycke. It appears that the City Council have passed a by-law to take over all the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company in the City of Peterborough and that the City Council have served a notice upon the Company that they are prepared to purchase all their property. The Council made a rough estimate of what this property was worth and came to the conclusion that $94,000.00 would be a fair price to pay, but the City Council did not value one-sixth of the Company's property and as a result the ratepayers of Peterborough, instead of being committed to a liability of only $94,000.00, are committed to a liability of $600,000.00. The members of the Company apparently know what they are talking about, because they had their plant valued by the best and most competent valuators on this continent.

It also appears that the City Council took no account whatever of the fact that the Peterborough Light and Power Company own the Auburn dam and power plant and head race in the City of Peterborough.

Before the ratepayers vote at this election they should know from these gentlemen who blundered. Are the ratepayers being tricked or are the affairs of our City being managed by a bunch of incompetents? A little new blood in the City Council would at all events be refreshing. Why do not the newspapers in Peterborough interview the Mayor and the members of the City Council and let the ratepayers know the real truth and the real facts before they go to the polls to record their votes with as little knowledge of our true financial position as "dumb driven cattle?"

Yours, etc.,
Inquirer.

Peterborough, Dec. 18, 1913.

SURE ENOUGH SERIOUS.

"See here, young man," said the stern parent as he entered the parlour, "you have been calling on my daughter rather frequently of late. Are your intentions serious?"

"They certainly are, sir," answered the young man. "I'm trying to induce her to exchange $150 and her old piano for a new one."

TUNGSTEN CLUSTER LAMPS LOOK PALE BESIDE CITY'S BRIGHT MAGNETITE LIGHTS

A Description of the Sub-station and Plant—Labour-Saver in Regard to Trimming the Lamps—Distribution of Light is Good

THE MATERIAL USED

The equipment at the City's sub-station consists of two constant current transformers, which receive energy at 2,200 volts, constant potential, and steps it up to 14,000 volts of constant current. This current is supplied to what is known as a mercury rectifier which changes the current from alternating to direct. This is supplied to the ornamental magnetite lamps at 6.6 amperes and 4,500 volts.

The Rectifier.

The mercury rectifier is a glass vessel, having two arms, called anoders and a terminal called a cathode. In addition there is a condensing chamber. Each rectifier requires about one pound of absolutely pure mercury. The tube is exhausted of air and is as near an absolute vacuum as can be obtained. One interesting feature of the rectifier is the fact that although there is a drop of but 20 volts in the tube when running under normal conditions, yet 60,000 volts applied from anode to anode will force no current through the tube. The difference in the two cases is that in the first case the mercury vapour is in a state of what is usually called "ionized." The tubes are guaranteed for an average life of 500 hours, but in actual service in various plants in Canada and the United States, operators are obtaining in many cases 2,000 or 2,500 hours hours and in others a service much in excess of hese figures.

Works Automatically.

The sub-station equipment as a whole operates automatically, taking care of any variation of load and primary voltage without any attention on the part of the operator. The manner in which the rectifier changes the alternating current to direct is highly technical and would require illustrations. It would probably be understood only by those well grounded in electrical experience.

The ornamental lamp is a specific form of the well known magnetite lamp of which nearly 10,000 are installed in Canada, and between 125,000 and 150,000 in the United States. The lamp is of a very rugged and simple design. Scarcely any adjusting and very little repairing is required, as there is but little to get our of repair. The lower or negative electrode is an iron tube filled with the powder of magnetite ore. Added to this is a small amount of salts, chromium and titanium. This electrode burns from about 125 to 130 hours per trim. The positive electrode is of pure copper, and while it is guaranteed to burn from 2,500 to 3,000 hours, it runs more nearly to 4,000 hours, which is equa to a full year's operation every night in the year. This means a very decided reduction in the labour of keeping the lamps trimmed.

Citizens know that in the old type flaming arcs both electrodes were of carbon, which had to be replenished daily.

Splendid Distribution.

In the carbon arc lamp the light was emitted almost entirely from the points of the carbon, the arc itself giving practically no light. This meant in the case of a direct current lamp that light was thrown down at a very large angle below the horizontal, making a bright area in the near vicinity of the lamp.

In the magnetite lamp the light comes from the arc which is vertical. Light is thrown well out in almost a horizontal direction, making an ideal distribution for street lighting. The globe is so designed that it is full of light, the arc being entirely hidden. In addition to the light given out horizontally, there is considerable thrown above the horizon to light up the buildings.

In ornamental lighting this is a feature that must not be neglected. To obtain the best effect the outlines of the buildings must be shown up clear to the eaves if daylight effect is to be approached.

Compared With Clusters.

It is hardly necessary to draw attention to the different degree of light from one of the ornamental lights and that of a five light Tungsten cluster. This is particularly remarkable when it is borne in mind that the consumption of energy in the two forms of light is practically the same. It is 30 watts greater in the Magnetite lamp, and the light from the latter is three times that of the five Tungsten cluster. The Magnetite equipment is made in Lynn, Mass., by the General Electric Co., of which the C.G.E. Co. is the Canadian agent.

Mr. L. Burpee of Toronto, are lamp specialist with the C.G.E. Company, has been in the City supervising the work at the sub-station.

The above information was obtained in an interview with him. Evidently what Mr. Burpee does not know about Magnetite lamps, transformers and rectifiers has not yet been discovered.

SAYS DEPUTATION WAS CHEEKY

Monaghan Boy Discusses the Government Allowance Along the River

Editor of the The Examiner:

That was a pretty cheeky delegation that waited on the North Monaghan Council the other day and asked that body to give them the valuable government allowance along the bank of the Otonabee river. This is certainly the age of greed and covetousness. Indeed, these land grabbers admitted that they had already fenced in the allowance without waiting for any action on the part of the Council, so regardless are they of the rights of others and the law of the land, and they claim that they are the virtual owners of it now. If so, what more do they want? They must have something up their sleeve. One speaker went so far as to say that the reserve was all washed away along his property. Then why does he want something that does not exist. They evidently think that any old excuse will suffice to bamboozle the Council. The Government saw fit in their wisdom and foresight to make this reservation as they did in all other cases, and it is for the citizens to preserve their patrimony intact. In all cities they are making an effort to preserve or acquire their waterfronts for various public purposes, notably for driveways. What a beautiful driveway this allowance would make to Crawford's Grove.

In short, the Council, even were it so disposed, has no right to sell government property. The delegation might just as well have waited on the Township Council of Smith.

A Monaghan Boy.

The Grand Trunk instruction car is now making its annual rounds of the system, and has been stationed during the past few days at Lindsay. Several of the local firemen and engineers are in that town proving their ability to manipulate the appartus in which depends to a great extent the safety of the passenger or freight in the trains they are operating. On the instruction car typical air brakes and other safety appliances are installed, and the engineers must learn to manipulate them, or show that they are already able to do so.

THERE ARE THREE CASES OF DIPTHERIA IN PETERBOROUGH

There are three cases of diphtheria in the City, all of which have been recently reported. There are no signs however, of any danger of the spread of the disease, it having been promptly discovered and the houses placarded in each case.

There are, however, more cases of typhoid fever in Peterborough than usual, three cases having been reported during the past three weeks. The disease is prolonging its existence more into the winter season than is usual. But altogether, the City may consider itself fortunate in the matter of diseases that usually invade its precincts during this time of the year.

The attendance at the Public schools, and more particularly at the Central school, is still considerably depleted because of the number of children who are suffering from the mumps.

RUMOUR IS UNFOUNDED

Mr. R. Hicks to-day positively denied the rumour which was designed, to convey the impression that he would withdraw his candidature for the office of Water Commissioner. He states that he is in the field to stay and will be there at the finish.

LEFT AN ESTATE OF 14 MILLIONS

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—One of the largest estates ever probated in Ontario was that of James Ross of Montreal, whose will was put through the Surrogate Court here, this morning, distributing an estate of fourteen million dollars—including about seven hundred thousand in Ontario companies. There is about four millios in Canadian Pacific and the bulk of the balance in stocks of various kinds. Eleven millions goes to Hon. Kenneth Ross of Montreal.

MR. RYERSON RITCHIE ADMIRED THE LIGHTS

Widely Known Designer of Cities, Congratulates Peterborough.

Mr. Ryerson Ritchie told an Examiner reporter that he was delighted with the City's new lights. "They are beautiful," he said, "and are a credit to Peterborough." Mr. Ritchie is widely known as a designer of cities beautiful. Both in the United States and Canada has he been engaged as advisor to civic boards in what is known as city planning, and commendation from him carries more than ordinary import. Mr. Ritchie was a guest at the Oriental Hotel last night.

THE JUNIOR CITY LEAGUE MEETING

At a meeting of the Junior City Hockey League on Wednesday night in the Oak Hall Store, the executive was appointed, as follows:

Y.M.C.A., Walter Flowers; Alerts, Elmer Galvin; Boston Exploits, Wm. Wryde; Wanderers, H. T. Stewart.

Nearly all the season tickets have been sold, the Exploits disposing of their own and assisting several of the other teams. The best of feeling exists among the boys and everything points to a good season. Certificates will be issued in a short time. An adjournment was made until the Junior O. H. A. officers can be interviewed in regard to relations with the City League.

COW CAUSED SOME EXCITEMENT

Considerable excitement was caused at the corner of George and Hunter Streets this afternoon about three o'clock, by a cow belonging to a farmer who resides on the Norwood road. The animal was being driven to Mr. McCarrol's in North Monaghan, and negotiated the City roads successfully until it reached the corner of Hunter and George Streets. There it fell and could not rise to its feet on account of the slippery condition of the permanent pavement. Considerable anxiety was occasioned for fear the cow would injure herself, but after a time a spectator suggested tying bags on its feet. This was done and the cow was able to get up and resume its journey.

HAD TO GET INFORMATION ON THE DISASTERS

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 18.—Captain Lindsay, Dominion Wreck Commissioner, who has returned from the investigations held on the disaster on the Great Lakes, found his inquiry severely handicapped by the grim fact that there were very few witnesses. In the majority of cases vessels were lost with all hands. The result of his hearings and enquiries will be used as a basis for an inquiry which will be held before the committee of Marine and Fisheries next session.

NEW BAND MADE FINE IMPRESSION

New Uniforms are Quiet and Natty. —Playing Was Good.

The Maple Leaf Band made its bow to the City last night and created a good impression. Their new uniforms are neat and appropriate. The suits are of blue with black braid trimmings. The Band took part in the celebration and parade, and were given a big cheer by the Salvation Army bandsmen when they arrived at the corner of Charlotte and George Streets. Not only was their appearance most commendable, but their playing drew numerous compliments.

DON'T TURN HIM AWAY.

By J. F. T.

"Oh Wanderer look," you are on the wrong road,
Thy Saviour doth call you to come back to God;
His Spirit is pleading for you to return,
They why will you die and forevermore mourn.

You have promised so often you would come back to God,
His Spirit is saying you are on the wrong road;
Then why will you doubt Him for Jesus says come,
There is peace, rest and joy by coming to Him.

Your Father and Mother have reached that bright shore,
And are singing the songs of the blest over there;
Then why do you tarry, when Jesus says come,
And enjoy with your loved ones that Heavenly Home.

God stands at the door of your heart "Let Him in."
But you say not now, though you are tired of sin;
You stifle the convictions the Spirit has made,
And still are away from Jesus the Lord.

Oh come to the One who is able to save,
For God gave His Son that all might believe;
Find forgiveness and mercy through the Blood of the Lamb,
And pardon and peace by trusting in Him.

DISTINGUISHED DUNCES.

The finer individual qualities are often late in revealing themselves. Some mature slowly and are called stupid.

George Eliot learned to read with difficulty, Thorwaldson, the sculptor, spent three years in one class in the village school; Burger, the poet of German ballads, required several years to learn the Latin forms; and Alfieri, the Italian poet, was dismissed by his teachers, so backward was he.

The list of distinguished dunces might be indefinitely extended by adding Newton, Byron, Ibsen, Walter Pater, Pierre Curie and others.

Tolstoi, Goethe, and Dean Swift were refused their degrees because they failed in their university examinations, and for the same reason Ferdinand Brunetiere was denied admission to the Ecole Normale Superieure.

At Cambridge, also, Sir William Thomson, who became Lord Kelvin, was not a Senior Wrangler, though one of the examiners admitted that "the successful competitor was not fit to cut pencils for Thomson."

ALL HAIL WAITER NO. 6!

There is a restaurant in Berlin whose proprietor deserves the heartfelt thanks of all Americans and Englishmen unacquainted with the German language who venture within its portals. In the midst of a howling wilderness of signs in fearful and wonderful Teutonic, extolling the merits of beers and wines and special dishes, and of people hurling the most irregular German verbs about with reckless abandon, is this sign—a lovely little oasis to the stranger:

"Waiter No. 6 speaks English."

THREE CHILDREN ARE BURNED

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, P.Q., Dec. 18.—Two children, one aged five, and the other one year old, in the family of Louis Seni, were burned to death this morning as a result of the overturning of a coal-oil lamp. Another baby in another house in the same district was burned to death, from sparks from a fire in a stove.

HAS COMPANY PAID TAXES ON ALL THE PROPERTY?

Peterborough, Dec 17, 1913.

Editor Examiner:

In your paper last night I read that the Light and Power Company claim their property is worth $600,000. Now how much taxes have they been paying on this, and for how many years? Is there not some way for our City to collect what these people owe the City in the way of taxes they should have paid; also compound interest. Mr. Colville may be able to show us before he gets through that this company is worth $1,000,000.

If so, have we not got a lot of money coming to us as citizens? I think it is about time that Peterborough should receive the taxes that are due.

There are others who keep corners they won't sell. They hold these out of sight if you approach them to buy. Why not make these people pay the taxes on the price they will take for the property. If the assessor was instructed to ask them to put in writing what hey would take for the property, and leave it with the City Clerk so anybody that was willing to buy could put up the cash and take the property, there would not be so many valuable lots vacant, and good corners people hold just because they can beat the City out of the taxes.

I would like to just call your attention to one. Take the corner of George and Charlotte Streets. What does this corner pay taxes on, and then see what it can be bought for, and you will find the City is getting another touch right here, and these are others.

Yours,
A Taxpayer.

SIR WILFRED LAURIER AT McMASTER

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—Castle Memorial Hall, thronged with the students of McMaster University, re-echoed to the cheers of the student body when, interrupting Sir Wilfrid Lauzier, a student shouted: "We all wish you wer back (in the Premiership). Sir Wilfrid had been commenting in semi-humorous vein, on the ups and downs of political life. "It is possible," he had said, "that there may be one or two in this audience who might even wish to see me there again, but—"

"We all wish you were back," shouted a sturdy voice—and the applause that followed testified to the truth of the statement.

The gathering was under the auspices of the McMaster Literary Society and was presided over by Dean Farmer. Shortly after 11 o'clock the [illegible] when Sir Wilfrid arrived in Sir William Mulock's limousine, and was accompanied by Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C.

Early School Days.

Sir Wilfrid's address was in the nature of reminiscence of his school days and advice from his own experience in books to the young students before him.

"You know," he said, "it is interesting to me to recall in this place that I served the early part of my political apprenticeship under a Baptist—Alexander Mackenzie, one of the great men of Canadian history. Although I am myself a Roman Catholic, as perhaps you know, I believe very firmly in the principle of religious toleration. I respected Mr. Mackenzie no less for his religious beliefs, and he, I am sure, respected those of his followers who were of different persuasion in these matters. And as for being here in a place of learning, that is quite natural to me. I recall that when I was eleven years of age my father sent me to a school where there were no French teachers, much less French scholars, except myself. Not one word could I say to make myself understood to them, nor they to me; and yet I got along very nicely. Now, every time I go to Winnipeg, I call on a gentleman, a friend of mine, who was the first boy with whom I fought in that school."

Should Learn French.

Sir Wilfrid then spoke of the English language and the value he placed upon it in the education of young men. He pointed out that English was the great language of the future. "Since the beginning of the last century," he said, "to its end, the number of English-speaking people in the world has increased from 20,000,000 to 150,000,000. I venture to think, ladies and gentlemen, that at the end of the present century it will have increased to 260,000,000.

"But you must not ignore French," he went on. "French has been the language of educated Europe since the crusades. No Englishman to-day considers his education complete who cannot speak that language.

So also the Russians and the Germans and the Italians. For three or four hundred years French has been the language of diplomacy and of the arts and letters. It has not the directness of the English nor its precision. But it has the elasticity, the range which permits it to express all shades of thought, and so it will always, I think, remain the language of diplomacy, and of arts and letters. Therefore, if you would complete your education, I say to you, learn French.

"I would say also, learn German. I regret that I do not myself speak that language. In my career as a lawyer and in politics I have found great use for both French and English, but had I known German I should have been very much better off on many occasions. It is a task to learn three languages, but I feel sure any young man here is capable of handling it.

Advice on Books.

"French is not hard. The grammar is difficult, but the pronunciation is easy! (Laughter). Oh, I see that you doubt me when I say it is easy. Well, I have good reason to say it, for any man who can pronounce the English language will have not the slightest difficulty with French. (Laughter). There is logic in French pronunciation, but what logic, I want to know, is there in the pronunciation of the English language! (Applause).

As to books, I would advise any young man to read first the works of Gibbon. They are magnificent. And then, I would recommend to young Canadians, the works of Parkman. These are great works, great because of the manner in which they have been written and great for the things they relate. If any young Canadian wants to feel a pride in the two races from which we Canadians spring, I say to him, read Parkman.

"In conclusion, whatever else may happen, I say to you be true to yourselves, be true to your conscience, and to what you believe is right. If you follow this advice—not original with me—then you are sure to get the greatest reward any man can ever get: the verdict of one man's conscience is better than the plaudits of men.

"This life is composed of ups and downs, I give you myself as an example. (Applause).

There may be one or two here who would sympathize with me who would fain see me back in office—"

"We all do!" (loud applause).

"But I do not mind having lost. I find it part of the game. Though of course—I prefer to win!"

The meeting concluded with a few words by Dean Farmer and twice three cheers for Laurier—with two tigers.

MORE DETAILS CONCERNIG PLOT TO BRIBE ALBION TEAM

Offered the Football Captain $275 For a Certain Result The Warriors' Misfortune--Sunderland Has Six Forwards--Old Country Football News.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Details of the alleged plot to bribe the West Bromwich Albion football team were given at the Smethwick Police Court recently, when the man arrested, who gave the name of Frederick Pater, was brought before the Magistrates and charged with committing an offence under the prevention of corruption act, 1906.

The accused man, who is about 50, and well dressed, and well groomed, stated that Frederick Pater was not his real name. "The superintendent has my other name," he said. "I would rather not mention it."

J. S. Sharpe, for the Albion Club directors, explained that the team played Everton on Saturday. On Friday afternoon Pater called on the Captain, Pennington, at his shop in Smethwick, and opened negotiations for him to cause a certain result to take place. Pennington acted very cleverly and prudently. He played with Pater, and at his suggestion the man put his offer in writing on one of Pennington's memorandum forms. It was as follows:

November 28.

I, Sam Johnston, agree to present to Jesse Pennington £55 on the termination of the match played at West Bromwich on November 29, if the result is a draw or loss.

(Signed) Sam Johnston.

Cleveland mansions, Brixton, London.

Pennington then communicated with Mr. Bassett, chairman of the directors, who approached the police and it was arranged that if the man came forward to carry out his proposal a trap should be set for him. None of the other players knew anything of the arrangement. By a singular coincidence the match resulted in a draw.

Pater was on the ground, and Pennington went to him and said "What about that money?" In the presence of Sergeant Barker, Detecive Mollatt W. I. Bassett and Fred Everiss, Pater handed over to Pennington a bag of gold and asked him to count it in the office. The money was found to be correct, and as he was about to leave the man was arrested.

"There is very little doubt," said Mr. Sharpe, "that Pater is the agent of a very big betting concern that issues football coupons, and they have a desire through him or other agents to control the play of various clubs in the district.

"This is not the only case. There may be another prosecution."

He asked for a remand for a week for inquiries to be made respecting Pater's antecedents and also to comply with the requirements of the act, because it was necessary for the prosecution to obtain the fiat of the attorney-general or solicitor-general to those proceedings.

Pennington described how he was handed the bag of gold, which was to be divided equally between the team, £5 for each player.

The application for a week's remand was granted.

SCOTCH NUGGETS.

Warriors' Misfortune.

This Central League game was productive of a great struggle for supremacy at Stenhousemuir ground, but in the end Armadale were successful in claiming the full complement of points by 3 goals to 2. This was greatly due to the fact that the Warriors were minus Allan, their left half, who met with an accident early in the game and was forced to retire. The first goal for Armadale was secured by Graham after thirty-five minutes' play, and just on the interval Wright scored another. On resuming the Warriors were seen to better advantage, but Thomson, the visitors' cutodian, was in brilliant form, clearing all that came his way. Later, Armadale were awarded a penalty, Graham netting. At the other end a penalty was granted the 'Muir, McCaig scoring, while a little later the same player succeeded in beating Thomson a second time. In the closing minutes great excitement prevailed, but the end came with the score unaltered.

Who will be champion league goal scorer? Dawson, Hearts, looks like giving the Reids a run for the honour. His four goals against St. Mirren leaves him only one behind them.

Several clubs are already inquiring after Brown, of Peebles Rovers, who had his transfer fee reduced by the league to £25. Brown formerly played for Dundee, who have his papers.

Thomas Devine, centre forward of Wemyss Athletic, has been signed by Broxburn Athletic, and will fill the place vacated by Hamilton, now of Dundee.

When Allan, of Clyde, scored his fourth goal at Shawfield on Saturday, David Mair, of Motherwell, extended his hand in congratulation. This is the sportsmanlike spirit which elicits general admiration.

Unlucky Aberdeen! What with poor play and poor gates and, lastly, the refusal of the S. F. A. to grant them the Welsh international, the Pittodrie Cup of sorrow is full to the brim. Northern folks are naturally aggrieved at the niggardliness of the association in withholding this one little plum.

Already the question of how many free tickets should be issued for the English International at Hampden has been broached. This is to be settled along with the other matters in the hands of the S. F. A. Committee.

Pat Allan was on the brink of being transferred to Celtic the other week. His six goals in two Saturdays will make Clyde more loath than ever to part with him.

Sunderland are in the "awful" predicament of possessing six crack forwards, one of whom, according to the rules of the game, must play the part of spectator. The man for whom many say a place forward must be found is Best.

It was observed at the S. F. A. meeting that several delegates spoke warmly regarding Aberdeen's claim to hav the Welsh international, but not a word was heard in favour of Celtic's case.

Hamilton, Dundee's latest capture, had a great reputation while with Broxburn United. He scored in every match this season with the exception of one, and if expectations are realied, Dundee have now a great centre forward.

David Bain, the ex-Heart of Midlothian defender, has taken up the quoiting game, and to-day he figures in a match for £20. Bain is now staying in Lochgelly, and practices with the Scottish champions.

The rumour that Hampton, of Aston Villa, is going to Chelsea is denied. Hampton describes the assertion as simply absurd.

The draw for the first round of the Scottish:

First Round.

St. Mirren v. Inverness Col.
Falkirk v. Queen's Park.

Second Round.

Falkirk or Queen's Park v. Arthurlie.
St. Mirren or Caledonian v. Dundee.
Nithsdale Wanderers v. Partick Thistle.
Broxburn United v. Dumfries.
Clyde v. Celtic.
East Stirling v. Forfar.
Third Lanark v. Dumbarton.
Kircaldy v. Stevenson.
Alloa Athletic v. Rangers.
Leith v. Motherwell.
Raith Rovers v. Hearts.
Forres Mechanics v. Pebble Rovers
Aberdeen v. Albion Rovers.
Airdrieonian v. Dundee Hibernians
Kilmarnock v. Hamilton.
Morton v. Hibernians.

The Best Game.

Taking a glance at the above list, the best games seem to be: St. Mirren vs. Dundee, Clyde vs. Celtic, Third Lanark vs. Dumbarton, Raith Rovers vs. Hearts, Aberdeen vs. Albion Rovers, Kilmarnock vs. Hamilton, and Morton vs. Hibernians.

Wednesday's Results.

London, Dec. 17—In the fifth qualifying round for the Cup series, scores to-day were:

Southend 2, Brentford 0.
South Shields 2, Luton 0.
Chesterfield 8, North Shields 2.

HOCKEY

Toronto Star: The railbirds at the Arena have just about settled it in their minds that St. Michael's is the team to beat for the senior championship of the O.H.A. That is what the ante-season sentiment was last year. The post mortem disclosed the fact that the preliminaryd iagnosis was a bit awry.

As a matter of fact St. Michael's with all of last year's team but Gordon Bricker, and the addition of Charfrand of Ottawa, and Dug Addison of T. R. and A. A., look the class of the local seniors. Jerry Laflamme was never in better condition than he is now, nor was Jimmy Dissette. In Dug Allison the Saints have a good man to alternate with Winnett Thompson. Frank Rankin, at rover does not look to be in as good shape as he was last year, but Jack McCanius will be 50 per cent. better and "Dutchy" Richardson is just as good as ever. Herb Matthews dicky leg leg is strong again, and if it holds out St. Miques will be a hard team to keep out of the medals.

The fans have not yet decided which team they like next best. The champion Toronto will certainly have a lovely defence if Ken McLaren shows his old-time form in the nets for in Frank Heffernan, of last year's team, and Jack Gooch of T.C.C., they have the speediest pair of defence men in the city. They will likely use "Bud" McLean at rover, while the forward line looks like Thornton, Meeking and Jack Brown. Thornton was a good junior. He will find senior hockey a different proposition.

The Toronto Rowing Club has a good goalkeeper in Rupert Laird, of T.C.C. juniors and a first class defence in Eugene Sidley and Ack Hunter of Toronto. If Bill Hyland plays to his best 1912 form he will be a sensation in senior hockey here. He made them sit up at Winnipeg with Eatons in the Allan Cup trip and that is going some. Eugene Dopp of T.C.C., at left wing is good enough for any man's team, but Bartlett and Dennison at centre, and Skinner and Burrell, right wing candidates, have not fought the fans approbation.

The Argonaut team is not regarded as dangerous though they have a bunch of good lively youngsters out. "Pass this crowd of kids until they show something. They may be very good or very bad," is the general size up.

Osgoode Hall is of course an entirely unknown quantity, while Varsity has material enough for half a dozen teams and can be depended upon to put out a team which will make somebody hustle.

O. H. A. PLAYERS BARRED BY MERCANTILE LEAGUE

Eight Teams Have Entered and a Good Season is Expected—Constitution Was Adopted Last Night

SOME NEW RULES

The adjourned general meeting of the Mercantile Hockey League for this City was held last evening in the Board Room of the Y. M. C. A. President Nelson was in the chair.

The President opened the proceedings by thanking th members for the honour they had conferred on him by electing him as President. He expressed his intention of doing all in his power to further the interests of the Mercantile Hockey League. With a strong President, Vice, and other officers and Executive Comimttee each man of whom he felt assured would do his full share of duty, there was every prospect of its being the best League in the City, and that the coming season would be the best they had ever had. Four teams had been entered one of which, the Lockworks, had asked to withdraw, while another team had been taken in to fill the vacancy. The question of the number of teams to form the complement of the Leagu—whether six or eight—would be put to the meeting.

Th President further announced that Mr. Meharry had offered $10 towards a cup for competition and he (President) proposed to give $5 himself towards a similar purpose. Altogether, he concluded, there is no reason why this coming one should not be a banner year for mercantile hockey.

The minutes of the previous meeting were then read by the Secretary (Mr. Walkey), and confirmed.

Some discussion then arose on the constitution and as a result the following rules and regulations forming the constitution were adopted:

1. This organization to be known as the Mercantile Hockey League.

2. Executive to consist of President, Vice President, Secretary-Treasurer and an Executive Committee of three.

3. The annual meeting to be held prior to December 1st, and to be called by the President.

4. Any Commercial or Manufacturing Establishment in the City will be entitled to enter a team if represented at the annual meeting.

5. Teams shall consist of bonafide employees of sluch concerns, engaged at least two weeks prior to any game in which they play.

6. No O.H.A. players of present season to be allowed to play. By an O. H. A. player is to be understood a man who has taken any part in two O. H. A. games in the present season.

7. Senior City Hockey League players of present season barred. (By player" is meant, one playing in a league game).

8. Rink fees to be paid to the Secretary-Treasurer on or before Dec. 31st.

Delegates from eight teams were present and the meeting was asked to vote on the question as to whether the League should consist of eight teams or be limited to six. On a vote being taken the majority were found to be in favour of an eight-team league.

Messrs. Pete Spratt and Secretary Walkey were nominated as a Committee to make the necessary arrangements for the Brock Street Rink for practice purposes.

The following teams, which include those previously entered, were admitted to form this league:

Bankers.
Brintons.
C. & P. (Cost and Pay Roll Depts., O. G. E.)
De Laval.
"Examiner."
Plumbers.
Test Room (C. G. E.)
Tool Room (C. G. E.)

The meeting then adjourned until Saturday evening next at 8 o'clock, when the Rink Committee will present their report.

Hockey--That's All

The hockey squad will work out at Brock Street Rink to-night at 7 o'clock and a full turnout of players is requested. Every junior is expected to attend the practices from now on.

The local junior O.H.A. team has already forwarded to the O.H.A., certificates for the following players, and a number of others will be sent in as soon as the birth certificates are obtained: Grover Halpin, A. R. Rose, Harold Long, Frank Barrie, Cecil Richardson, Grant Latimer, Alex. Darling, Max Swanston, Leo Picard, Harold Knapman, Nagle Phelan, Bruce Regan, R. B. Lees and E. V. Clancy.

Harold Morrow of last year's juniors will play with the Royal Bank team in the Toronto Bank League. Peterborough is well represented in that organisation with Hugh Burritt, Harry Clancy and Stan. Cook all playing.

The Mercantile League has bright prospects in front of it this season, with eight teams in line. There is one clause in the constitution, however, that may cause trouble, in the barring of O. H. A. players of the present year. Hitherto Junior O. H. A. players have been permitted to play in the Mercantile League, and the League has been a splendid developing ground for the O. H. A. team. Last night a rule was passed barring junior players of the present year, although any O. H. A. player of previous years may take part. Why a Senior or Intermediate player of last year should be allowed to play while a Junior of this year is barred, is somewhat hard to see.

BASEBALL

Here is a story told by an old minstrel man at one of the functions held at Columbus during the National Association meeting.

"I attended a game between Cleveland and Philadelphia about 15 years ago. Cleveland led until the ninth by a score of 3 to 0, but the Phillies grabbed four runs in the last round and won out.

"After the game I was being shaved in the Hollenden barber shop when one barber called over to another:

"'Were you out to the game, ed?'

"'I sure was.'

"'What sort of a game was it?'

"'Mighty good game up to the ninth inning.'

"'How's that?'

"'Well it was this way. Our boys had three runs when the ninth inning began. Then Mister Dick Cooley, he came to bat. Now, you know, Mister Cooley is a good bunter. Well, he jest bunted and he beat Old Chief's throw to first. Then Mister Tommy Dowd, he zipped one between first and second and Mister Cooley he ran to third and Mister Dowd, he reached second.

"'Then I looked down toward the Phillies' bench and there was Mister Nap Lajoie, Mister Ed Delahanty and Mister Sam Thompson all a-swinging their bats and coming toward the plate.'

"'Well, what then?'

"'What then? Say, don't you know nothing about base ball? Didn't you hear who I said was coming to bat? I said Mister Nap Lajoie, Mister Ed Delahanty and Mister Sam Thompson. Huh! What then?'"

Bill Phyle, Pacific Coast League umpire, may butt into the San Francisco boxing game as a referee. His services are being sought by some of the clubs, it is said, for Phyle formerly was a good boxer himself, and his experience in base ball arbitration should help him in the squared arena.

Phyle never tires of relating about his first fight, which was a preliminary to the Needham-Ryan battle in St. Paul many years ago.

His opponent was Mike Steffens, a locomotive fireman who outweighed him about 20 pounds. Billy floored him in six rounds and drew down $5 as his share of the spoils.

He took the coin home and handed it to his mother, as any dutiful son would do.

Billy's dad, who was opposed to prize-fighting, was somewhat enraged when he learned that his son had walloped a fellow-being on the beak, and went down-town determined to clean up Fred Lowes, a saloon keeper, who had promoted the card.

Lowes was there with the "bull" a million ways from the cash register.

"Great boxer, that boy of yours; oughta seen him flatten that fellow Steffens," he gushed before old man Phyle had a chance to land.

It so happened that Steffens was one person for whom Daddy Phyle had not the slightest use. Learning that he was the party whom his heir-apparent had licked, he not only refrained from hitting Lowes, but forgave Billy and permitted him to fight to his heart's content.

W. A. Phelan has the following in the St. Louis Sporting News:

A letter just received from London, Ont., backed up by newspaper clippings, credits Johnny Cocash — with the big league for a while, and one of the best known of all minor leaguers—with pulling something absolutely new during a game last season. When the London Club arrived at Peterborough, Ont., for one of the regular games of the Canadian league, it was found that heavy rains had saturated the outfield, and that centre field, a depressed territory, was at least two feet under water. It was up to Cocash to play centre for the London club, and he emitted wild wails to Frank Bowerman, the old Giant catcher who managed the Londons. "Fear not, little one," snorted Bowerman, "your life is saved!" And he produced an enormous pair of rubber boots, heaching to Cocash's belt line. Thus equipped, Cocash entered his ocean, and put in a busy afternoon catching seven flies, while the Peterborough centre fielder, splashing and staggering pitifully in the shallower pools, let three or four get away for homers.

In the sixth inninga London made a rally and Cocash, going to bat, was so excited, that he forgot to make a temporary shift of footgear. He rushed up with the boot on and worked his way to first. Trout, the Peterborough catcher — any man with that name should have played in the outfield lakes that day—paid no attention to the booted runner, who suddenly tore away from first, and slid into second, boots and all! Thus did Mr. Cocash save his team by centre fielding with his boots, and thus, as well, did he steal the first base ever stolen by a booted man in base ball history!

Some amazing feats may be looked forward to at the next Olympic games now that continental Europe has swallowed whole the American idea of training athletes.

It has taken us a long while to convince the foreigners that there is really nothing wicked or immoral in our way of doing things, and now that our rivals on the other side have been "converted," and are busy turning out athletes that conform to the American model, we must prepare ourselves for the time, not far distant, when many of our records on field and track are taken away from us.

Of all the nations that pride themselves on the physical prowess of their young men, England is the only one that refuses to accept the Olympic principle. France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Sweden, Norway and Denmark now realize, as the United States did years ago, that systematized activity in athletic sports is good for a nation. In themselves the Olympic games, perhaps, are unimportant. But it is now pretty generally admitted that the ability to send a championship team to the big games means that a country has a vast army of strong, healthy and highly trained young athletes from which to pick its representatives.

These are the countries whose athletes for the games at Berlin are being, or are to be, trained by Americans:

Germany—Alvin E. Kraenzlein.
Austria—Al Copeland.
Sweeden—Ernie Hjertberg.
Norway—Mike Ryan.

Italy's men are being looked after by an Americanised Italian, while in France athletics are being taught to the French youth on a scientific basis.

There is not a shadow of a doubt that some new Olympic champions will be developed abroad by these American trainers. There is plenty of good material on the other side, but at the Olympic games in the past the foreign competitors have been sadly handicapped by ignorance of training methods and style.

It used to make the late Mike Murphy almost indignant to see the awkward way in which the majority of the foreigners went about their work at the Olympic games.

Murphy admitted one day at the stadium at Shepherd's Bush, London, that he would like nothing better than to get a job of training and coaching some of the German, Scandinavian, Danish and Finnish young giants who were wasting their strength and energy on the track and the field through sheer ignorance.

WHY NICOTINE MEANS TOBACCO.

Worshippers at the shrine of "My Lady Nicotine"—and how many millions burn incense before her altar—are not all aware of the origin of the word nicotine, or of the correct account of the awakening to the value of tobacco on the continent of Europe. Most of us are satisfied with the statement that Sir Walter Raleigh introduced the "weed" into Britain, and suppose that it spread thence all over Europe simply for smoking purposes.

If we go back to an old black letter volume dating from the year 1577 we gain a clearer view of the subject and interesting light on the origin of the word nicotine as applied to the chief element in tobacco. According to this venerable authority, now more than 300 years old, Master John Nicot, counsellor to the King, being ambassador for the King in Portugal in the year of our Lord 1559, 1560, and 1561, went one day to see the prisons of the King of Portugal, and a gentleman being the keeper of the said prisons presented him a herb, as a strange plant brought from Florida.

This same Master Nicot, having caused the said herb to be set in his garden, where it grew and multiplied marvellously, was upon a time advised by one of his pages that a young man, some kin to that page, made a plaster of that herb bruised, both the herb and the juice together, upon an ulcer, which he had upon his cheek near his nose, coming of a noli me tangere, which had taken root already at the base of the nose, and that he found himself much easier at once. Therefore the said Nicot caused the sick young man to be brought before him, causing the said herb to be applied to the sore eight or ten days, until it was completely cured and healed. And he had it sent, while this cure was working, to a certain physician of the King of Portugal, the most famous in his time, to see the further working and effect of the said nicotiane. He then sent for the same young man at the end of the ten days and brought him before this physician that he might see how the herb had acted upon the sore, and he certified that the said noli me tangere was indeed utterly obliterated, and, indeed, it never returned afterward.

Some time after this one of the ambassador's cooks, having almost cut off his thumb with a big chopping knife, the steward of the house of this gentleman ran to the sad nicotiane and dressed his thumb therewith five or six times and it was thoroughly healed thereby. From that time on this herb was famous throughout all Lisbon, where the court of the King of Portugal was held at that time, and the virtue of this herd was announced far and wide, and the people called it "the ambassador's herb."

The London ambassador, seeing that such beneficast effects wer produced by this herb, and having heard that the Lady Montigay that was had died at St. Germains of an ulcer on the breast, which had turned into a noli me tangere, for which no remedy was known at that time, and that the Countess of Ruffe had consulted all the famous physicians of that realm to help to heal herf ace, but that none of them had found any remedy; he thought it wise to communicate his good news to France, and therefore sent to Francis II. and to the Queen Mother, telling them all about tobacco and how to use it, as well as how to apply it to this dread disease as had been proved by experience.

In this way we have evidence that tobacco was considered the cure for ulcers and even for cancerous growths, more than for smoking, and in this way the word nicotine is to be traced to this ambassador, John Nicot.

FREAKS OF NATURE.

An Uphill Waterfall and a Tree That Squirms Like a Snake.

Nature in the tropics, left to herself, writes John Burroughs, the naturalist, is harsh, aggressive, savage; looks as though she wanted to hang you with her dangling ropes or impale you on her thorns or engulf you in the ranks of her gigantic ferns.

Her mood is never as placid and sane as in the north. There is a tree in the Hawaiian woods that suggests a tree gone mad. It is called the hau tree. It lies down, squirms and wriggles all over the ground like a wounded snake. It gets up and then takes to earth again. Now it wants to be a vine; now it wants to be a tree. It throws somersaults; it makes itself into loops and rings; it rolls; it reaches; it doubles upon itself. Altogether it is the craziest vegetable growth I ever saw.

It was near Pali that I saw what I had never seen or heard of before—a waterfall reversed, going up instead of down. It suggested Stockton's story of negative gravity.

A small brook comes down off the mountain and attempts to make the leap down a high precipice, but the wind catches it and carries it straight up in the air like smoke. It is translated. It becomes a mere wraith hovering about the beetling crag.

Night and day this goes on, the wind snatching from the mountains in this summery way the water it has brought them.—Century Magazine.

Extraordinary Seed.

A farmer who mainly out of curiosity had grown a crop of flax had a tablecloth made out of it. Some time later he remarked to a lady visitor at dinner, "I grew this tablecloth myself." "Did you really?" she said, apparently much astonished. "How did you manage it?" It was plain from her tone that she had no idea how tablecloths came into existence, so the farmer lowered his voice mysteriously as he replied, "If you'll promise not to tell any one I'll tell you." The lady promised. "Well," proceeded the farmer still in the same mysterious tone, "I planted a napkin!"

DOMINION NOTES

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—Among other interesting items in the public accounts report out to-day is the issue of Dominion notes. The total issue for the year was forty millions which is seven millions less than the year before. A good deal of cleaning up was done, over thirty-three millions being received and destroyed, or more than twice as much as the year previous. The coin factory has had a busy year stamping King George on silver and bronze to the value of about a million and a half dollars. Gold coin was made to about the same amount. In spite of hard times there is a good deal of money around Canada, even if not much of it is loose. At the close of the year there were bills out to the value of over a hundred and twelve million dollars in gold. The Government had locked up ninety-eight millions.

GETTING EVEN WITH HUBBY.

A young married couple of Baltimore recently had a dispute concerning the biscuit served for breakfast. The husband offered certain tart observations touching his wife's culinary ability, referring of course, to the "kind that mother used to make."

This sally moved his wife to action, with the result that the next morning she set before the complaining husband a plate of hot biscuits alleged to be the real thing.

"Now you've hit it!" exclaimed he after disposing of one biscuit. "These biscuits are exactly the sort my mother used to make. How did you happen to hit upon the recipe?"

"I am happy to inform you," said his wife, with glittering eyes, "that I employed oleo for butter, used cold-storage eggs, dropped a bit of alum in the flour, and adulterated the milk. Remember, sweetheart, that mother lived before the enactment of the pure food law."

SEASONABLE POULTRY NOTES

Working in a clean, dry litter now will hasten the laying of your early pullets.

Don't forget that you must have a clean house if you are to have success with the hens this winter.

The best time to resand floors is in August or September, but it is not too late now if you can obtain dry sand.

Much benefit is likely to result, without any possible harm, if the hens are compelled to work in clean litter for their grain at all seasons.

Fresh sand or gravel is absolutely necessary to the comfort of the hens this winter. Cover wooden or cement floors at least three inches deep and earth floors from six to twelve inches.

Collect a barrel or two of fine road dust. A bushel of this in a large box or frame, in a sunny location in the hen house will be greatly enjoyed by the fowls and will help to keep down the number of body lice.

A supply of green feed for the winter should be looked after now, as vegetable and root crops can be bought cheaper now than later.

Cabbages, beets and mangels make ideal greens for hens during the winter. Small potatoes an sprouted apples are also relished, particularly when the fowls are confined to their indoor quarters.

Keep the birds indoors these cold mornings until the frost is off the ground. It will save many a chill and prevent many cases of colds and roup.

As soon as it becomes necessary to confine the flock to the house most of the time, provide a deep litter of straw or leaves. Rye straw is the best as it is tough and lasts a long time. If nothing else is available cut corn stalks can be used.

Hens should be dusted with insect powder occasionally but the presence of a good dust bath will make these occasions far fewer. Mix about one pound of powdered sulphur with each bushel of dust for the best results.

Refill the nests with straw or excelsior, and dust the pullets and hens thoroughly with insect powder. Repeat this application in a week or 10 days, for the nests especially. This should effectually destroy all body lice and these pests should not bother the birds for some time especially if in addition to the dust bath a handful of sulphur or insect powder is put into each nest.

Free Pats for Belly to Every Little Gir

We intended to answer all the letters that the little girls sent telling us what they wanted Santa to bring to them on Christmas. De did answer a large number of them, but we found that the letters were coming in so fast and so numerously that it would be impossible to answer them all.

However, we invite every little girl to come to TOY LAND with their mother and we will give to every little girl a doll's pattern free.

Tell all your litle friends, we have a pattern here for every little girl in and around Peterborough.

THERE WILL BE NO CHARGE

Two Letters Picked at Random to SANTA

Dear Santa Claus:—

It is near Christmas and if I write to ask you perhaps you will bring me a nice doll for a present. Mr. Elliott is going to give me a pattern of a nice dress to make for her and in the picture it looks very nice and if I can make one like it I shall be very pleased. I like making my dollie's clothes. I have got a little sister who would like one too. Good-bye Father Christmas.

From Your Loving,
Little Friend.

Dear Santa Claus:—

I am a little girl, seven years old. I wish you would come to see me for you're such a jolly old fellow.

I want a great many things for Christmas. Are you coming in a sleigh with reindeers? If you come down our chimney we won't put any fire on.

Dear Santa, how do you get down the little chimney when you are so fat?

One thing I do want is a leather doll carriage. Of course I want candies and nuts.

Are you very rich Santa? You must be to give so many little girls and boys toys.

Good-bye Dear Santa.

Thinkin' of Christmas and givin' things,
And, somehow, it ever and allus brings
The old times back and their quiet ways

That every chick of us—girl an' boy—
Took in the package that 'mid the stir
We'd marked "To Mother," an' fixed for her.

All of us give each other things,
And they were the days, indeed, of wings
That lifted above us and sheltered all
In their love like they knew there was grief to fall,
An' partin's to come, and sorrow to quell,
The chaw of the old time Christmas spell,
But none of the givin' was just like this,
The gift "To Mother," with all its bliss!

Weeks of wonderin' what we should buy,
An' talkin' an' figurin', tryin to try
To get together as much as we Could dare to spend; an the softest glee
An' sweetest wisperin'; now an' then
Openin' the package to peep again
After we'd tied it and set it there,
Marked "To Mother," beside her chair.
Allus opened our own things first
To show around, er we might have burst;
But allus saved to the very last—
In them Christmas morns that have vanished fast—
The gift for mother; because 'twas fine
To watch her smile, and her eyes ashine,
An' keep her guessin' an' wonderin' clear
Till the last cord fell and she cried "Oh, dear!"

Heard uv tears that were shed, no doubt,
For happiness? When her'n rolled out
We knew what it meant for one to cry
For joy—an' it made not only the eye
But the heart to weep, like a gladness come
With a flood through the mark of life, its scum,
And flow all round in a crystal stream
Through that gift "To Mother" in days of dream!

WOMEN'S COUNCIL ASK THAT A POLICE WOMAN BE APPOINTED HERE

Petition is Being Circulated for Signatures and Will Be Presented to the Authorities in a Short Time---Protection for Women and Girls.

Through their representative body the Women's Council stand for morality and health, and maintain that the safeguarding of the moral life of our boys and girls has first claim upon public funds. They maintain that since about one-half of our population consists of women and girls, many of whom are now a part of the working world, and new and permanent social conditions are thereby created, they are legitimately entitled to the kind of police protection which women believe will be most effective. Having at hand convincing proof of the success of this line of procedure in other cities, they are therefore agitating for the appointment of a Police Woman, and are circulating the following petition for signatures:

To the Police Commissioners of the City of Peterborough—

Gentlemen,—Whereas in the judgment of many, the time has come when a considerable addition should be made to the police force of the City.

Whereas, since about one-half of the population consists of women and girls, many of whom are now a part of the working world, and new and permanent social conditions are thereby created, they are legitimately entitled to the kind of police protection which women feel will be most effective.

Whereas, the very presence of a Police Woman would protect women and children leaving factories, stores, theatres, and picture-shows, from being accosted, and also prove a safe-guard in parks, stations and the local courts, where loafers congregate.

Whereas, except in hardened cases, women and girls who are involved in questionable and guilty conduct, will naturally tell their story much more readily to a Police Woman than a Policeman, for consultation and advice, and a woman in authority could more easily bring pressure to bear to secure proper conduct.

Whereas in the testimony of Police Inspectors who have had the services of a Police Woman, that: "None can deal so well with women as women; they can always get the desired information from women that a man cannot, in many cases."—Staff Inspector Robert Gregory, Toronto.

"Our opinion is that they will be of a very great service in detecting and preventing breaches of the law that would otherwise escape the notice of the men on the force.....and in saving young people from entering upon a career of crime."—Chairman Police Commissioners, Ottawa.

Therefore, we, the undersigned voters of the City of Peterborough would pray your honourable body to have a woman, with full police powers, appointed to the police force of Peterborough.

ANOTHER TROLLEY LINE.

This One to Run North from Cobourg To Reach Havelock.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 18. — The proposal has been revived to build a railway between Cobourg and Havelock and take in Warkworth. The question has been brought up so often and nothing resulted, that people are becoming somewhat cynical on the matter, but the district needs the line and, if the present promoters show that they mean business they will receive hearty support.

EDITORIAL

Looking at the advertising in some Outside City papers just now, one would think you could buy Furs at half their regular price, which is obviously an untruth. One has only to have these goods sent down on approval, and to look carefully into their merits, to find, in our own City, without any cutting in price, in many instances, that they can get better values in Furs.

We don't pose as a philanthropic institution, yet any article in Fur that is now being advertised in these "Slaughter Sales of Furs" can be had at Barrie's at equally as low prices and in some cases lower prices. The values quoted in a great many of these Furs are largely mere fiction, or else they are "Out-of-Style" Furs which any one would be glad to dispose of at a loss.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

I complied with his request with as much modesty as possible. But it was hard to suppress all triumph in face of the unrestrained enthusiasm with which he received my communication. When I told him of the doubts I had formed in regard to the disposal of the packages brought from the Hotel D——, and how to settle those doubts I had taken that midnight walk down Twenty-seventh Street, he looked astonished, his lips worked, and I really expected to see him try to pluck that flower up from the carpet, he gazed it so lovingly. But when I mentioned the lighted laundry and my discoveries there, his admiration burst all bounds, and he cried out, seemingly to the rose in the carpet, really to the Inspector:

"Didn't I tell you she was a woman in a thousand? See now! we ought to have thought of that laundry ourselves; but we didn't, none of us did; we were too credulous and too easily satisfied with the evidence given at the inquest. Well, I'm seventy-seven, but I'm not too old to learn Proceed, Miss Butterworth."

I admired him and I was sorry for him, but I never enjoyed myself so much in my whole life. How could I help it, or how could I prevent myself from throwing a glance now and then at the picture of my father smiling upon me from the opposite wall?

It was my task now to mention the advertisement I had inserted in the newspapers, and the reflections which had led to my rather daring description of the wandering woman as one dressed thus and so, and without a hat. This seemed to strike him—as I had expected it would,—and he interrupted me with a quick slap of his leg, for which only that leg was prepared.

"Good!" he ejaculated; "a fine stroke! The work of a woman of genius! I could not have done better myself, Miss Butterworth. And what came of it? Something, I hope; talent like yours should not go unrewarded."

"Two letters came of it," said I, "one from Cox, the milliner, saying that a bareheaded girl had bought a hat in his shop early on the morning designated; and another from a Mrs. Desberger appointing a meeting at which I obtained a definite clue to this girl, who, notwithstanding she wore Mrs. Van Burnam's clothes from the scene of tragedy, is not Mrs. Van Burnam herself, but a person by the name of Oliver, now to be found at Mr. Althorpe's house in Twenty-first Street."

As this was in a measure putting the matter into their hands, I saw them both grow impatient in their anxiety to see this girl for themselves. But I kept them for a few minutes longer while I related my discovery of the money in her shoes, and hinted at the explanation it afforded for her not changing those articles under the influence of the man who accompanied her.

This was the last blow I dealt to the pride of Mr. Gryce. He quivered under it, but soon recovered, and was able to enjoy what he called another fine point in this remarkable case.

But the acme of his delight was reached when I informed him of my ineffectual search for the rings, and by final conclusion that they had been wound up in the ball of yarn attached to her knitting-work.

Whether his pleasure lay chiefly in the talent shown by Miss Oliver in her choice of a hiding-place for these jewels, or in the acumen displayed by myself in discovering it, I do not know; but he evinced an unbounded satisfaction in my words, crying aloud:

"Beautiful! I don't know of anything more interesting! We have not seen the like in years! I can almost congratulate myself upon my mistakes, the features of the case they have brought out are so fine!"

But his satisfaction, great as it was, soon gave way to his anxiety to see this girl who, if not the criminal herself, was so important a factor in this great crime.

I was anxious myself to have him see her, though I feared her condition was not such as to promise him any immediate enlightenment on the doubtful portions of this far from thoroughly mastered problem. And I bade him interview the Chinaman also, and Mrs. Desberger, and even Mr. Boppert, for I did not wish him to take for granted anything I had said, though I saw he had lost his attitude of disdain and was inclined to accept my opinions quite seriously.

He answered in quite an off-hand manner while the Inspector stood by, but when that gentleman had withdrawn towards the door, Mr. Gryce remarked with more earnestness than he had yet used:

"You have saved me from committing a folly, Miss Butterworth. If I had arrested Franklin Van Burnam to-day, and to-morrow all these facts had come to light, I should never have held up my head again. As it is, there will be numerous insinuations uttered by men on the force, and many a whisper will go about that Gryce is getting old, that Gryce has seen his best days."

"Nonsense!" was my vigorous rejoinder. "You didn't have the clue, that is all. Nor did I get it through any keenness on my part, but from the force of circumstances. Mrs. Boppert thought herself indebted to me, and so gave me her confidence. Your laurels are very safe yet. Besides, there is enough work left on this case to keep more than one great detective like you busy. While the Van Burnams have not been proved guilty, they are not so freed from suspicion that you can regard your task as completed. If Ruth Oliver committed this crime, which of these two brothers was involved in it with her? The facts seem to point towards Franklin, but no so unerringly that no doubt is possible on the subject."

"True, true. The mystery has deepened rather than cleared. Miss Butterworth, you will accompany me to Miss Althorpe's?"

XXXIII.

"Known, Known, All Known."

Mr. Gryce possesses one faculty for which I envy him, and that is his skill in the management of people. He had not been in Miss Althorpe's house five minutes before he had won her confidence and had everything he wished at his command. I had to talk some time before getting so far, but he—a word and a look did it.

Miss Oliver, for whom I hesitated to inquire, lest I should again find her gone or in a worse condition than when I left, was in reality better, and as we went upstairs I allowed myself to hope that the questions which had so troubled us would soon be answered and the mystery ended.

But Mr. Gryce evidently knew better, for when we reached her door he turned and said:

"Our task will not be an easy one. Go in first and attract her attention so that I can enter unobserved. I wish to study her before addressing her; but, mind, no words about the murder; leave that to me."

I nodded, feeling that I was falling back into my own place, and knocking softly entered the room.

A maid was sitting with her. Seeing me, she rose and advanced, saying:

"Miss Oliver is sleeping."

"Then I will relieve you," I returned, beckoning Mr. Gryce to come in.

The girl left us and we two contemplated the sick woman silently. Presently I saw Mr. Gryce shake his head. But he did not tell me what he meant by it.

Following the direction of his finger, I sat down in a chair at the head of the bed; he took his station at the side of it in a large arm-chair he saw there. As he did so I saw how fatherly and kind he really looked, and wondered if he was in the habit of so preparing himself to meet the eye of all the suspected criminals he encountered. The thought made me glance again her way. She lay like a statute, and her face, naturally round but now thinned out and hollow, looked up from the pillow in pitiful quiet, the long lashes accentuating the dark places under her eyes.

A sad face, the saddest I ever saw and one of the most haunting.

He seemed to find it so also, for his expression of benevolent interest deepened with every passing moment, till suddenly stirred: then he gave me a warning glance, and stooping, took her by the wrist and pulled out his watch.

She was deceived by the action. Opening her eyes, she surveyed him languidly for a moment, then heaving a great sigh, turned aside her head.

"Don't tell me I am better, doctor. I do not want to live."

The plaintive tone, the refined accent, seemed to astonish him. Laying down her hand, he answered, gently:

"I do not like to hear that from such young lips, but it assures me that I was correct in my surmise that it is not medicine you need but a friend. And I can be that friend if you will but allow me."

Moved, encouraged for the instant, she turned her head from side to side, probably to see if they were alone, and not observing me, answered softly:

"You are very good, very thoughtful, doctor, but"—and here her despair returned again—"it is useless you can do nothing for me."

"You think so," remonstrated the old detective, "but you do not know me, child. Let me show you that I can be of benefit to you." And he drew from his pocket a little package which he opened before her astonished eyes. "Yesterday, in your delirium, you left these rings in an office downtown. As they are valuable, I brought them back to you. Wasn't I right, my child?"

"No! no!" She started up, and her accents betrayed terror and anguish. "I do not want them; I cannot bear to see them; they do not belong to me; they belong to them."

"To them? Whom do you mean by them?" queried Mr. Gryce, insinuatingly.

"The—the Van Burnams. Is not that the name? Oh, do not make me talk; I am so weak! Only take the rings back."

"I will, child, I will." Mr. Gryce's voice was more than fatherly now, it was tender, really and sincerely tender. "I will take them back; but to which of the brothers shall I return them? To"—he hesitated softly—"to Franklin or to Howard?"

I expected to hear her respond, his manner was so gentle and apparently sincere. But though feverish and on the verge of wildness, she had still some command over herself, and after giving him a look, the intensity of which called out a corresponding expression on his face, she faltered out:

"I—I don't care; I don't know either of the gentlemen; but to the one you call Howard, I think."

The pause which followed was filled by the tap-tap of Mr. Gryce's fingers on his knee.

"That is the one who is in custody," he observed at last. "The other, that is Franklin, has gone scot-free thus far, I hear."

No answer frm her close-shut lips.

He waited.

Still no answer.

"If you do not know either of these gentlemen," he insinuated at last, "how did you come to leave the rings at their office?"

"I knew their names—I inquired my way — It is all a dream now. Please, please do not ask me questions. O doctor, do you not see I cannot bear it?"

He smiled—I never could smile like that under any circumstances—and softly patted her hand.

"I see it makes you suffer," he acknowledged, "but I must make you suffer in order to do you any good. If you would tell me all you know about these rings—"

She passionately turned away her head.

"I might hope to restore you to health and happiness. You know with what they are associated?"

She made a slight motion.

"And that they are an invaluable clue to the murderer of Mrs. Van Burnam?"

Another motion.

"How then, my child, did you come to have them?"

Her head, which was rolling to and fro on the pillow, stopped and she gasped, rather than uttered:

"I was there."

He knew this, yet it was terrible to hear it from her lips; she was so young and had such an air of purity and innocence. But more heartrending yet was the groan with which she burst forth in another moment, as if impelled by conscience to unburden herself from some overwhelming load:

"I took them; I could not help it; but I did not keep them; you know that I did not keep them. I am no thief, doctor; whatever I am, I am no thief."

"Yes, yes, I see them. But why take them, child? What were you doing in that house, and whom were you with?"

She threw up her arms, but made no reply.

"Will you not tell?" he urged.

A short silence, then a low "No," evidently wrung from her by the deepest anguish.

Mr. Gryce heaved a sigh; the struggle was likely to be a more serious one than he had anticipated.

"Miss Oliver," said he, "more facts are known in relation to this affair than you imagine. Though unsuspected at first, it has secretly been proved that the man who accompanied the woman into the house where thec rime took place, was Franklin Van Burnam."

A low gasp from the bed, and that was all.

"You know this to be correct, don't you, Miss Oliver?"

"O must you ask?" She was writhing now, and I thought he must desist out of pure compassion. But detectives are made out of very stern stuff, and though he looked sorry he went inexorably on.

THE WAY TO PREVENT COLD WEATHER DISEASES

There would be lots less sickness during cold weather if folks would only take ordinary common-sense precautions against it. When you hear there is small-pox around, you don't lose much time in getting your family vaccinated. But lots of you do not see the same good sense in preventing colds, the grippe, bronchitis, pneumonia, typhoid fever, rheumatism and other diseases, some of them very serious and dangerous, and some of which nearly every member of your family is almost sure to suffer from before winter is over unless some medicine is taken to build up the body and put it in perfect order before cold weather sets in.

Vaccination prevents the growth of germs of small-pox in the blood, and puts the system into a proper healthy condition to resist small-pox. Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is designed as an aid to prevent as well as relieve disease. It strengthens the body to overcome the germs and helps to put your system into the right condition to resist disease. It contains the four Hypophosphites recommended by physicians to tone the nerves and blood, in combination with purest Olive Oil, to nourish and strengthen them.

You who are weak and run-down, and you who are apparently well now, but are liable to suffer from various cold weather ailments, use Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion to get and keep well and strong. For the tired-out, run-down, nervous, emaciated or debilitated—the convalescing—growing children—aged people—it is a sensible aid to renewed strength, better spirits, glowing health.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion—king of the celebrated Rexall Remedies—is for freedom from sickness of you and your family. Pleasant-tasting, containing no alcohol or dangerous drugs, you'll be as enthusiastic about it as we are when you have noted its strengthening, invigorating, building-up, disease-preventing effects. If it does not help you, your money will be given back to you without argument. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of more than 7,000 leading drug stores in the United States, Canada and Great Britain.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

ECZEMA.

All skin diseases such as Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Rash, Boils, Pimples, and Itching Skin Eruptions, are always caused from the blood being in a bad condition, and it is impossible to eradicate them from the system unless you put your blood into good shape. This you can very easily do without the slightest trouble by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

It drives out all the humor from the blood, and makes it pure and rich, and not only are the unsightly diseases removed, and a bright clean complexion produced, but the entire system is renovated and invigorated at the same time.

Mrs. G. A. Day, Somerville, N.B., writes:—"Last spring I had a bad attack of Eczema. I tried several patent medicines as well as the medicine of a physician, but they seemed to make the disease worse. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and I did so with the result that in two weeks time the sores began to disappear. I continued to take it until I had taken three bottles and they worked a complete cure."

Here It Is:

The lager with the "Old German" flavor—the brisk, bracing brew that beer-connoisseurs speak so highly of. If you're not an "Old German" enthusiast, it's time you were.

Just let your next beer order be a Peacock Green bottle of Kuntz's Old German Lager.

Bovril is the only beef preparation which has been proved to possess this remarkable virtue. Bovril "Cordial" is splendid for physical endurance, and a bottle should be taken on all sporting parties; as it is already in liquid form it can be made in a moment. ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

Santa Claus' Treasure Box

By J. F. HENDERSON

Copyright, 1913

CHRISTMAS was at hand, and Philip Draper's heart was heavy. For a number of years he had seemed to be the particular pet of misfortune. As an artist his work displayed the magic touch of genius, and he was in a fair way to achieve fame and worldly success when the first of a series of calamities befell him. Soon after Philip's marriage to pretty Lucille Girard, his father failed in business and died within a month thereafter, leaving nothing but a mass of debts as a legacy to his son.

Philip, who had just been taken into partnership with his father, and whose outlook on the future was tinged with the color of the rose, was crushed by this blow; but with a quixotic sense of duty he set himself the tremendous task of paying off the debts of the firm. To accomplish this he had nothing to depend upon but the sale of his pictures; yet, year in and year out, he toiled on stubbornly and uncomplainingly, while he and Lucille and their little boy were deprived of many of the comforts of life that the bulk of his earnings might go to his creditors. The house in which they lived was a roomy old mansion on the outskirts of the city, left to Philip by a maiden aunt, who had passed away since the death of his father, and which Lucille had persuaded him not to sell. This house, by the way, had originally belonged to an eccentric old sea captain, Jeremiah Suggs by name, who was reputed to be something of a miser, and who lived and died a recluse.

The crowning calamity came to Philip Draper when the debt was all but cleared off. It was then he was overtaken by a wasting illness, which kept him confined to his bed for almost a year, and leaving him destitute. The butcher and the baker threatened to deny him further credit, and his home was heavily mortgaged. The outlook was gloomy.

"And tomorrow is Christmas," he remarked to his wife, with a grim smile.

"Never mind, dear; let us hold fast to our courage," said Mrs. Draper, trying to speak cheerfully, though there was an ominous quaver in her voice.

"What hurts me most is the thought that Christmas is so close at hand and that there will be no Santa Claus for Bobby."

"Poor, little dear!" said Mrs. Draper. Suddenly she started up with an anxious glance about the room. "I wonder where that child can be? I haven't seen him for at least two hours."

"Oh, don't be alarmed. I dare say he is rummaging about in the cellar or attic or some out-of-the-way closet, and is wholly absorbed in his investigations."

Mr. Draper had hardly finished speaking when Bobby popped into the room, held out a grimy little fist, and, as he opened the chubby fingers, revealed a twenty-dollar gold piece lying on his upturned palm.

"Money!" gasped Philip. He snatched the coin and examined it critically. "Where did you get this? What does it mean?"

"I found it in the attic!" explained Bobby. "There are lots more there. Come on, I'll show you where."

The next moment the father and mother, each grasping a hand of the frightened youngster, were hastening up the stairs. When they reached the attic the whole astounding truth was laid bare to them. Bobby had been rummaging, as usual. Finding a loose brick in the crumbling masonry of the big chimney, he had pulled it out and made a startling discovery.

"I wanted to find out how Santa Claus comes down the chimney," said the boy, regretfully. "I didn't mean to do any harm—"

An exclamation from his father interrupted him. Philip, tearing away the bricks to enlarge the opening, had thrust his arm into the cavity and drawn forth two small boxes, accompanied by a shower of yellow coins. Among them was a scrap of paper on which was written:

"I have no heirs, no kith nor kin. This property goes to the finder, and may he enjoy it. It consists of $30,000 in gold and government bonds, and twice that amount in coins.

"JEREMIAH SUGGS."

Bobby was the hero of the hour, and the rejoicing that followed may better be imagined than described. Was it a merry Christmas for the Drapers? Ask Bobby, who firmly believes he found Santa Claus' treasure box.

HOISTING APPARATUS

Multiple Gear Revolves the Shaft Which Wraps up Chain

For the hoisting of heavy weights by hand, so to speak, the mechanism pictured here seems to be effective. An iron frame has a multiple gearing set inside it, the gear operated by means of a lever. The revolution of the wheels turns a horizontal shaft over which the lifting chain is wound.

EASY TO LOCK THE WHEELS.

As the shaft revolves and more and more of the chain is wound up the weight on the free end is naturally lifted. A feature of this mechanism is the locking device, which consists of a short chain that can be hooked onto the lever at any time to prevent backward revolution. This is particularly convenient in case the man or men turning the lever should want to stop a moment to rest or for any other purpose.

GUARDING AN EMPEROR

Great Precautions Taken to Prevent Harm to the Kaiser

The following serves to show how the German Emperor is looked after even when he travels a very short distance.

During what did not seem to be a very perilous passage from Hamburg to Cronberg on the part of the Kaiser trotting orderlies went up and down the road. Soldiers were stationed at intervals. Pedestrians on the way to Cronberg were turned back. Travellers by carriage were examined, and allowed to proceed if they proved to harbor no nefarious designs.

The imperial equipage passed at night. First there came a mounted escort, then soldiers on foot. Five minutes later more mounted men appeared; and then what seemed to be intoxicated motor cyclists, swaying from side to side; but these men were merely swooping from one side of the road to the other, and scanning the ground by the light of their vivid acetylene lamps. They were looking for bombs.

Behind the motor cyclists were other mounted soldiers, and then came the royal conveyance. It passed in a flash of light, not only from the speed it was maintaining, but because of a huge electric light hung at the end of the pole. This served a double purpose. It illuminated the way, and made those so brightly that the eyes of any assassin would have been so dazzled by it that he could hardly have got a correct aim.

CHRISTMAS IS A PROPHECY

It Forecasts the Perfect Social Conditions Which Will Fulfill the Promises of Christ.

Christmas is not only a fact commemorating the one sacred festival in the world's calendar, but the glorious prophecy of a coming day, surpassing all the brightest social dreams that have ever visited the most enraptured human mind. He dwarfs, on this human nature side, from kings and peasants, from saints and sinners. He is yet to lift every peasant to the kingliest throne of character and transform the chief of sinners into the holiest of saints. He allied Himself with poverty and the common people. He is yet to banish poverty with all its ills, from this world, and to give to common humanity their princely sovereignty. He married with His hands for His daily bread. He is yet to dignify and glorify in the thought of mankind all honest toil. He honored woman with His sympathetic and appreciative regard. He is yet to remove her from every form of serfdom created by the past ages. He took little children in His arms and blessed them. He is yet to make blessed the child life in every welcoming home. He gave His peace to His distracted disciples. He is yet to make wars cease unto the end of the earth. He united His brethren with Himself and His Father in one unbroken household. He is yet to make every man a brother to his fellow-man and at one with his Father in Heaven.

Troubled With Weak Back and Kidneys For 10 Years.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Take notice to the warning and cure the backache on the first sign, for if you don't do this, serious complications are sure to arise and perhaps develop into Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills will strengthen the weak back, and prevent any form of kidney trouble entering the system.

Mrs. Ed. Boyer, Nokomis, Sask., writes:—"I have been troubled with weak back and kidneys. I had terrible dizzy headaches, and could not sleep at night. In this way I suffered for ten years, until I read about Doan's Kidney Pills. I purchased two boxes, and as they helped me, I sent for two more; they put me on my feet, and I have been able to work ever since."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Notice is hereby given that a Quarterly Dividend for the three (3) months ending 31 Dec. 1913 at the rate of ten per cent. (10%) per annum has been declared upon the Capital Stock of this institution, and the same will be payable at the offices of the Company in this City on and after Meerschaum and the Turks.

Meerschaum used to be considered a mere curiosity by the Turks, who had no other use for it than as a substitute for fuller's soap. The story runs that the Turkish ambassador at the Austrian court in the eighteenth century was a native of Eski Scheir. Wanting to help his city at a time of great poverty, he took a sample of this queer stuff to Vienna, thinking that the "Franks," as all foreigners were then called, might have some use for it. The Germans were quick to see its utility for pipe bowls, but declared that it was good for nothing else. More than a century has confirmed this judgment. For who has yet discovered any other use for meerschaum? For pipe making it is an ideal raw material. Here is a stone which is easily moulded when wet, and when dry becomes hard and resists fire.

A Mystery Solved.

"Why do they call this place a reformatory?"

"Because once upon a time a boy was sent here and he reformed." New York Times.

The Scot's Consolation.

He was a frugal Scot, and when the collection plate came round he dropped in a florin in mistake for the humble copper. Speedily discovering his mistake, however, he stopped softly down the aisle and requested the collector to give him back the coin, which request was politely but firmly refused. A shade of disappointment flitted o'er the northerner's face as he walked slowly back to his pew. "Aweel," he said, "it's a' loss, but there's some sma' consolation in reflectin' it's a bad one. It might have got me into trouble anywhere else."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Constructively "She."

In a well known college for women where the faculty consists chiefly of the gentler sex a meeting of the academic council was in progress. Here and there a lone man sat islanded in the concourse of learned ladies. An amendment had just been proposed.

"Where is the person who offers this amendment?" inquired the president. "Who is she?"

Whereupon Mr. Flower, the popular young professor of a favorite subject, rose and replied deprecatingly, "I am she."—Youth's Companion.

Between Governors.

When the late Senator Bob Taylor was governor of Tennessee he received a letter from an inmate of the Missouri state penitentiary. His correspondent pleaded that his name, too, was Taylor; claimed kinship with the governor and begged him to use his influence with Governor Francis of Missouri to obtain a pardon. A short time afterward Governor Francis received the following letter from Governor Bob:

My Dear Governor Francis—You've got a fellow over there in your penitentiary named Taylor, who says he's kin to me, and wants me to help him get out. If you see your way clear to do it, I wish you would turn him loose, and I will do your humbug over act in the same manner to return the favor.

THE VALUE OF AN ARTICLE

By RUTH CAMERON

Reduced to its lowest terms, the real measure of the value of an article to any person is his need of it or desire for it.

If a man were wrecked on a desert island with a pocket full of hundred dollar bills and no matches, he would willingly give some of those bills for a box of matches.

If you discovered late in the evening that you hadn't a stamp to put on that important letter which you had just finished and which must be mailed that night you would surely be glad to pay many times its price for a stamp.

An ingenious friend of mine, who has not a great deal of Christmas money at her disposal, is going to give several unique gifts this year whose price will be comparatively small but whose value measured in the way I have just described, she hopes will be large. She calls them emergency boxes. She buys a pretty box varying in size according to the articles she intends to put in it and fills it with some of these little everyday articles whose absence at a time when one needs them very much and when one is not in a position to get hold of them, often causes so much inconvenience and vastly enhances their value.

The nature of these articles varies, of course, according to the person for whom they are intended. The idea came to her one day last winter, when one of her friends missed a train because she broke her shoe string at the last moment, and spent some time vainly hunting for another string and more in changing her shoes. "I would have given a dollar for another pair of shoe strings just then," said the girl, and my friend with this vision of the degree to which conditions may enhance values, conceived the idea of the emergency box and began to study her various friends to find out what their particular emergencies might be.

Of course there isn't space to tell you what went into each box, but below is a list of the contents of one of them:

Two pair of of shoe strings, one for high and one for low shoes.
Half a dozen two-cent stamps.
Half a dozen one-cent stamps.
Half a dozen post cards.
Two collar buttons.
A box of the particular brand of hair pins the recipient uses.

Each set of articles is marked "To be used only in case of emergency, and replaced." There is room in the box for other articles if the recipient cares to extend the scope of the emergency box.

Of course there are some people who would simply use up the articles without waiting for the emergency. But there are others who would do as the donor intended and keep them for an emergency fund. And when the emergency came they would surely bless the donor as heartily as for a much more expensive gift.

For the real measure of the value of an article to any person is his need of it.

DUTIES OF BRITISH MAYORS

Chief Magistrates Have Many Odd Customs to Observe

Many strange duties devolve upon Mayors. The Chief Magistrate of Cardiff has to present a dowry, left by the late Marquis of Bute. It is the interest on $5,000, to be paid annually to "some poor girl in Cardiff whose marriage might be impeded for the want of such a sum." In presenting the dowry, the Mayor has to remind the bride and bridegroom of the origin of the foundation, which was to commemorate the silver wedding of the late Marquis, and then reads to them "the Biblical story of the marriage of Cana of Galilee."

Some towns have mayoral rings. At Lincoln it is customary for the Chief Magistrate to send his ring to the headmaster when he requests that the boys of the Grammar School may have a half-holiday.

An old custom dating from the twelfth century is the sending of four fat deer from one of the Royal parks to the Lord Mayor of London, and on November 9th he receives a dish of sprats from Aldeburgh, and that ushers in the sprat season.

The Mayor of Colchester makes an annual trip on the river, and acts as dredger on the oyster beds, then the season's oyster rush begins.

SHEEP'S HEAD BARBER

Famous Scotch Engineer Had a Peculiar Side Line

While working as an apprentice in his early days to a blacksmith at Paisley, that great captain of industry, Sir William Arrol, builder of those monuments of engineering skill, the Tay and Forth Bridges, augmented the pittance paid to him in a quaint and curious manner. North of the Tweed the national dish, second only to haggis itself, is "singit sheep's head." Before the head is cooked it is necessary to singe off the wool carefully with a red-hot iron, and it is the privilege of the "barber," as the one who performs this function is termed, to enjoy the perquisites arising from it.

According to Sir Robert Purvis, who relates the incident in a memoir of Sir William Arrol, the great engineer acquired the reputation of being an operator of "singular care and completeness," and the worthy people of Paisley were in the habit of securing his services for the operation.

As a result of his work as the sheep's head barber, Arrol was able to add eight or ten cents to his weekly earnings, and with these he "was able to pay for stockings and braces and bonnets, and before all for lessons at night schools in reading, writing, and arithmetic"—lessons which laid the foundation of his wonderful and unique career.

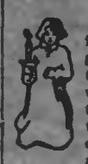
What Christmas Means.



Christmas means hope and its realization. The child grows eagerly expectant as the time approaches for the visit of Santa Claus. While this fiction remains unquestioned, the imagination opens new and wider worlds, and ideals become so much a part of the mind that the prosaic and commonplace can never crush them. Until the youth reaches manhood and independence, Christmas is the happiest day of the year. Its gifts and hearty good cheer impress family affection, parental thoughtfulness and brotherly love. The dullest and most irresponsive of fathers and mothers are uplifted to a vision of higher life by the interchanges of souvenirs and the merry meeting with children and grandchildren at the table and fireside. Few can escape and all enjoy the meaning of the festival, the lessons it conveys and the inspiration it gives, and we enter upon a brighter future and a fuller appreciation of the beneficence of the practice of faith, hope and charity. The loved ones who have crossed to the other side, the loved near and far who are still with us, the old homestead with its precious memories, the old church whose sacred associations tie together childhood, maturity and age, love, marriage and death; the schoolhouse where the beginnings of education were so painful, and the ever-increasing pleasures of the pursuit of learning through the high school, academy and college are recalled and recited, and there is exquisite delight in these oft-told tales, and new experiences enliven this blessed anniversary.—Leslie's Weekly.

First Christmas Observance.

Christmas gets its name from the mass celebrated in the early days of the Christian church in honor of the birth of Christ, its first solemnization having been ordered by Pope Telesphorus. This was in or before the year 138, for in that year Pope Telesphorus died.

At first Christmas was what is known as a movable feast, just as Easter is now, and owing to misunderstandings was celebrated as late as April or May. In the fourth century an ecclesiastical investigation was ordered, and upon the authority of the tables of the censors in the Roman archives December 25 was agreed upon as the date of the Savior's nativity. Tradition fixed the hour of birth at about midnight, and this led to the celebration of a midnight mass in all the churches, a second at dawn and a third in the later morning.

Steel Wheels for Motor Trucks

One of the most interesting developments in the steel casting business has been the increase in the use of steel wheels for motor trucks. Automobile engineers have turned their attention to steel because the high quality of wood required for truck wheels is being rapidly exhausted. Also, wood wheels cause a good deal of trouble by variation of size, and cannot be used successfully in very dry climates.

While the cast-steel wheel overcomes all of the above objections, it has the disadvantage of excessive weight, the development of cracks, and it is not resilient as wood.

Protecting Immigrant Girls

A determined effort to stamp out the traffic in immigrant girls, and their exploitation by employment bureaus, is to be made by the Montreal Presbytery. A strong committee of the Presbytery was formed to investigate the entire question, to seek means of protecting the girls, and of correcting the abuses of which they are the victims.

What a Name!

Probably the most interesting string of Christian names given to any child in the United Kingdom is borne by a girl in South Wales. By way of showing their admiration of the Budget the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Prime Minister, this girl's parents named her Budgetta Georgina Asquitha.

France's Foreign Legion.

The French Foreign legion, which is always the cause of so much bad blood in Germany, is the only regiment of its kind in existence. It dates from 1831, when France undertook the conquest of Algeria. It consists of two regiments, each four battalions strong, drawn from all the adventurers of Europe. It is popular not only because no questions are asked, but because promotion is open to all, within limits, and a certain number of the officers have risen from the ranks. All classes are to be found among its members and all nationalities, but the many Germans do not describe themselves as such—they are all Alsatians. The reason for its continued existence is that France cannot spare its men nor find enough who would leave the comforts of civilization for the wastes of Africa or the swamps of Tonkin.—Manchester Guardian.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Historic London Street.

Friday street is one of the most interesting and ancient of the thoroughfares of London. As long ago as 1305 a reference to it appears in the city records, and even then it was probably old. Close by it stood the Naggs Head tavern, which is famous in history as the "pretended" scene of the consecration of Matthew Parker, archbishop of Canterbury, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

The name of Friday street is derived from the fact that in medieval times many fishmongers resided there and held their Friday market in the vicinity. By a strange contrariety of nomenclature the Wednesday club met at a bootery in the street, and there in 1695, under the direction of William Paterson, discussed at great length the proposals which eventuated in the establishment of the Bank of England.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Tariff an Unfair Burden on Farmer, Says Grange

SHOULD VOTE ON NAVY

TORONTO, Dec. 19.—The session of the Dominion Grange yesterday was taken up chiefly with resolutions—several of which were passed without discussion.

A committee was formed to draft a scheme for the best method of improving the roads. The committee submitted the following report which was adopted: "That there should be municipal control of construction and maintenance of highways, subject to regulations by the Public Works Department; that expenditure should be controlled by a commission appointed by the municipalities concerned; that the Provincial Government provide 50 per cent. of the necessary funds by increasing the tax on railways and taxing automobiles according to their horsepower; that cities and towns separated from counties be required to pay 25 per cent of the cost of construction and maintenance; that the balance of the money required be supplied by the municipalities through which the roads pass and the cities, town and villages to which they lead; that federal aid be allotted to municipalities on the basis of assessed values."

An affiliation of the various farmers' associations throughout the province with the Dominion Grange will probably result from the present meeting. A resolution was passed favoring the organization of a co-operative association, and a committee was appointed to advance the project.

The tariff question was dealt with in the following resolution:

"That the protective tariff as it now exists and as it had stood for many years places an unfair burden upon the farming industry for the benefit of the manufacturing industries; that these facts are largely responsible for the conditions which are forcing population from the rural districts into from country to town has now reached urban centres and that this movement from country to town has now reached a point where rural depopulation threatens the whole national fabric, industrial, social, and political." Upon these premises it was resolved "That in justice to agriculture and in the interests of our national life it is imperative that the tariff be so adjusted as to remove in toto the burdens under which agriculture may be made more profitable and attractive and the balance between city and country be restored."

"We recommend a gradual increase of the British preference, such as will lead in a few years to complete free trade with the mother country. Besides serving the economic ends of this country, this would prove of inestimable value to Greater Britain and would best express our loyalty and devotion to the motherland."

Another resolution was "That the present system of Government has outgrown its usefulness, so that it no longer serves to express the will of the people, and it was recommended that the principle of direct legislation through the initiative and referendum be applied to all legislative processes."

On the naval question the following resolution was made: "That the people should be asked by a referendum to pronounce upon three choices — a direct contribution, a Canadian navy, or the maintenance of the present situation, and that the will of the people, as recorded by such referendum, should be followed."

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Master, W. C. Wood, Brantford; overseer, Col. J. Z. Fraser, Burford; secretary, J. J. Morrison, Arthur; lecturer, W. Anderson, Essex; chaplain, F. F. Bainard, Glanworth; steward, G. DeLeau, Essex; assistant steward, F. Pettypiece, Lambton; assistant lady steward, Miss H. Robinson, St. Thomas; gatekeeper, A. E. Mance, Forest; Ceres, Miss Phelp, Whitby; executive committee, W. C. Wood, J. J. Morrison, W. Smith, W. E. Wardell and R. H. Halbert; educational committee, J. J. Morison, E. C. Drury and H. Chapman; legislation committee, Col. Z. Fraser, J. McEwing and S. Fisher.

Leadis! Look Young Darken Grey Hair

Use the Old-time Sage Tea and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know

Grey hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay grey! Look younger! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Remedy." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Wilson Examines New Project.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19. — Postmaster-General Burleson's declaration for the principle of Government ownership of telegraphs and telephones, as outlined in his annual report just made public, undoubtedly will be followed by a Democratic caucus in the House in January which will decide how far the project is to be made an administration policy in Congress.

President Wilson is giving the project careful study, and administration supporters say has not pressed it upon Congress at this time because of the enormous expense involved. A preliminary move will be congressional authorization to the Postmaster-General to make a report on the feasibility of acquiring the lines for a Government monopoly.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Many motorists have been fined here for failure to provide their cars with lights, but the first penalty for carrying too much light was imposed by a police magistrate yesterday. Clifford Schaufel, the owner of the car, was fined $10 under a new law, which forbids motorists to show lights bright enough to dazzle traffic. To determine whether Schaufel's lamps violated the law the magistrate held court Wednesday night on a street corner and had the defendant drive past.

BETWEEN RUNAWAYS.

Baby Girl Has Miraculous Escape From Death on Street.

HAMILTON, Dec. 19.—Traffic on East Barton street was demoralized for a few seconds yesterday afternoon while a runaway team dragged one of Ewing's bread wagons from Ottawa street to Leeming street at breakneck speed. Several narrow escapes were recorded as a result, the closest being that of a little tot at the corner of Lottridge street. An eye-witness saw the maddened horses race, one on either side of the baby girl, all unconscious of her danger. Her escape was nothing short of miraculous. The horses were stopped in an exhausted condition at Leeming street without injury to themselves or the people whose lives were jeopardized.

Another Clue Found.

BRIDGETON, Maine, Dec. 19.—Mrs. Cecil F. Lavell, whose husband, a professor of history at the Ohio State University, disappeared on Nov. 26, received information while searching for him yesterday that a man answering his description was seen recently on the campus of the University of Maine at Orono.

Prof. A. L. Leonard of Bates College, where Prof. Lavell formerly taught, telephoned Mrs. Lavell that the man told a University of Maine student with whom he talked that he was from Ohio University.

When left to itself, eczema, as a rule, runs on indefinitely. Even with careful treatment it is often obstinate in resisting curative measures.

The cause is often difficult to find, but you can readily obtain relief from the dreadful itching by the application of Dr. Chase's Ointment. This treatment cleanses the sores and soon sets up a process of healing which leads to complete cure.

Patient and persistent treatment is necessary in severe cases, but as you can readily see the improvement from day to day as Dr. Chase's Ointment is applied you will be encouraged to keep on until you have driven out the disease and restored natural, healthy skin.

Attention to the genral health is advisable in order that the cure may be lasting, but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to stop the itching and heal the skin. So well does it accomplish this that many cures it brings about are almost like miracles. Put it to the test and you will be surprised and delighted with the results.

KARLUK TOO FRAGILE.

Opinion In North Is That Stefansson's Boat Is In Peril.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 19.—Captain Louis Lane of the power schooner Polar Bear, which is frozen in the Arctic Ocean near Flaxman Island, arrived from Valdez by steamer yesterday, accompanied by Eben Draper of Boston, son of ex-Governor Draper of Massachusetts; Dunbar Lockwood, also of Boston, and William T. Hudson, a newspaper photographer.

The men walked from the Arctic shore to Circle City, Fairbanks and Valdez.

George Silby and John Heard, sportsmen, of Boston, and Samuel Mixter, W. Sprague Brooks and Jos. Dickson, scientific collectors, remained on the vessel. The hunters and scientists have had a wonderful season for big game. They might have come out with the Lane party, but preferred to remain and obtain polar bear and musk ox.

Captain Pederson, captain of the schooner Elvira, which was crushed by the Arctic ice, and who walked from the Arctic Ocean to Valdez, also arrived from the north yesterday.

The travelers had no further news of Stefansson's ship Karluk later than that cabled by Stefansson himself, who is ashore and making his way to Herschel Island. The prevailing opinion in the north, according to Captain Lane and Pederson, is that Captain Bartlet and the men on the Karluk are in grave peril because of the fragile construction of their ship, which at last accounts was drifting in the ice pack.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

International Committee on Boats for Liners Ends Its Work.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—The committee on life-saving appliances appointed by the international congress on safety at sea have agreed on their recommendations, which will be submitted to the congress early in January. The principle of "boats for all" has been accepted, subject to the proviso proposed by the British delegates, that where the fullest use is made of the space available for the fittings of davits, pontoon rafts may be provided for 25 per cent. of those aboard, and lifeboats of a recognized type for the remainder. The lifeboats may include a limited number of motor-boats.

TO THE RATEPAYERS OF CENTRE WARD

Ladies and Gentlemen,

May I put before you the fact of my candidature for election as Alderman for Centre Ward. In doing so I venture to hope that I may receive your support.

I make this request proffering to you a thorough acquaintance with needs of the City in the immediate future and such as are likely to come before your Council for consideration and action.

I believe I can be thoroughly useful to you, as a Ratepayer and to the City at large, and should be very glad indeed to have your support in my behalf.

Don't Look Old Before Your Time

WOMAN'S delicate system requires more than ordinary care and attention—more care and attention than it is given by the average woman.

Neglect it and ills soon creep in, and the look of old age, sometimes quickly, sometimes gradually follows.

That backache, so common among women, brings with it the restless sleep, the headache, tired muscles, crow's-feet, and soon the youthful body is no more youthful in appearance—and all because of lack of attention.

There is no reason why you should be so unfortunate, when you have at your disposal a remedy such as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—recommended for over 40 years as a remedy for ailments peculiar to women. We have thousands upon thousands of testimonials on file—the accumulation of 40 years—testifying to its effectiveness. Neither narcotics nor alcohol are to be found in this famous prescription. Regulates and invigorates. Corrects displacements. Overcomes painful periods. Tones up nerves. Brings about perfect health. Sold by dealers in medicines, in liquid or tablet form.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition, answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know.

J. J. Hartley for Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

At the urgent request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914. Being born and lived my whole life in Peterborough, and a whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the city.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure.

I will do my utmost to keep down the ever-increasing rate of taxation, consistent with the needs of the growing municipality.

I may say that I am in favour of municipal ownership, and in favour of having all city work done by our own people, instead of bringing in outsiders to do it. I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended. I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being chairman of that board for two years. I was also chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honour to elect me Mayor of our city, I will do my best to serve you to the very best of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

GILLESPIE for MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro':

Ladies and Gentlemen—At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Alderman for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the Municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my success in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval, I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE

The Precious Greenheart.

Genuine greenheart has the reputation of being the most resistant wood to the attack of marine borers and to decay. Borers are especially bad in tropical waters. The wood is, in addition, hard, heavy and durable, and not subject to damage from impact and wear. Indisputable records show that the best grades of this wood surpass iron and steel as to lasting qualities in contact with salt water. It has been known and used since 1769. Logs have remained intact under water for 100 years.

Lock gates in English canals have been made of it for years, and the only limit of their durability so far has been the length of service of their iron bolts and fastenings which usually can be renewed without much trouble. Greenheart in Liverpool dock gates built in 1856, renewed to allow a deepening and widening of the ship channel in 1894, was used over again when the gates were reconstructed.

Here is the Secret of Long Life

While looking forward to health and long life it is possible that you are unaware of the conditions necessary to attain healthful old age. Careful eating, and consequent preservation of the health and vitality of the digestive and excretory organs, is of the greatest importance.

Overeating is the usual cause of torpid, sluggish liver action, and when the liver fails additional work is thrown on the kidneys and they break down. Kidney disorders are the great source of suffering in old age. Rheumatism, bodily pains, aching arms and legs, backache and lumbago are the result.

By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to regulate the liver, kidneys and bowels, as occasion requires, you not only overcome the suffering, incompetency and unpleasantness of [illegible] Biliousness, indigestion and constipation, but you actually [illegible] organs in good healthful condition. This medicine is a cheerful source of comfort for people in old age.

PROBING SECRETS.

Somerset House Is Britain's Repository of Wills.

The British public would be not a little surprised, said a prominent Government official to a recent writer, if it knew the extent to which the records of Somerset House are ransacked by inquisitive people for mischievous or malicious purposes.

The originals or copies of wills proved since 1858 are to be found at Somerset House, where any one of them can be read on payment of a search-fee of one shilling. Thus, the financial affairs of tens of thousands of families are laid bare to the eyes of the curious or designing who care to pay the small fee.

It is easy to see what a valuable mine of information to this available, and what improper use may be made of it. Many of these wills reveal family secrets which are worth a good deal to unprincipled people. In fact, some little time ago, a gang of West-end London sharpers kept a man constantly employed hunting for such "skeletons," and reaped a rich harvest by blackmailing the families concerned.

To money-lenders and traders this facility for exploring wills is invaluable; for it enables them to know exactly the financial position of their victims in one case and their customers in the other, and thus to know to what extent they can be trusted. Many men have thus been lured into extravagance and ruin who would, otherwise, probably have escaped both.

Every year, too, these wills are explored by hundreds of unprincipled men who are in search of well-gilded brides. It is, of course, most useful to such persons to know the precise degree of gilding of the ladies whose money-bags they have set covetous eyes; and for a paltry shilling they can satisfy all their curiosity.

To give an illustration (one of hundreds). In a recent breach-of-promise case it came out in evidence that the day before the defendant broke his engagement he had paid a visit to Somerset House to inspect the will of the lady's father, and had made the alarming discovery that she would forfeit every penny of her $100,000 fortune if she married a foreigner. As the defendant answered this description, his vision of gold was rudely dispelled; he broke the engagement at once, and had to pay $15,000 damages for his carelessness in not visiting Somerset House earlier!

The records of births, deaths, and marriages contain much secret information equally valuable; and anyone can obtain a required certificate by paying fees amounting to 90 cents—25 cents for search and 65 cents for the certificate and stamp. The birth records, like those of wills, are useful to traders, as was proved in a recent case in which a young man who had incurred heavy debts to West-end tradesmen pleaded infancy. A reference to Somerset House, however, established the fact that his actual age was twenty-four, and not twenty as he professed.

THE NEW FLAG OF IRELAND.

Golden Sunburst on a Blue Ground Likely To Be Chosen.

What flag shall Ireland fly? This is a question that is again being discussed as the time draws nearer for the final passage of the home rule bill.

Probably no country has had more national flags than Ireland, so that of old time flags the range of choice is by no means restricted. The most ancient, without doubt, is the "Spear and Serpent," said to commemorate the curing by Moses of an ancestor of Milesius who had been bitten by a snake.

Then there is the golden sunburst upon a blue ground, emblem of Fionn MacCumhall's Fenians (militia). Blue was always Ireland's national color until 1798, when the United Irishmen, to signify the blending of north and south, evolved a national color of the hue formed by the amalgamation of blue and orange, namely, green.

The three golden crowns upon a blue ground is another emblem which has not been overlooked. The design appears to-day in the arms of Munster, and the three crowns are said to typify the triple kingdoms of Desmond, Thomond and Ormond. Anyway, the flag was the emblem of Ireland from 1170 until 1547, when Henry VIII. of England substituted the harp for the three crowns, the reason being that Henry was anxious that the three crowns should not be confused with the triple tiara of the pope, with whom, at that juncture, Henry was not upon the best of terms.

Still another national device to be considered is the "Lamh Dearg Eirinn," the Red Hand of Ireland, which, upon a white ground, was borne by Shane and Hugh O'Neill's armies that defeated Queen Elizabeth's generals.

The early hours of the 19th century saw Ireland inflicted with the St. Patrick's Cross, a red saltire upon a white ground. What St. Patrick had to do with it nobody can say, but some emblem or other had got to be incorporated in the British flag upon the passing of the act of union, and in the heraldry of the time. However they got the red saltire from is not known, but there is reason to believe that it was borrowed from the arms of Trinity College, Dublin, which body had in turn borrowed it from the Fitzgerald family.

In all probability Ireland will adopt the sunburst upon a blue ground, the chief reasons being its antiquity, its distinctly Irish origin and its symbolism of Ireland rising to take her proper place among the nations.

But come what may, the ground of the new flag is going to be blue. The Sinn Feiners are resolved upon that, and that the flag's material shall not be silk or cotton, but good Irish linen.

Although woman frequently varies her waist line, she continues to map the place with pins. So an investigator reports.

ANYTHING BUT SAVAGE

THE MAORI WOMEN ARE AN ORNAMENT TO THEIR RACE.

Remarkable Aboriginal People of New Zealand Have Attained a High State of Civilization and Their Girls Are Coquettish Dressers In Their Own Styles—Tattooing Dying Out.

Despite the popularity deservedly earned by New Zealand within the past few years, the tributes paid to her Administration, her adoption of drastic social and political reforms, her disposition to divert from the well-worn paths of other and older lands and adventure in speculative policies, or, as has been said to her charge, of stepping in "where angels fear to tread," little has been learned outside the Dominion of the life and life-work of the Maori woman. This is not as it should be, for she is not only an ornament to her race and highly interesting personality, but is also prodigally endowed by Providence with an intelligence and perspicacity of a very high order. She has as truly emanated from her former state of savagery as her male companion. It is true that the tattooed chin and underlip may still be seen among some women, but it is dying out with such rapidity as to presage at an early date the counting of the hideous practice of tattooing as a lost art. The young women, imbued rightly, with a high regard for their personal appearance and undoubted attractions, seem to mar for life, that distinctive facial beauty which counts for so much in their sex in every civilised land.

The Maori belles, possessed of a considerable amount of coquetry, blended with an inherent modesty, know full well the chic effect produced by the huia feather, as a bizarre adornment, with the result that its usage is almost universal. Their love of dress is nothing more than the prerogative of their sex, but their affection for colors which might be termed gaudy, is somewhat reminiscent of other days, but lends to their dusky beauty a peculiar charm. In their own way the Maori women may be considered every whit as attractive as the men, and their intellectuality of an equally high order. The forms of the women are the envy of many of their white prototypes, and among them there are very many who might be considered models in respect to shape and proportions. It would be almost impossible to give a correct delineation of their features on account of the varied character they present in different individuals. Their lips are not often of a thick or negro form, and although the noses are in general rounded at the end, this rule is not universal, many having genuine Roman noses, and a full set of refined features. In color, they are lighter than most South Sea Islanders, many of them being but little darker than the much-admired women of Italy and Spain. In the matter of hair—together with the women of the Tongan Islands—they are more akin to Europeans, their heads being clothed with a luxurious growth of true hair, sometimes quite straight, but usually with a bewitching wave or undulation approaching to a curl, but never arriving at the condition of "crisp."

For gracefulness, there are few sights to equal the charming "poi" dance and action songs of the Maroi women. There is before us a vision of brown, rounded, arms swinging the elastic raupo balls from side to side, twirling them cleverly in the air, striking them in regular measure on their head and shoulders and bosom, and swaying their bodies easily from side to side throughout all the intricate movements—some so dexterous that hardly the unpractised eye can follow them. It is a picture pulsating with savage poetry and semi-Grecian life—a vision of gleaming black eyes, dancing feathers, tossing tresses of the night, lithe limbs moving with one accord, and the air full of deftly-juggled balls, and filled with a high and liquid chant. The old, old race feeling possesses them—they are back on the olden old paths—they are once more beneath their ancestral palm groves on some Polynesian atoll "at the gateways of the day," where their Eve-like girls and women dance the Venus dance by the light of the round tropic moon. No pale-face mummers, no pakeha corps de ballet hold one in such thrall as does this pot of the brown villagers of Whakarewarewa or Ohinemutu.

The magnificent physique and splendid physical proportions of the New Zealand Maroi are to be seen at their best at a native war-dance, or haka, such as may be frequently seen at Rotorua. The dancers usually strip to the waist in the fighting costume of the Maroi, their bare brown skins and limbs a mass of rich brown color. A large cloak is worn on such occasions, toga fashion, the right arm free, the better to grasp the weapon. Their faces are daubed with blue and black war-paint, their heads circled with handkerchiefs for the purpose of keeping in position the invariable feathered head decorations—for without a prodigal display of feathers, much of the martial spirit of the proceedings would be lost. At a signal from the young hereditary chief, the fiery-eyed descendant of a long line of tribal heroes, the Tuwharetoa, who have been crouching in a listening attitude, silent as statues, spring into astonishingly savage life. A leap into the air of some three or four feet is followed by a thunderous thud as two hundred and forty feet land on the sounding soil. With another leap, like so many deer, the leader shouts the opening line of the song, "U-n-uhi-mai-te-waero," an ancient chant, which makes a splendid accompaniment to these dances. With eyes glaring and tewhatewas raised and lowered in lightning-time, follows the "Weku-weku-weku vai te whoire e!" and the barking chorus of the wild peruperu their forefathers have danced many a time in deadly earnest.

You'll Sleep More Soundly If You Sleep Healthy With Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Insomnia goes with indigestion.

The man or woman with a good appetite, sound digestion, and bowels and kidneys working right, is never troubled much with sleeplessness. It is when the bowels become constipated and the liver and kidneys sluggish that the trouble begins.

Lazy liver and constipated bowels quickly bring on biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, making a sound, refreshing night's sleep impossible. Or the inactive kidneys allow the blood to becomes loaded with uric acid, which causes rheumatism, with all its sleep-destroying tortures.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, taken regularly, induce sweet and dreamless sleep by keeping all these organs active and regular. The headaches disappear, the digestion becomes good again, the blood is purified and perfect health returns.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been a favorite household remedy in Canada for over half a century, and they are in daily use throughout the world. Being purely vegetable they are safe for young and old. Made by W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont., and sold by all dealers at 25c. a box.

Old Age a Paradox.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, discussing old age at a dinner in New York, smiled pensively and said:

"Old age is not so sad as youth deems it. Old age is a paradox. It may be truly said that the best years of a man's life come after the best years of his life have been wasted."

No Team Work in France.

The French nation is a mass of individual particles, scintillating, assertive strangers to all the ethics of collaboration. They are incapable of team work, writes Samuel P. Orth in the Atlantic. You never read of French football or baseball or organized sports. They are a nation of individualists, brilliant individualists. Their philosophy, poetry, art, music, science, literature, all bear the imprint of a superindividualism that has filled the world with its radiance. They defy every known law of human gravitation and fly off in a million fragments, careless of results. In truth, they never think of results. They have the child's love for the doing and the child's scorn for the thing done. They begin more processes, inventions, contrivances, experiments and end fewer than all the rest of Europe put together. The French propose; the Germans and the English dispose.

FREAK BUILDINGS.

Strange English Monuments to Folly and Vanity.

There are many buildings in England which are nothing more than freaks.

A family in search of social position or who want to "lionize" the immediate section builds a place along the lines of the great castles of Richard the Third's time. The estate is guarded as if the King lived there, but this is for the purpose of preventing the deception being discovered. As a rule such buildings are a series of hollow arches and domes and turrets and spires around a comparatively small dwelling.

Not far from Aylesbury is one of those fabric castles. It is a reproduction of a great mediaeval stronghold. From the road it looks to be just what the owner had in mind when he built it, but if one gets close to the buildings it will be found that the walls are far from massive and the windows too large for the mediaeval home it resembles at a distance.

There is a house near Ilford which is a freak if there ever was one. It is a mausoleum used as a dwelling and locally known as the castle. Some years ago a titled Englishman discovered the family had not a proper mausoleum so he tumbled down his house and erected on its site a big mausoleum. Below the structure he had built a number of catacombs. Over this was the chapel in which funeral services were to be held and over this apartments for mourners were provided.

The builder did not take the bishop of the district into his confidence when he started the structure, and when it was finished the bishop refused to consecrate it.

Finally the apartment provided for the mourners over the chapel was rented. There are only four rooms inhabitable in the structure. These are reached from the chapel through a well-like spiral staircase which extends to the roof. The spire is one of the features of the structure. The building stands against the hillside as a monument to the vanity and folly of the builder.

Near Carshalton is a massive gateway of wrought iron and stone something like 240 feet wide. Though it has stood for many years its value now is placed at £30,000. From this can be gleaned the original cost. The gateway was to lead to a great mansion that was never built. Financial reverses prevented it. The mansion was to be built for a great London merchant. He had a title, but apparently wanted a greater one, and the building of a house that would be the gossip of all England was the means he selected to get it. He went bankrupt and only the gateway was completed. It is one of the sights of the place and is usually referred to as the "Lion of Carshalton."

Quick Cure.

"How annoying! My wife is always ailing. The hard work fatigues her."

"My wife also was always ill, but now she enjoys the best of health."

"How did you cure her?"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

PROVOKING ISABEL

There was a look of annoyance on the face of the girl who loves to talk.

"Some days," she said, 'are worse than other days—but this one has been even beyond that! And to think that it had to be Isabel who saw my worries!

"Isabel never does things wrong. She always looks before she leaps, thinks before she speaks, and otherwise is quite impossible. People who never make mistakes should be prohibited by law, because they incite the rest of the world to riot and rebellion. Always when I am with Isabel I am in a panic because I am so afraid she will turn her righteous pitying smile upon me, a sinner.

"So when I was to meet her down town to-day I took particular pains to think out what errands I had to do and how I was going to do them. For once I was going to surprise her by my swift, systematic method of getting through necessary transactions. For one thing I had to get a new leather band for the family sewing machine and I prided myself on my braininess in looking in the directory to find the main office. There should be no branch stores for me with supplies run out. I could just imagine that smile of Isabel's.

"When we met I said, "I have to go over to Jackson Boulevard, dear, for a sewing machine band—do you mind?"

"Well, we walked down Jackson Boulevard from Michigan Avenue, and every time I remembered to look at the numbers they would be different from what I expected. We were talking, so I forgot to look at the right times. Isabel said the number I wanted ought to be east of State Street and I said it was west.

"Isabel couldn't resist the temptation. 'Why didn't you look up the number before you started, dear?' she asked in a silky voice.

"'See here,' I cried, 'you needn't think I'm doing this walking on purpose.'

"So I dragged her into a store and borrowed the directory after I had explained all about the sewing machine to the man behind the desk. He was a very polite man, and seemed greatly interested. Isbel was a trifle quelled when we found the number really was what I had said.

"It was about four blocks away and already we had walked by it three times. It was on the top floor and something was the matter with the elevator and it took us hours to get up there. Isabel meanwhile smiling patiently, pitying, though I pretended I didn't see her smile. Well, when I opened the door the sight which greeted my eyes did not in the least seem to promise a leather machine band.

"There were rows of huge mahogany desks and a large silence. A cold young woman looked hurt when I explained by errand. She said those were the general offices of the company, I would find the chief supply store at a place in State Street.

"'Really,' Isabel said, 'I should think you would have realized that you couldn't get supplies at the general office.'

"After hours we reached the place in State Street.

"Yes, the clerk said, they had machine bands. As she turned away to get one I added the name of my special variety of machine. The weather changed immediately. She didn't think they had one for that special kind, but she would look. Well, she looked, and the next clerk looked, and the manager tapped his chin with a pencil while he considered the matter, and a messenger boy ran wildly back and forth to the stock room and reported progress at they searched down there.

"All this time Isabel was looking like a martyr. Martyrdom just oozed out all over her. I could see she was thinking that if she had wanted a sewing machine band she simply would have stepped into the proper place and bought it, all in five minutes.

"But at last they did find one. I could have wound it around Isabel's neck and strangled her to get rid of that faint, reproving smile of hers.

"I thought best to get her mind off the band episode as soon as possible, so I sugested that we go to buy a jewellery cleaning case. I knew in what department I had found them before. When I got to the counter and mentioned what I wanted the clerk stared and frowned. No, he had never heard of them. No, he was positive that counter never had them. So I tried every counter in the room with varying results. In one respect the clerks were all aliek—they were disdainfully positive that they had not carried such a thing as a jewelry cleaning case. Some went so far as to insist that there had never been such a thing on earth as a jewelry cleaning case. All of them looked wild when I asked for it, and most of them ran around in circles or tried to climb the shelves and escape in their efforts to find one.

"All this time Isabel's eyebrows had been lifting in delicate irony as she politely trailed around after me. I had floor walkers, ushers, managers and clerks, young and old, rushing about, expostulating, arguing, searching, indignant and irritable; for by this time I was bound I was right if I spent the rest of my life in that department and died there of old age.

"Finally, to my joyful surprise we found a clerk with a remnant of human intelligence who actually recognized the name of a jewelry cleaning case when I mentioned it. I sighed a great sigh of relief, glared at Isabel and raised my chin haughtily as I surveyed the perspiring and disgusted users and clergs surrounding me, who now saw that I was not a lunatic, as they had inferred. In my sweetest tones I told the intelligent clerk that I'd take one in red leather.

"'Oh, he said, 'we have had them, yes—but we're all out of them now!'

"I came home soon after that. I told Isabel that my head ached and I thought I wouldn't shop any more. She said she was so sorry, and if I would only learn to systematize things I wouldn't have so much trouble! And yet I suppose there are some people on earth who really love and admire Isabel!"—Buffalo Courier.

Christmas Legends

ALL around the season of the Coming of Love as a little Child there have sprung legends and beliefs, like blossoms in a gracious clime, which testify with subtlety to the depth of the appeal of the birth of Christ. Here divinely spiritual symbolism and there sweet human tenderness and pathos appear, and, blended, they evidence the world's belief that this was both Son of Man and Son of God.

An Irish legend tells that, on Christmas eve, the Christ-Child wanders out in the darkness and cold, and the peasants still put lighted candles in their windows to guide the sacred little feet, that they may not stumble on their way to their homes. And in Hungary the people go yet further in their tenderness for the Child, they spread feasts and leave their doors open that He may enter at His will, while throughout Christendom there is a belief that no evil can touch any child who is born on Christmas eve.

The legend which tells how the very hay which lined the manger in which the Holy Babe was laid put forth living red blossoms at midwinter at the touch of the Babe's body could only have arisen from belief in the renewal of life through the Lord of Life.

The Holy Thorn.

IT is not so many centuries ago since there was that holy thorn at Glastonbury which blossomed every Christmas, and, so ran the legend, had done ever since St. Joseph of Arimathea, having come as apostle to Britain, and, landing at Glastonbury, had stuck his staff of dry hawthorn into the soil, commanding it to put forth leaves and blossoms. This the staff straightway did, and thereby was the king converted to the Christian faith, the faith which preached life from death.

The holy thorn of Glastonbury flourished during the centuries until the civil wars. During those it was uprooted; but several persons had had trees growing from cuttings from the original tree, and those continued to bloom at the Christ-season, just as their parent, which had grown from St. Joseph's staff, had bloomed. And about the middle of the 18th century it was recorded in the Gentleman's Magazine how the famous holy thorn would not deign to recognize the new style calendar, which had then come into force but would persist in blossoming as of old on old Christmas day!

In those days the anniversary of the advent of the Babe had certainly meant more to the common people than merely a time for feasting and revelry, for giving and receiving; it had been also a season for holy observances, for they refused to go to church on New Christmas day, the holy thorn not being then in blossom. So serious became the trouble that the clergy found it prudent to announce that Old Christmas day should also be kept sacred as before. Only another story of men's weak, superstitious minds? True, perhaps; but there are better who evidence some spiritual weakness than those who wallow in the wholly material, and when we cease to be careful of the cup and the platter, we become not over careful of their contents.

The First Christmas Rose.

ANOTHER of those spiritual parables is the legend of the Christmas rose, and it tells how good things, fit for giving, spring up ready to the hand which earnestly desires to give to the Child. It is said that a certain maiden of Bethlehem was so poor that she had nothing to give to the Babe to whom kings brought wealth from afar, and, as she stood, longing and mourning, and angel appeared to her, saying: "Look at thy feet, beneath the snow," and lo! on obeying the maiden found that a new flower had miraculously sprung up and blossomed at her needs. Every since then, runs this story, this exquisite flower, with its snowy petals just touched by suggestions of pinkish bloom, is to be found at this season; and, indeed, its half-opened cups are like chalices of love, and its fully-spread petals are like a happy innocence, fit symbols for the gifts for the Babe of spotless innocence, whose heart was the vessel of love.

Christmas Eve Legends.

HERE are several exceedingly touching legends concerning bells, which are heard ringing from buried cities and villages at this season. One belongs to a village near Raleigh, in Nottinghamshire, and the story runs that once, where there is now but a valley, there was a village which, with every trace of life and habitation, had been swallowed by an earthquake; but over-night, at Christmas, the bells of the buried church are heard to ring as of old.

A similar legend is told of Preston, in Lancashire, and yet another and more moving one comes from the Netherlands. It is said that the city of Boen was notorious for its black and shameless sins, as well as renowned for its beauty and magnificence. To the Sodom of the middle ages came our Savior on one anniversary of his birth, and went as a beggar from door to door, but not one in all that Christmas keeping city gave the Master of the abundance. Sin he saw rampant on every side, but not a trace of Christmas bounty and goodwill, and he called to the sea, which, as of old, obeyed his voice, and Boen, the city of sin, was buried deep, clean out of sight, beneath the waves. But ever at Christmas up from beneath the covering waters comes the sweet calling of church bells buried in Boen. It is a legend which appears to tell in parable that nothing which ever belonged to the Christ, and was dedicated to his service, is ever wholly lost from him and alienated from service; that ever and again something of their inherent beauty and compelling sweetness rises from the depths through all seeming ruin.

The Manger.

TRADITION declares that within the stone manger there was another one of wood, and that the stone cradle in the Chapel of the Nativity is, indeed, the outer manger. Splendid is that humble stone trough now with white marble, softly rich with costly draperies, and radiant with a silver star, which is surrounded by 16 lamps, ever a-lit. But yet more glorious is the wooden manger at Rome, held to be the veritable manger in which the Christ-child lay. It was removed to Rome in the seventh century, during the Mohammedan invasion of the Holy Land, and there it is preserved in a strong bronze chest, from which it is brought forth on Christmas days, when it is placed on the Grand Altar. It is mounted upon a stand of silver, which is inlaid with gold and gems, and the shrine in which it rests is of purest rock crystal. In the days to which this was accomplished well, whatsoever may have been their shortcomings in other directions, gave magnificently to the Church Visible.

Christmas Bells.

TRADITION says that the hour of the Babe's birth was the hour of midnight, and legend adds that from then until dawn cocks crow. In Ireland it is held that whoso looks into a mirror on this eve will see the devil or Judas Iscariot looking over his shoulder surely thought sufficient to drive the hardiest soul to a thought of the innocent Babe.

Another legend tells that, on Christmas eve, Judas Iscariot is released from that hell—"his own place"—and is allowed to return to earth that he may cool himself in icy waters.

Wild and improbable although such and such legends appear on their faces, they bear study and repay it, for we then see that they are full of subtle spiritual expression, as it were; that they are parables of certain spiritual facts, and it will be ill for us should the Christmas day ever dawn on which such flowers of tender faith and wonder shall appear to us no more than dry curious specimens from the dead roots of superstition.

Wild and improbable although such and such legends appear on their faces, they bear study and repay it, for we then see that they are full of subtle spiritual expression, as it were that they are parables of certain spiritual facts, and it will be ill for us should the Christmas day ever dawn on which such flowers of tender faith and wonder shall appear to us no more than dry curious specimens from the dead roots of superstition.

Waistcoats for Women

A remarkable women's fashion reported from Paris consists in wearing waistcoats of the regulation man's style and size. Some experts predict that a man's heavy gold watch chain will follow suit, to give a finish to the garment.

People derided Jules Verne when he wrote his book telling how he girdled the earth in eighty days and another describing a voyage under the sea. Frank Wright also told of travelling in electric machines over the earth and through the air twenty-five years ago, and people sneered. And yet all these things have been accomplished. Mr. Verne's trip around the world has been beaten by nearly half the time he consumed.

Cardinal's Last Testament.

ROME, Dec. 19.—The coffin containing the body of Cardinal Rampolla was closed yesterday with the solemn ceremonial of the Sacred College. A testament was found dated 1889, but intimates of the late cardinal profess to know of the existence of a will dated some years later. In fact, the cardinal left a small key with a label on which was written, "This opens the black case containing my last will." The case, however, has not been found.

BONNER SPRINGS, Kan., Dec. 19.—Rolla Harvey, an alleged "bootlegger," was killed and two other men wounded here yesterday in a fight that ensued when a posse of fifteen men surrounded the city hall building on the second floor of which Harvey was suspected of conducting a "joint." More than fifty shots were fired.

CULPRITS KNOWN

Prison Guards Advised to Confess Tobacco Selling

WILL PROSECUTE OTHERWISE

KINGSTON, Dec. 19.—The probe of the Prison Reform Commission will not be through working this year. An adjournment is looked for to-day, when the enquiry will stand until Jan. 6. On this date the evidence of Inspectors Hughes and Stewart will be taken.

That the commission had evidence, which it was believed would be sufficient to convict guards in trafficking in tobacco, was the statement of Chairman Macdonell, and it caused a big sensation among the guards. The chairman, speaking on this matter, said:

"We have the authority of the Minister of Justice to say to them men, that if they confess their crime they will not be prosecuted under the section of the Penitentiary Act which provides the penalty of imprisonment for such offences. They will be liable to dismissal from office, and if no confession is made the prosecution will go through."

At the morning session, Dr. Phelan stated that he did not know of any convict in the insane ward being "tubbed." He thought that it was in 1903 he gave an order that there should be no more "tubbing" of convicts.

"What caused you to issue that order?" asked Mr. Bowlby.

"It was intimated to me that there was a system of 'tubbing' being practised." As a medical man he would not approve of "tubbing." He would not say it was dangerous, but he did not think it would be advisable to employ it unless under the charge of a careful, competent person.

Dr. Phelan, questioned by the commission, said he had collected fees for the examination of men making application for positions as guards. He stated that he did so, as it had been the custom of men in this position before him.

Questioned further, witness said he had stopped collecting fees. He did not know just when. He stopped because he did not think it was worth while.

Convict to Work in Camp.

KINGSTON, Dec. 19.—A nineteen-year-old convict has just been released from the penitentiary on parole, and sent to a northern lumber camp as an experiment. If he turns out well it is said that probably fifty convicts in prison for minor offences may be released in the spring and also be sent to lumber camps. They will be under the supervision of the Lumber Camp Missies.

DYNAMITED WALL.

Suffragettes Placed Bombs Outside Holloway Jail.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—An attempt, attributed to suffragettes, was made last night to blow up part of the southeast wall of Holloway Jail by the explosion of two bombs. These are believed to have been secreted in the garden of a house adjoining the jail. The part of the wall attacked was near the cells in which suffragettes are usually confined.

Miss Rachel Pease, who is undergoing a term of eighteen months' imprisonment for arson, is the only suffragette at present in the jail. It is alleged that she has been subjected to forcible feeding, and at recent militant meetings angry references were made to her treatment, coupled with threats of revenge.

The explosion did no damage to the jail, but the surrounding high wall where it abuts on the garden at No. 13 Dalmeny avenue was so badly damaged that it will need rebuilding.

No arrests have been made, and apparently there are no clues to the culprits, but it is said that the house had been occupied recently by a Mrs. Patey, an ardent militant, and has been utilized as a rendezvous for suffragettes to signal to the inmates of the prison.

The force of the explosion shattered some of the windows in the neighborhood.

TWO RAILWAYS COMPLY.

C.P.R. and G.T.R. Will Accede to Demands of Merchants.

MONTREAL, Dec. 19.—An official statement issued by Vice-President Bosworth of the C.P.R. yesterday, in connection with the railway cartage question here, states that "in view of the urgent demands of merchants in different sections of the country, and their voluntary offer through Boards of Trade to pay the exact cost of cartage, the Canadian Pacific Railway has decided to continue the present cartage arrangements until further notice."

A similar statement was given by Vice-President Dairymple of the Grand Trunk. Mr. Dairymple stated that the representations of the merchants had been urgent, and that in view of their willingness to pay the costs the railway had been able to see its way clear to continue the service.

It is expected that the Canadian Northern and the Intercolonial will fall in line, though in the absence of Guy Thomas and R. E. Perry, general freight agents of the C.N.R. and the I.C.R., respectively, statements from them could not be obtained beyond the fact that these lines are considering the matter.

Killed at American Soo.

CORNWALL, Dec. 19.—News has been received of the death of Edwin Myers of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. He was engaged on the railway, and, owing to a dense fog, was caught between two cars and instantly killed. Mr. Myers was a son of the late Wm. Myers of Eamer's Corners, and was 46 years of age. He left here for Michigan 23 years ago. A widow and three small children survive.

COMMISSION NAMED

Government Side-Tracks Question of High Cost of Living

CIVIL SERVANTS APPOINTED

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—The Government has appointed a department commission to enquire into the causes underlying the high cost of living.

The personnel of the commission is as follows: John A. McDougal, C.M.G., chief commissioner of customs; C. C. James, chief adviser on all agricultural matters to Hon. Martin Burrell, and H. H. Coats, chief statistician of the Labor Department. Although the commission is a departmental one it is given the widest possible scope.

Mr. McDougal is perhaps the greatest authority in the Dominion on the tariff, and its relation to prices. C. C. James will bring to bear a ripe experience in all matters pertaining to agriculture and has already made an exhaustive study of the causes underlying the movement from the land, the falling off in the production of foodstuffs and other matters which are supposed to contribute to a dear dinner table.

Mr. Coats is Canada's foremost expert on the cost of living and as chief statistician of the Department of Labor he has been enquiring into high prices for years and has written much upon the subject that has been widely quoted in economic journals in England and the United States.

The commission will get down to work immediately as the Government is desirous of having a report placed in its hands as soon as possible.

While the ability of the commissioners is above question they are all civil servants and members of the departments involved in the investigation. The sittings are to be in private, which will prevent evidence being offered regarding the effect of the present high tariff. Moreover, ample provision is made for censoring the report before it is given to the public.

This action of the Government just before the session will effectually protect the administration from having to answer embarrassing questions concerning its plans to remedy the present evil.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

A large force of Moorish tribesmen were routed with heavy loss yesterday by bombs dropped by Spanish aviators.

Mayor Lally, of Wainwright, Alta., has resigned rather than sign a check in payment for a pool table for the local fire department of eight men.

Final arguments in the cases of the four criminals convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal were heard by the Court of Appeals in Albany, N.Y., yesterday.

McCrea and Tobin have sold the 15,000-acre property of the Chaudierre Lumber Co., of which they were the owners, to John Breakey of Quebec, for $250,000.

No more card games, dice, nickel-in-the-slot piano music, rattles, not even a chair upon which a customer may rest his weary bones, will be allowed in the saloons of St. Louis, Mo.

With one knee out of joint and several cuts about the head, Robert Doughty, of Limehouse, was pulled from under the hoofs of a vicious horse he was loading for shipment at Guelph yesterday.

A summons has been taken out by Dr. F. G. H. Pearson, M.H.O. of Brantford, against the Brantford Gas Co. on a charge of maintaining a public nuisance in supplying Tilbury gas into their mains.

METHODS UNBUSINESSLIKE.

Toronto School Building Department Scored in Report.

TORONTO, Dec. 19.—The long-awaited report of Judge Winchester into the affairs of the Toronto Board of Education and its officials was presented last night. His honor in a severe arraignment of the business methods of the board, finds that matters had been allowed to drift for some years and that in the architect's department the members of the board had been constantly ignored with regard to the changing of specifications, ordering of alterations and extras and the settlement of accounts. Some tenderers also were favored in the carrying out of specifications. Proper books were not kept and the architect kept the accounts in his head.

As a means of preventing the carelessness which has cost the board large sums of money, his honor recommends the appointment of a business man as Commissioner of Buildings and that he appoint his own staff and keep a complete system of books.

Shoots Nine Days' Bride.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 19.—John F. Conrad, aged 31, a salesman for a local fish company, shot and fatally wounded Mrs. Catherine Conard, 19 years old, his bride of nine days at their apartment.

After the shooting, Conrad sat at a writing desk and wrote to his mother, who lives in Toledo, O., the story of the crime while waiting for the police.

Conrad told the police he shot his wife because she had threatened to leave him.

United Hatters Lose.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—The United States Court of Appeals yesterday decided the famous Danbury Hatters' case in favor of D. E. Loewe & Co., the plaintiffs, and against the United Hatters of North America. The court affirmed a judgment in favor of Mr. Loewe and against the hatters' organization for $252,250. With interest and costs the judgment now amounts to $272,000. At the first trial held in 1909, the plaintiffs obtained a judgment for $252,250.

"MORE FAVORABLE."

Mexican Situation Is Better Say Washington Officials.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—State Department officials expressed the opinion that conditions in Mexico today were "more favorable." No intimation was given as to the nature of changes in the situation regarded as indicating improvement. Much interest is manifested here in the cyclonic disturbances in the finances of Mexico, involving the failure of banks and the issue of currency without security regarded as substantial.

The opinion was expressed in some quarters that the Huerta Government might receive financial support from the large land and mine owners in northern Mexico, who have heretofore been supposed to occupy an attitude of neutrality as between the contending factions, but who may now adopt allegiance to the Huerta cause as a result of the confiscation of their properties of Gen. Villa, the rebel leader.

U. S. Warships Only Left.

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 19.—The British flagship Suffolk and the German cruiser Bremen returned yesterday from Tampico, leaving only American warships at Tampico.

COCHRANE, Dec. 19.—The town council proposes to establish a library here and will ask the citizens to vote on a bylaw to the effect that upon the contribution of $10,000 by the Carnegie Corporation of New York the council will contribute per annum towards maintenance.

New Judicial District Asked.

COCHRANE, Dec. 19.—The Ontario Government will be asked by the Board of Trade to divide the present Timiskaming judicial district and create a new one, to be known as the northern judicial district. There is a population of 15,000 between Cochrane and Iwastika, and there are another 15,000 east and west along the Transcontinental Railway. The population along the T.C.R., it was anticipated, would increase to 30,000 in the course of a year.

"Oh, I just put chamois rompers on the children and let them play in the house," responded Mrs. Brown.—Lippincott's.

BE KIND.

By the prettiest girl you ever knew,
By the prettiest flowers that ever grew,
By the sweetest wind that ever blew,
To your neighbours all be kind and true.

By the brightest light you e'er saw saw flashing,
By the grandest wave you e'er saw dashing,
By the biggest thunder you e'er heard crashing,
Be kind to all as on your way your passing.

By the prettiest things that e'er did move,
By the dearest thing you e'er did love,
By the holiest things in heaven above
Be kind to all and show your love.

By pleasures that are mocking,
By sins that are shocking,
By old Santa that comes knocking,
Help him to fill some stocking.

By all that's great and glorious,
By the King that ruleth o'er us,
And make right prevail victorious,
Get not drunk and be uproarious.

A COMPROMISE ON THE GOVERNMENT'S PART

Several of the Cabinet Ministers Were Opposed to the Naming of Commission to Investigate the High Cost of Living

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—It is generally believed here that the decision on the part of the government to name a dental commission consisting of Messrs. John McDougal, C. C. James and R .H. Coates is in the nature of a compromise. Several members of the Cabinet, including Hon. G. E. Foster and Hon. Robt. Rogers were opposed to the idea of naming a commission of any kind, the former for reasons which he has frankly stated, and the latter because he fears that the evidence submitted would tend to show that the tariff on food is probably the most potent contributing cause to the present high range of prices. The majority of the Cabinet were, however, strongly of the opinion that the general demand throughout the country for some action on the part of the government could not be resisted and it was finally agreed that the best way out of the difficulty was to name a commission consisting of government officials. While it is generally conceded that the committee is eminently well qualified to gather and analyse much data which will be of considerable utility in arriving at a solution of the cause for the existing economic conditions, the general feeling is that their efforts will be rather in the nature of afforing an explanation of the reasons for the high cost of living rather than to suggest a solution of the problem. Should it develop that the inquiry is to be purely departmental in its character, there is no doubt that the Liberal majority in the Senate will next session name and select a committee to examine witnesses from all parts of the country.

COLD STORAGE ABUSES.

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—"I believe that the cold storage system can be seriously abused and may very considerably affect the cost of living." The above is the opinion of George Bradbury, M.P. for Selkirk, who for some time past has been preparing a private bill to regulate the cold storage plants. To a correspondent Mr. Bradbury gave the details of his proposed legislation to-day. "I intend to provide a clause for the regulation of which poultry, eggs, meat, fish, butter, etc., can be held in storage. At present there is no limit. Eggs have been taken out of cold storage after two years. Meat has been known to have been kept for three years, while in Chicago a case was found where fish had been kept for two years. Such goods are utterly unfit for consumption though they are sold to the innocent people."

TRAIN FIGHT RESEMBLED A DONNYBROOK

Cattlemen Indulge in a Pugilistic Encounter on Train Running From Lindsay

FINES IMPOSED

A very interesting case was heard in police court yesterday morning before County Magistrate F. L. Moore, K.C., of Lindsay. The participants in the proceedings were a number of cattlemen in transit from Toronto to Haliburton, on the G.T.R., and in the course of their trip a fight ensued on the train after leaving Fenelon Falls for the north. The damage to the car was estimated at $2.65.

It was a little Donnybrook while it lasted, from the evidence adduced.

The cattlemen were represented by lawyers T. H. Stinson, G. Jordan and I. E. Weldon, while the G.T.R. engaged Mr. G. H Hopkins, K.C., for the prosecution.

The first witness heard was Mr. George Bowhey, who on being sworn said to Mr. Hopkins. "I live in Haliburton, and am a conductor on G.T.R. I was running a train on the 30th of October from Lindsay to Haliburton. I left on 2.40 train for Haliburton. The trouble started after I left Fenelon Falls. Someone told me there was a fight in a rear coach — the combination smoker. When I went back the fight was about over and the men were holding each other apart to keep peace, or suspend hostilities, as it were. Watson had Hutchins down in the seat. The men were all under the influence of liquor. Watson came at me and pushed me with his hands. I said nothing to Watson previous to this. He called me a vile name and said he would throw me off the train. The brakeman came then to assist me. At this time there was one window broken in the smoker. It was smashed after I left Fenelon Falls. I cannot tell the value of the window. The brakeman took Mr. Perrin into a separate car. There was a seat broken in a coach and a window broken. The value would be $2.65 for damages.

To Mr. Jordan: "I saw Watson holding Hutchins. I thought Watson was separating the fighters when I went in. Watson or Perrin did not seem hostile or warlike after the fight. Mr. Jordan—"You do not know who started the fight or who broke the windows."

Mr. Jordan thought the coaches were on since 1833 or 1830. It's a very old coach, and there has been many a fight on them before.

Continuing his evidence the witness said he did not know who started the row. Never saw the men break the windows or seats. Never saw Brohm do any damage. As far as I saw he did no harm in the car.

Mr. Weldon did not think it necessary to ask any questions, as the previous lawyers had got them in deeper. It was not clear whether this car was a stock car or a passenger, according to the evidence.

Nelson Stevens sworn: "I live in W. Guilford. I am a farmer. I was on the train on 30th of October last. Mr. Hutchins joined Watson in a seat, and after a time he attacked Mr. Perrin. Mr. Hutchins fell on his back in the passage way. Mr. Watson and Mr. Brohm tried to separate them. The conductor came into the car and said, "Boys, you will have to stop this, and get into the back coach. I saw no fight with the conductor. I saw no fight in the smoker. This fight occurred in the passenger smoker, 1832. Mr. Watson and Mr. Hutchins broke the glass in the fight. They were all using bad language.

To Mr. Weldon—"I am a cattleman and I go in with Mr. Perrin, and we were all cattlemen coming home. There was some trouble between Hutchins and Perrin about a cattle deal. Hutchins told Perrin to sit still and not to move. Hutchins got the worst of it, as far as I can see. Watson tried to part the men. If the cattlemen were let alone and the conductor had not interfered there would be no trouble."

Mr. Weldon—"It was a cattle car, you would say, and they were all cattlemen and going to Haliburton."

To Mr. Jordan: Watson and Brohm acted the part of men in trying to stop the fight.

To Mr. Stinson—I never saw Mr. Brohm fighting, nor never heard him use bad language. Mr. Perrin said he did not wish to fight Mr. Hutchins then, but would meet him next day at 10 o'clock.

A large number of other witnesses were heard, whose testimony was about the same as that given above.

Magistrate Moore found all the accused guilty and the settling of the fines to be imposed was reserved to Monday next.

ATTEMPTED TO CUT HIS WIFE'S THROAT

Louis Bourbonair Attacked His Better Half With Razor Severely Cutting Her Hand

APPEARS IN COURT

In an attack on his wife about 1 o'clock this morning, Louis Bourbonais, a local man, severely cut her hand, and as a result of her injuries, she is in the hospital to-day.

It seems that Bourbonais went home intoxicated last night and got into an altercation with his wife. In the heat of the mixup he seized a razor and, attacking her, tried to cut her throat. She fought fiercely, however, and in the struggle sustained a severe gash in her hannd. She cried out that her hand was cut and at the sight of blood the man desisted in his attempt to take her life.

A few minutes afterwards the police, who had been summoned, arrived, and Bourbonais was taken into custody.

In this morning's police court Bourbonais was charged with assault on his wife, with intent to cut her throat. At the request of Chief Thompson the case was enlarged for a week, as Mrs. Bourbonais is in the Hospital. Dr. Anys dressed her wound and she is doing nicely to-day.

Henry Ballard, a local young man, was fined $10 in this morning's Police Court, for supplying a minor with cigarettes. He pleaded guilty to the charge and the fine imposed by the Magistrate was the minimum one.

DOUBLE DROWNING AT MUD TURTLE LAKE

Two Young Boys Break Through the Ice While Skating and Lose Their Lives---One Body Has Not Yet Been Recovered

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LINDSAY, Ont., Dec. 19—A double drowning accident occurrd at Mud Turtle Lake, near Coboconk, yesterday afternoon, when the two sons of Mr. J. B. White broke through the ice and lost their lives. The two little fellows, Willie, aged fourteen, and Davie, aged eleven, were alone on the ice, enjoying the first skate of the season. No one saw the accident, but it was evident that they struck a thin spot in the ice and went through. Their father was working not far away from the scene of the accident. The body of the eldest boy was soon recovered but so far no trace has been found of the little fellow.

CREW STOPPED FLYER TO PICK UP DRUNK PRONE ON SIDING

The G. T. R. Toronto flyer was brought to a sudden standstill this side of Omemee last night to pick up a man who was lying prostrate on a siding a few feet from the main line. In the police court this morning he gave his name as John Ryan, said he was homeless, and was released. He had apparently spent considerable time in a session with John Barley corn who lured him from a west bound passenger train when it stopped at a siding west of Peterborough on the G.T.R. line. And filled with booze he was apparently helpless. The crew of the Flyer saw in the glare of the headlight the inert body stretched across a siding. They backed the train up the line. The crew picked the man up and brought him to Peterborough, where he was handed over to the police. In court this morning he said the shanties in winter and drives in summer constituted his home. He was given his freedom.

Mr. Emery, of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company, brought the first ton of freight to the sheds. It was made up of cereals from the Quaker Oats

USHERS WANTED --NOT CASHIERS

Through a typographical error on the part of the "Examiner" an advertisement for the Royal Theatre was made to read "six cashiers" wanted. The word should have been "ushers." The Theatre will require that number of ushers when the alterations are made.

MR. GEO. McBAIN GETS DAMAGES FROM THE CAVAN COUNCIL

Mr. Justice Middleton has given the following judgment in the McBain-Cavan Township case:

I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., and J. E. L. Goodwill (Peterborough) for plaintiff; R. Ruddy, K.C., for defendant. Action for damages for breach of agreement between the parties that council would open channel and protect it by gates on outlet, plaintiff to close said gates in proper time to protect channel from filling up by spring freshets, council to keep channel open. Judgment: Plaintiff could have cleared out the ditch himself in 1012 for $10, and in 1913, if it had again filled up, for a like sum, This, I think, fixes his damages at $20. The defence as to the invalidity of contract has no more foundation in law than in morals. Plaintiff seeks a mandatory order directing the municipality to comply with its contract and keep the water course clear in the future. I do not think he is entitled to this. I think his remedy is to himself perform the work contracted for, and to sue for its cost as damages sustained upon each succeeding breach. Judgment for $20 with costs fixed at $100, as this litigation has in effect determined the wider question raised by the defendants, the validity of the contract."

Justice Middleton declares the agreement made by Mr. McBain and the Cavan Council a valid one and awards damages for the two years during which the channel was not cleared by the township.

Counterfeiters Are Captured

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—With a complete and high-class counterfeiting outfit for the manufacture of United States gold certificates and ten dollar bills, five men whose names are not yet reported, have been arrested by the Dominion and Provincial police at Lavaltric, an out of the way community in Quebec. It is believed they intended to circulate the counterfeit notes all over Ontario and Quebec during the Christmas season.

DATES OF ELECTIONS.

It might seem at first thought that the matter of the date of municipal elections is an unimportant matter.

But is it? The object of municipal elections is to choose representatives who are to manage our civic business for the coming year. There is no doubt that this is an important and, even, momentous matter, in relation to effective civic administration. One would think that the utmost deliberation, the most careful thought, should be given the subject by the ratepayers—the shareholders in the civic concern, called a city, town or village, as the case may be.

This, however, is not done. We have no effective scrutiny of the work of the past year done by our civic representatives. They are not called to account in any effective way, and if any ratepayers in a moment of misplaced interest in his business as a ratepayer, ventures to call into question any act of an alderman or city council, he is denounced as a sorehead or "knocker"; is an ingrate who ventures to look the gift hose in the mouth—dares to criticise the services of patriotic aldermen who serve the public without fee or pay of any kind, and, according to popular reasoning, should be [illegible]. Partly from this, and more from other reasons, we never have a really effective review of the work of the past council, many of whose members seek re-election or some other position in the civic service.

We have no audit of the record and actions of our city representatives. In everything else there is an audit of accounts—from a school hockey club to a great bank or financial institution. But we have no audit, so to speak of the actions, administration and general policy of a city council. There is no scrutiny of their administrative acts, in relation to the interests of the ratepayers or of their bearing upon the rate of taxation. We have, it is true, an audit of our city accounts, which in this regard means nothing — the report of the auditor simply shows that so much money was paid out, so much money collected and so much spent. The auditors' report may show that not one penny was diverted from civic purposes, and yet that is not true audit—not a real scrutiny of acts and service.

The main point of a real audit of the record of a council is lacking. We have nothing to show whether the money that was spent, was wisely spent; that the ratepayers got value for the expenditure of their money, of the taxes they have paid.

There are perhaps two main reasons for this. One is the indifference of the electors to the management of their civic affairs, one reason of which is that there is no adequate opportunity, and this involves the second reason why there is no adequate general and comprehensive scrutiny of the record and policy, or lack of policy, of a city or other council.

This is not done, largely on account of the date at which our elections are held. We, by custom, have crowded an election period into the few days that precede the New Year; instead of having, as should be had, our election period—our test period of representative service—last the whole year. By custom, which has become a habit, we don't think of electing aldermen till almost the very day we have to make a choice. We make no preparation, and in this regard our choice is a blind one; the casting of our ballot, in many cases, a choice between two or more evils in the matter of candidates. In this regard we are like the thriftless farmer, who makes no preparation for seeding till the seeding time is upon him.

We are not perhaps to blame otherwise than because we hold our elections at an inopportune time of the year.

As at the present, we are in the midst of our civic elections and in the midst of Christmas activity, in the throes of preparation for Christmas. This is something we cannot arrange or alter. Twenty centuries of custom and habit have made Christmas a permanent institution. It is the period when business men, whose interest in civic affairs is one of our most pressing needs, are busiest. They can't neglect their business; Christmas season is their harvest season. The public as a rule are as much interested, and so it comes to pass that there is no time nor opportunity for giving the very vital and momentous matter of civic representation, even an approximation to adequate consideration.

Why should we adhere to the end of the year, the Christmas period, for our elections? No other great interest, no great institutions, do this. Banks and financial institutions hold their annual meetings, and elect their boards of directors—the analogues of our city or town councils, at any other season than the end of the year. Some banks held their annual meetings and elections at the beginning of this month. Others are to hold theirs in January, when it is possible to make their elections, do their most important business, without any distracting conditions.

But we are holding our civic annual meetings—our election of directors—our aldermen, at a time when the public, who are supposed to give their best attention to their business, have their minds and attention distracted by Christmas and other matters to an extent that prevents the needed attention to so important a matter as the selection of the spenders of the inordinately high taxes for the coming year.

The curse, if one may employ so strong a word, of our civic system, is the indifference of the ratepayers to the management of their own businesses, and the cause of this is largely the unfavourable date at which our elections are held. The ratepayers' minds are full of almost everything, but the business of the moment, with the consequence that they vote for aldermanic and other candidates for a council with the same ignorance of qualifications and past service, with the same indifference with which they sign the ordinary petition. We are told that we can get a petition signed for [illegible] almost anybody can be elected to a city, town or village council—because the people don't or haven't, perhaps, a chance to, discriminate. Then minds, on account of the date of elections, are full of everything else but an intelligent conception of the action they are doing in electing civic representatives at random.

If representative institutions are coming into discredit and are largely a failure; if demands are growing in intensity for the adoption of civic government by commission or some other remedy, it is chiefly due to the indifference of the people themselves; and this indifference is in a large part due to the date at which representatives are elected, a time when it is impossible to give, as should be done, undivided attention to so capital a matter as the selection of a civic governing body.

HIGH COST OF LIVING.

For weeks the public has been asking the Borden Government to take action to provide some remedy for the steadily increasing cost of living. The people asked for bread and the government has given them a stone in the form of a commission of inquiry. The government has no faith in its own action. Only a few days ago a member of the government, Hon. Geo. E. Foster, declared against commissions—they were "a mere subterfuge of governments to shelve embarrassing questions." In default of doing something his government has shelved the high cost of living question. This commission is worse than a real one. It is composed of officials in the employ and under the control of the government. The sittings are to be held in private and no doubt the report will be duly censored before it is made public. This expedient to shelve the question would be excusable if the investigation promised to be complete and if it did not supersede immediate action the government might take. The government could remove the taxes from food. The people of Canada paid eleven million dollars in taxes on foods last year. Then the government might use the power of the anti-combine law which permits them to discipline combines and prevent them restricting trade to enhance prices. Here are two remedies ready to hand that the government might use at once. But fear of the combines, in whose interests, in a general sense, the government exists, prevent the government from giving the people the relief that they demand. A commission won't do anything; it can only say something. And what proof is there that, if the government won't act on what it now knows and which would give a large measure of relief, that it will make the finding of even an exparte commission a basis of action it shows such excellent disposition to avoid?

CHIVALRY AND THE BAR.

A French dramatist has made an appeal in a new play for a truly honourable treatment of woman. Chivalry has commonly meant a politeness to the woman of means or of social rank, and even in her case it has been marked by superficial gallantry, readiness to take advantage of her on occasion, or at least a patronizing attitude. Chivalry is apt to be hypocritical.

Mr. Brieux points out that according to the statistics of Belgium the amount spent in that country on alcoholic drinks is practically the [illegible] labour. The case is practically about the same in other "civilized" countries. Women's work goes to buy drink for men. As Mr. Rowell says, there will be little progress in social reform so long as the drink evil remains unabated. Abolish the bar, all the Church conventions have been urging, and Mr Rowell has taken up their cause. The one way for a man to treat all women honourably is to vote against the bar that consumes their wages.—London Advertiser.

Cutting Ice On The Canal

Last Winter's Supply Has Entirely Disappeared

The ice supply cut last winter disappeared some time ago and there was a famine in the cold stuff to such an extent that ice had to be brought in from Orillia. During the last few days, however, ice has been cut in the canal and has been supplied to customers in sheets from three to six inches thick.

REMEMBER THE CHILDREN AT THE SHELTER

Citizens of Peterborough are asked not to forget the little ones in the Children's Aid Society Shelter when they are planning Yuletide gifts. Just at present there are eleven little waifs in the Shelter who will be without favours from Santa Claus unless the genial old gentleman is assisted by local people. Any gifts in the way of toys, clothing, books, skates, hockey sticks, candies, etc., will be appreciated. There must be in many homes toys and books which the children have grown tired of, which would be appreciated by the little ones in the Shelter. The Examiner will be glad to receive all donations and see that they are forwarded.

Should Stop Child Begging

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you allow me space for a few words of disapproval as well as of admonition.

I have again been grieved at finding at my door two innocent children begging a nickle. For what purpose? To help a Sunday School of a wealthy congregation, whose barns are so overcrowded that they have to build greater.

This, to my sense, is too low a thought to teach children or to even encourage them in, even in the name of self-denial, as the little ones express it.

The cause of Christ does not need beggars. It is in need of those who hear the word and do it. When Jesus recognized the hungry multitude he told his disciples to feed them. When Jesus and Peter required the tax money, Jesus told Peter to do something, not to beg; when Peter caught the fish, in that was the needed money. As I understand it, when Peter gained the substance, or understanding of Spirit, this met the human need. Jesus said: "Seek first the Kingdom of God—and all these things (human needs) shall be added."

Now that our worthy Ministerial Association has denounced bazaars, bun feeds, and entertainments in church work, I sincerely hope their next step will be to eliminate this child begging.

If necessary to have a week of self-denial, would it not be better to teach the child to deny itself part of its luxuries and to give of its own rather than to beg from its neighbour.

Jesus' command was to "preach that the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." John, describing his vision of this kingdom, pictured it as a state of wealth, as well as of purity, beauty and glory, consequently no need for begging, but a rejoicing in the abundance of Infinite supply.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,

Sincerely yours,

R. J. TODD.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Dec. 21, 1913.

Christmas Lesson — The Word Made Flesh. John i-1-18.

Golden Text—And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us. John i:14.

(1.) Verses 1-2—What is the meaning of "Word" as here used?

(2.) "The Word of God" or the "Logos" is the inward being of God and God's outward expression. How then is Jesus that "Word"?

(3.) Did Jesus as a human being exist from all eternity or did he begin to be at his birth? Give your reasons.

(4.) How are we to understand that the "Word" existed from "the beginning"—that is, presumably from eternity?

(5.) In your thinking of and your approach to God do you conceive of him as more than one God? Why?

(6.) I firmly believe in the Deity of Jesus, and if you do, how do you reconcile that fact with the other fact, the belief of Roman Catholics and all evangelical Protestants, that there is only one God?

(7.) Is it necessary for there to be any more mystery about the doctrine of the Trinity than there is, for example, about the being of God? Why?

(8.) Verse 3—Who made the world? Give the Scriptural proof.

(9.) Verses 4-5—What does John mean by the expression, "In Him was life"?

(10.) In what respect is the "life" of the Creator different to all other life?

(11.) In how many years is the life of the "Word" of God "the light of men"?

(12.) Why have men in the past and why do they now shut their eyes to the light of God as manifested in Jesus?

(13.) Verses 6-9—What was the substance of the teaching of John the Baptist concerning Jesus?

(14.) What has Jesus already accomplished to be called the "Light of the World"?

(15.) What is involved in believing in the "Light"?

(16.) How is every man born into the world influenced by this "Light"?

(17.) Verses 10-11—How do you account for the sad fact that both the organized church and the world rejected Jesus?

(18.) Seeing that most men to-day who know of Jesus speak highly of him, how is it that they do not become his true followers?

(19.) Verses 12-13—What does it mean to receive Jesus?

(10.) When a man receives Jesus what right or privilege has he that he did not have before?

(21.) What takes place in a man who receives Jesus of the nature of the supernatural?

(22.) Verse 14—What is your mental conception of the fact contained in the statement, "And the word of God was made flesh"?

(23.) Would the Deity of Christ be sufficiently explained by the statement that God entered into the human nature of Jesus, so that "in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily"? Why?

24.) Verses 15-18.—What is the difference between the gospel terms "law" and "grace"?

(25.) Are true Christians now privileged to see God as Jesus did? Why?

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 19.—Rear Admiral Fletcher has notified the secretary of the navy that there are a large number of sick sailors on the United States and British ships attached to the united fleet on the east coast of Mexico and many sick and wounded among the refugees of Tampico, where hospital facilities were practically nil. Secretary Daniels' his morning ordered the U. S. hospital ship Solace from Brooklyn navy yard to Mexican waters forthwith. This vessel will accommodate 1,000 patients and will be available to both British and United States' sick.

BERLIN, GERMANY, Dec. 19.—Lieut. IMPORTANT ADDRESSES TO FARMERS

Messrs. Creasor and Chipman Will Speak at Banquet To-morrow

Two men, well known from one end of Canada to th other through their connection with the farmers' movement in Western Canada, will be the speakers at the Farmers' Banquet to be held in the Oriental Hotel at 7 p.m. to-morrow. One of thesemen, Mr. Creasor, was largely instrumental in organizing and bringing to its present standing the Grain Growers' Grain Company. This farmers' organization started in 1907 with small capital and few members, and that year declared profits of $790. This year the company has declared a profit of $170,000, their paid up capital is $645,000, the volume of business transacted totalled over $50,000,000, and this farmers' company is now the greatest grain handling concern in the world. The second speaker is W. F. Chipman, Editor of The Grain Gorwers' Guide, the official organ of the Grain Growers' Company.

In Toronto yesterday these two men gave addresses that thrilled a large and representative gathering of Ontario farmers. They told of the organization of this company, of its fight for life, first with the railroad companies, then with the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, and of how they triumphed over all difficulties. These men will urge Ontario farmers to organize into a similar company in order that the two may trade back and forth, t he Western Company supplying Eastern farmers with flour, feed, oas, bran and so forh, and buying from Eaern farmers apples, beef and dairy products. For instance, where the farmer of Peterborough counte to join in such a company, the Western Company might agree to buy the entire product of the cheese factories of the county.

New Candidates Should State Their Position

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—While acknowledging the right of any ratepayer to aspire for municipal honours, by offering himself as a candidate for alderman. I believe it is also right for new candidates to declare themselves and let the electors know why they oppose the aldermen who are seeking re-election. In the first place it is necessary for the electors to know what to expect from new blood. We have the past history to go by of the aldermen who are meeting with opposition and some of use believe they are the best of the bunch. If those seeking our support at the polls cannot or dare not tell us why their friends urge them to get in the field, then they are not men who should hold public office. The elector should know that he is not a party to any spiteful scheme when he casts his vote. If the new candidates address the electors they should try and cut out the old set form of saying much and meaning nothing. I was very much surprised at the ignorance displayed of the financial position of our city. This shows clearly that some of our ratepayers do not follow municipal affairs very closely. It is easy to see by the tone of Inquirer's letter in last evening's Examiner, where his sympathy lies. Let us be fair to one another, open and above board and after election day we will have nothing to be ashamed of.

Yours truly,

Fair Play.

FIREMEN'S ANNUAL BANQUET WAS A GREAT SUCCESSS

Over One Hundred Guests Were in Attendance---Christmas Tree Provided for the Little Ones "Don't Deny the Existence of Santa Claus" Was Magistrate Dumble's Admonition to the Juvenile Element.

It has been said that success is a condition of mind; but one instance has been recorded where success alone was not a mental condition, but the product of the combined efforts and indefatigability of a body of men, whose indispensibility is recognized by the uinverse. This instance was associated with the Firemen's banquet that was accounted for on Thursday evening. The festival over which Ichabod has been written is defined on the daily record of the fire department as the "Firemen's Christmas." To the firefighters is conceded the credit of being ahead in every particular pertaining to the routine functions of the department. It is only natural and consistent to suppose that with the annual institution of the Firemens' Christmas, a date should be fixed in advance of the universally recognized occasion, for the commemoration of the event which had its inception pear two thousand years ago. When the festive season is at its apex and the family mahogany is groaning under a load of turkey, cranberry sauce and a few other et ceteras, there remains on duty at the Central Fire Station, a corps of men ever ready to battle with the insiduous fire fiend, and if necessary prevent the cremation of the Christmas turkey, together with a feverish kitchen. The fire fiend is noi respector of persons or festive occasions and it therefore devolves upon the Fire Department to transpose and follow out in their own sphere of activity, the injunction of the German Kaiser, who, in the course of anadrhess some years ago to a gathering of German officers, admonished them, saying, "Keep your swords whetted and your powder dry."

A Varied Programme.

That the Firemens' Christmas was an unqualified success goes without saying. The event was staged in the dormitory, which was fittingly decorated for the occasion. About one hundred guests participated in the banquet, and the varied and interesting programme that followed. The latter was supplied by local talent, and a glance over the list of contributors is sufficient confirmation of its exceptional merit. The guests included a representation of City officials, the Press, and also the wives and families of the firemen. A Christmas tree burdened with gifts dear to the heart of the little ones, occupied a conspicuous place at one end of the room. The ceremony of distributing the presents devolved upon Chief Howard, and a few able assistants, during the course of the evening.

Fire Chief Howard, as host, filled the position of chairman with his usual characteristic ability. In a few terse remarks concerning the work of the Department during the past year, Chief Howard noted the fact that the brigade had responded to one hundred and sixty-one alarms during the first nine months of the year, and that the total fire loss was a little over twelve thousand dollars. This is an admirable record for a City with over twenty thousand inhabitants.

Magistrate Dumble.

Police Magistrate Dumble who was then called upon to speak, made particular reference to the children who were present. He urged them not to be premature about disclaiming the existence of Santa Claus, that if he did not exist in the flesh, he existed in the hearts of their parents.

An honorary member of the Fire Department, with a marked propensity for taking an active part in the subjection of all large fires, was next introduced in the person of Ald. J. J. Duffus. The west ward representative paid a glowing tribute to the efficiency of the Peterborough Fire Department, in which he inferred that the money expended to date in its organization, had been amply justified.

Dr. T. N. Greer, who is connected with the department in the capacity of surgeon, characterized Chief Howard as one of the best fire fighters in the country.

More Men Wanted.

He was followed by Chief of Police Thompson, who created considerable merriment when he inadvertiently referred to the lady beside him as "his wife," whereupon he was reminded by Ald. Green that the lady in question was not his wife, but that of Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr. Chief Thompson's wife occupied a position between Mr. and Mrs. Turner, and was therefore separated from Chief Thompson.

The Chief touched briefly upon a few of the many contingencies that confront a policeman in the discharge of his duty and intimated that more men would have to be added to the force if the City, with its ever-expanding boundaries, was to be adequately patrolled.

Ald. J. C. Anderson, the finance minister of the City Council, concurred in Ald. Duffus' remarks concerning the money expended in the maintenance of the Fire Department. "The needs of the department are increasing in consquence of th rapid growth of the City," observed Ald. Anderson.

Chief Howard next called upon Ald G. W. Green, who was said to have exacted a promise from the Chief, which in effect was to deliver him from the necessity of being called upon to make a speech. Ald. Green commented upon the efficieney of the brigade and urged upon each and every member to uphold the traditions of the department.

Several other speakers followed, after which the evening was brought to a termination with the rendition of the National Anthem.

Among those who contributed to the programme were Master J. Clancy, Miss Lily Clancy, Messrs. J. John, J. J. Turner, Sr., R. J. Soden, F. Skitch, C. Ackerman and Lieut.-Col. Miller.

MESSRS. PAPPAS AND CLAYTON OPEN PICTURE HOUSE IN LINDSAY

Have Secured Ten Year Lease of Big Main Street Store—Will Have Their Own Vaudeville Circuit—Details of Improvements at the Royal

ALL SEATS UPHOLSTERED

Messrs. Clayton and Pappas, the local motion picture theatre magnates returned last night from Lindsay, where they secured a ten-year lease on a big Kent Street store. They get possession early in January and will immediately transform it into a big vaudeville house, with a capacity of 600. The front of the Royal theatre in this City and the seats will be sent to Lindsay for the new house which will be a credit to the Town. The attractions will be six good vaudeville acts with a change every day and first run pictures. The premises secured constitute one of Lindsay's largest stores and a splendid location on the main street.

Royal Alterations.

The alterations and addition to the Royal Theatre will be begun on January 5th and should be completed in about ten days. The present front will be taken out and a new entrance will be placed in a central position in the front wall. It will be an exact reproduction of the entrance of the Strand Theatre in Toronto, Mr. Miller, the Toronto architect who built the Strand, has prepared the plans of the new Royal.

The stage will be 30 feet by 36 feet, with flying wings, and complete equipment for vaudeville, stock companies, and the average show on the road. The stage will be moved from its present position to the centre of the rear wall. The plans include quite an addition to the east end of the building, making the outside wall sheer with the sidewalk on the west margin of the market.

The principal feature of the alterations is the building of a gallery to accommodate five hundred. This means that the second storey of the building will be cut out. There will be six hundred upholstered seats on the ground floor. Lady ushers will be engaged for the main floor.

Mr. Miller's plans have been accepted and everything is in readiness for the work. He has promised that there will be no posts in the Theatre. These are being avoided under the gallery by the use of heavy one-piece iron beams.

As stated above, Messrs. Pappas and Clayton are about to open a big house in Lindsay, and it is by having these two links in their circuit that they can guarantee classy vaudeville acts. There will be six acts every day with a change made daily. The pictures will be "first run," and special care will be exercised in securing good novelties.

The cost of the alterations to the Royal ran up to between $8,000 and $10,000.

Speaking of the oil wells at Calgary, Mr. Davidson says it is not an unusual thing to see automobiists motor out to the wells, pump gasoline from the well, strain it and fill their car tanks. FORMER RECTOR OF ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL RECEIVES HONOURS

Ven. Arch. Casey Made Domestic Prelate with Title of Monsignor—St. Mary's Church Lindsay Crowded on Thursday Night

BISHOP O'BRIEN PRESENT

From our own Correspondent.

LINDSAY, Dec. 19.—Ven Archdeacon Casey, parish priest of Lindsay, and former Rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, was formally robed on Thursday night in the purple of a Domestic Prelate, with the titular honour of Monsignor. The ceremony was performed in St. Mary's Church, Lindsay, by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, in the presence of a very large congregation and a number of the clergy of the diocese.

The honour conferred upon Archdeacon Casey is a recognition of forty-one faithful years of service as a priest, quite a number of which were spent as Rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterborough.

An interesting coincidence is found in the fact that Monsignor Casey officiated at the marriage of Bishop O'Brien's parents.

Prior to the blessing of the Monsignorial robes, an address of welcome was read to Bishop O'Brien by Mr. L. V. O'Connor, and presented by Senator McHugh, on behalf of the congregation.

In reply His Lordship said that on his first official visit to Lindsay he did not wish to come empty-handed, especially to the parish next in importance to St. Peter's, in Peterborough. It was a great satisfaction to show honour to a priest who had laboured long for the glory of God, and the spiritual and material welfare of men. Rome has provided different honourary positions, among the foremost of which is that of Domestic Prelate, which will be conferred in the name of the Holy Father. It is an honour for any priest to be recognized by God's Church, while the position indicates tht worthiness of the person, it also reflects credit upon th parish giving you a certain standing in the diocese.

Bishop O'Brien dwelt upon the relations between priest and people in the Catholic Church; one of the most beautiful relationships, he said, in the world. The parishioners of Lindsay have always shown the warmest feelings towards its Pastor and the Bishop of the Diocese, and His Lordship expressed the hope that these ideal conditions would always obtain.

Address to Monsignor.

When the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Casey returned from the Vestry attired in the robes of his office, the following address was read to him by Dr. B. F. Blanchard and a purse of gold was presented by Mr. F. Costello, on behalf of the congregation:

Reverend Monsignor,—The good tidings borne to us, your parishioners and children of your elevation to the distinguished position of Domestic Prelate to His Holiness, Pope Pius X., and the title of Monsignor, has been appreciated to such an extent that we desire to show our pleasure by the presentation of an address on this, the first visit of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, to our Parish.

The honour conferred previously in the Parish of St. Mary's was to one of sainted memory, the Right Reverend Monsignor Laurent, who has gone to his reward.

The mantle so fittingly worn by our late Pastor now falls on the shoulders of one long in the ministry of the Church, devoted in parochial duties and honoured by loyal parishioners. We honour this occasion not only in the knowledge that to you personally has this distinguished mark of appreciation been offered, but that the reflection of this investiture this evening adds to the dignity of the Parish and the Town of Lindsay. Thrice blessed we might say you are on this auspicious event, a son of the diocese honoured by the people and clergy of the diocese, invested by His Lordship, who is fully cognisant of your priestly career and, greatest of all, that it should please His Holiness to confer the title of "Monsignor" for your long and successful ministry in the Church.

Long may you live to faithfully minister to your flock and still add laurels to your robes of office by work in the Master's Vineyard. Long may you live in the hearts and affections of your people, who deeply and sincerely feel a gratitude to His Holiness for conferring such distinction.

Whilst words of this address only partially express the good wishes of the people of the Parish of St. Mary's toward you, we have seen fit to make this occasion memorable by some tangible evidence of our esteem.

We now ask you to accept this purse in the spirit in which it is given, not to measure the full extent of our affection but merely indicative of the heartfelt response of parishioners to a faithful and devoted Pastor.

We pray that you may long be spared to wear with distinction the robes of office bestowed to-day and also for years to continue as our Spiritual Advisor, a distinguished citizen of the Town of Lindsay, an ornament to our Parish and a bulwark of the Church.

Mons. Casey's Reply.

Monsignor Casey thanked Bishop O'Brien for the honour conferred as intermediary of Pope Pius, and the congregation for their thoughtfulness and cordiality.

He had followed the career of Bishop O'Brien from his earliest years and predicted that as head of the diocese he would bring new blessings to the people under his care. He promised to renew his efforts in the parish of Lindsay.

The visiting clergy included Vicar General Murray, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Father Cote, Father Galvin, of Peterborough; Rev. Fathers Scanlon, of Grafton; McFadden, of Wooler; O'Connell, of Burnley; Guiry, of Kinmount; F. J. O'Sullivan, Port Hope; J. F. O'Sullivan, Victoria Road; McGuire, of Douro; Dean Kelly, of Trout Creek; J. C. Roach, C.S.B., Toronto.

During the evening Mr. Jules Brazil, organist of St. Basil's Church, Toronto, presented an appropriate organ programme.

PRESENTATION TO MR. F. E. KERR

On Tuesday evening an address and presentation was made to Mr. F. E. Kerr, teacher of the Ladies' Bible Class of St. Andrew's Church. The affair took place at the residence of Miss Martin, 253 Dalhousie street.

The presentation took the form of a suit case and umbrella. The address, which is as follows, was made by the Rev. James Rollins:

The Address.

Dear Teacher,—The members of your Bible Class approach the Christmas with thankfulness for the many blessings of the year, and not the least of these were the glad and profitable hours spent under your instruction.

We would give expression to our gratitude for your continuous, painstaking and profitable efforts on our behalf. In the future years a glade of brightness in our lives will be these happy hours spent together, while studying the Book, and realizing the presence of the Great Teacher. Accept our grateful acknowledgment, and this little Christmas gift to remind you of your class.

Wishing you the compliments of the season and many happy returns, we are,

Faithfully yours,

NOT A CANDIDATE FOR MAYORALTY

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—A report has been spread broadcast through the city during the last few days that, on nomination day I will be a candidate for Mayor. I admit it is an enviable position for any man to have the honour of being Mayor of the City of Peterborough, of which we are all so proud, yet I beg to state that this report is absolutely untrue, and at no time did I have any intention of aspiring for such a high position. It is my sincere desire that this office should be left in the hands of more capable and experienced men.

I wish to state, however, that if it is the expressed desire of the ratepayers of the West Ward, and the citizens of Peterborough generally, I will again be a candidate as alderman in the City Council of 1914.

Very sincerely yours,
Jos. J. Duffus.

SALVATION ARMY SUNDAY SCHOOL IS NOW OVERCROWDED

Since Adjutant McElhiney took charge of the local corps of the Salvation Army his influence has followed many departments with [illegible] energy, zeal and determination. Those intimately acquainted with his efforts say that every thing he turns his hand to becomes successful.

The Sunday School attendance has increased from 265 to 278 since June, and it is stated that none of the children recently received were members of any other church Sunday School. Months ago, Adjt. McElhiney stated that before long the school accommodation would be inadequate for the scholars. He then began his work through the highways and byways, gathered assistants about him and now the Sunday School quarters are crowded with children of all [illegible] years and conditions.

One of the officers stated that on a certain evening two little [illegible] attended were clothed in the [illegible] of garments, and [illegible] much neglected. It is claimed that children are being [illegible] this Sunday School [illegible] otherwise entirely [illegible].

Each Thursday in the [illegible] composed of boys from ten to [illegible] years of age. There are twenty of them. Adjutant McElhiney rustled around and secured instruments and the youngsters acquit themselves creditably in their playing.

To The Electors of West Ward

Gentlemen:

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to return me as Alderman for your Ward for 1914. As a business man with a successful business experience, I feel that our motto should be "Business methods in all departments of the Council." Efficiency linked with economy should be our guiding principle.

I trust you will favour me with your support and I promise should I be returned that I will do my best to merit your approval.

Jos. Wm. Worth

TO THE RATEPAYERS OF CENTRE WARD:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I spoke with a merchant at his store door, and he said he supposed the people would go ahead and elect a mob of dead heads to the Council. In fact, he said "more dead heads." That merchant is a pessimist and has a grouch.

But he may have reasons. His view of things comes from seeing men go into Council, and who have made promises—promised too much. Promised to do things they really didn't believe they could or would do. It is the popular thing.

I am not, please observe, making promises. I don't just know what I can do until I get there—if I ever do—but I can assure the ratepayers that I will try and be as useful, helpful and diligent in their and your service as I can be. That covers it.

I shall be very glad to receive your vote and hope to be so favored.

Respectfully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN

GLASGOW CELTIC HAS THE BEST DEFENCE IN BRITAIN

Present Leaders in the Scottish League Have Had Only Two Goals Scored Against Them in Thirteen Successive Games and Nine Goals in Nineteen Games--Other Defences.

"Which do you consider the best football defence in Britain?" asks a reader. We have little hesitation in awarding the palm to Glasgow Celtic, the present leaders in the Scottish League. They have won 13 successive games, in which only two goals have been put past their defence, twice beaten in eighteen hours' play. In 19 games the Celtic have been debited with nine goals. The best defence in the First Division of the Football League is that of West Bromwich Albion, who have lost 14 goals in 16 games. In the Second Division, Clapton Orient, have been most successful in preventing their opponents from scoring. Their record is eight goals against in 15 games.

Large Number of Suggestions.

A large number of aspensions were made at the last meeting of the Consultation Committee of the Football Association, among them being:

W. Hamill, Manchester United, 14 days from No. 21st, for misconduct in match with Aston Villa.

J. Brown, Chelsea, 14 days from Nov. 21st, for misconduct in match with Brentford.

J. Bumphrey, Birmingham, 14 days from Nov. 21st for misconduct in match with Barnsley.

W. J. Rayner, Croydon Common, 14 days from Nov. 21st, for misconduct in match with Watford.

V. B. G. Lingard, Darween F. C. secretary was suspended on Nov. 20th for failing to comply with the order of the association of Oct. 3rd.

More Notable Transfers.

Another well-known player has changed his headquarters during the past two weeks. "Bobby" Parker has been transferred to Everton. He is a man who has been kept in the background during the last few years by the phenomenal scoring of the Glasgow Club's first team centre forward, Wm. Reid. Parker has in the three seasons played 15 times in the league team, and has averaged slightly over a goal per game — a really remarkable record, which Everton hope he will maintain in English football. Liverpool have captured a right wing forward above the average stamp in John Sheldon, who would have earned his place in the Manchester United team long ago had he had to stand comparison with a less consummate artist than Wm. Meredith. The auburn-haired laddie will yet make his name. An old Evertonian in Mountford has severed his connection with Burnley to try his fortune ayont the Tweed, where he has joined a former Turf Moor clubmate in Riley at Third Lanark. Manchester City have indúced Reading to release Edward Hanney, a big, rawboned centre-half, who is expected to make his presence felt in more senses than than one in a team that has been badly let down at half-back this season. Stirling has been played on the Middlesborough tranfer list at his own request and Tottenham Hotspur have acquiesced in a similar appeal made to them by Bauchop and Britain.

Will Downs Leave Barnsley?

It has been freely rumoured that Barnsley are about to transfer Downs to Sheffield Wednesday. That Downs would be a welcome addition to Wednesday's ranks is, of course, true; he would be a welcome addition to the ranks of any club, but if Barnsley thought of parting with him they would almost certainly demand a transfer fee similar to that which they obtained for Utley, and I doubt very much whether Wednesday would ever dream of paying such a price. Downs has not yet had his benefit, which, in fact, is due in April, and under present conditions he would be entiled to fifty per cent. of his transfer fee. Downs may leave Barnsley after April, but we don't think the Oakwell officials would agree to his departure before then.

Soccer Notes.

Barnsley have come to terms with Third Lanark, and transferred Mountford, their inside forward, to the Scottish team.

Huddersfield Town have signed on a new goalkeeper in the person of Edwin Davis, of the Clapton Orient Club. Davis, who is 21 years of age, is stated to be a very promising custodian, but with Hugall playing so well, he had not much chance of making his mark with the Orient.

It was announced yesterday that the Barnsley directors had placed Travers, their inside right, on the transfer list, this step being taken at the request of the player, who is desirous of leaving the club. Travers, who joined Barnsley three seasons ago from Leicester Fosse, has this year proved to be the most successful goal socrer of the side.

Hockey--That's All

Captain Alex. Butcher asks the Boston Exploits to report at the Boston Cafe to-morrow afternoon at 2:15 o'clock. Every player is expected to be on hand.

The O.H.A. executive will meet to-night in Toronto, and some interesting developments are to be expected.

Every Junior O.H.A. player is expected to attend the workout at Brock St. Rink to-night at 7 o'clock. The squad was given a rest on Wednesday night, and every member is expected out to-night. It is likely that a captain will be elected after the workout.

Harold Parker, formerly of Peterborough, is playing good hockey at left defence for the Hamilton Junior O.H.A. team.

Ottawa College wanted to play the local intermediates here next Tuesday night, but as there was not much chance of ice, the local management declined the offer. Leo Derocher, the ex-Peterborough goaler, will guard the nets for the Collegians during their tour which will include several United States cities.

A. R. James, the former Regina goal-keeper, was in town yesterday, and signed an intermediate Peterborough certificate. He will be in for the first practice.

Arthur Armstrong, who was with Peterborough Seniors last year, and formerly a member of the Trenton team, has gone into business in Seneca Falls, N. Y., and will be out of hockey this year.

Through an error in last evening's Examiner, the name of the Wm. Hamilton Co's team was omitted from the list of teams admitted to the Mercantile Hockey League. The Hamilton Co. team will have a team in the organization, while the Brintons, whose name was given in last night's list, will not be represented this year.

MERCANTILE HOCKEY LEAGUE.

A meeting of the officers and committee of the Mercantile Hockey league will be held to-morrow (Saturday) evening, at 8 o'clock, sharp, at the "Review" Office, Hunter Street. Each team affiliated is requested to send one representative. The business to be transacted is important, but need occupy but a short time.

BISHOP'S PRESENTS TO THE SCHOOL CHILDREN

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien Visited School To-day for the Formal Closing Before the Holidays.

The pupils of St. Peter's School and St. Mary's Convent enjoyed a Christmas tree and entertainment in connection with the formal closing for the holidays. Every pupil received a remembrance from Bishop O'Brien who visited each school, the former at one o'clock and the convent at two o'clock. Choruses were sung and brief addresses of encouragement were delivered by His Lordship who spoke of the significance of Christmas and its particular appeal to children.

THE GREATEST HAPPINESS

Comes To Ourselves When We Make Others Happy With Our Gifts

THE value of a gift consists, not in costliness or variety, but in the feelings of affection, or regard, or sympathy, or honour, which it is supposed to carry. It is time that both giver and receiver realized this. Too often the spirit of Christmas is utterly sacrificed in the contest between the desire to spend and the duty of refraining. For a gift to be worth the giving, no sacrifice of duty must be entered into it. A tiny flower given in love and simplicity is better than a rare and costly gem procured with worry and doubt. When you give something to wear, you exhibit good sense, good taste and good judgement.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

There is no very natural change in the stock market to-day. The undertone is good and the market resists pressure following the attack on or liquidation in specific issues for particular causes. It is manifest that liquidation has ceased in the main. Important interests are reported bullish. They are conservative in their expressions. The conservatism is accompanied by references to the French situation which is not liked. However, it is mentioned as offering a check rather than anything else. It is intimated that upon all reactions accumulation of good securities will be found. The Paris situation is closely watched and is found to hold unsettling elements in the character of the new ministry. The Mexican situation has to an extent complicated affairs for many French investors holding Mexican securities.

Berlin has been liquidating stocks. The same may be said of London.

GIRLS PASSED AS TELEGRAPH BOYS

Two English Girls Masquerade as Boys to Get Work

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—Elsie Whitman and Margaret Johnson, known until arrested last night as "Jack" Whitman and "Roy" Johnson, respectively, who had for about a month masqueraded as C.C.R. telegraph boys, and who for some weeks prior to that had worked in J. R. Booth's mills, to-day told the story of their escapades. One of the girls was detected by a Dominion policeman while delivering a telegram and confessed the scheme.

The arrest of the other followed at the C.P.R. telegraph office later.

Their case is one of the strangest ever experienced in Canadian police circles, the remarkable fact being that they have passed as boys in the business centre of Ottawa since Oct. 20, when they came from Montreal.

Col. Sherwood learned to-day that Margaret, or "Roy," is married and has a child in England, and it was to earn enough money to bring her mother and little girl to Canada.

Elsie, or "Jack," is a tall blonde, blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked girl, rather slender and masculine in appearance. Margaret, or "Roy," is a short, dark, black-haired, chubby-cheeked girl, with a rather more masculine face than her companion, but with unmistakable feminine hands and figure.

They are both English girls, aged, respectively, 27 and 24.

A REPLY TO MONAGHAN BOY

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I read in last evening's Examiner a letter signed, "A Monaghan Boy," stating "delegation to the North Monaghan Council was pretty cheeky."

Now, Mr. Editor, did this man, "A Monaghan Boy," ever live one single hour in the township referred to, or ever pay one red cent in taxes, or is he a miserable, whoening crank of that non-artistic, boil-over disposition, whose daily business allows him more spare time than cash, picking holes in other people's affairs?

The writer further states, "They must have something up their sleeve." They certainly have, as I heard one gentleman quote, whose name is on the petition referred to, "would not this government allowance be a capital spot to erect an institution for such men who have never made a success of their profession, who live like a hermit, on a third floor back, to cheat the municipality out of any taxes that might be levied on them, not to mention of escaping a poll tax by reason of his 'advanced second childhood.'

Does this scribe of last night's epistle think the Council mentioned above are bamboozled into believing "A Monaghan Boy," is a resident of their township, or need his outside views to guide them?

In short, the latter part of his letter shows a complete want of knowledge and wisdom, and if this uneducated grub would like to investigate the case, let "IT" attend the next meeting of our Council and lay before its delegates his would-be broad-minded views, at which time I can fully guarantee "A Monaghan Boy" of being relieved of his ignorance.

Yours, etc.,

"A Real Monaghan Boy."

Dear Santa Claus:—

It is near Christmas and if I write to ask you perhaps you will bring me a nice doll for a present. Mr. Elliott is going to give me a pattern of a nice dress to make for her and in the picture it looks very nice and if I can make one like it I shall be very pleased. I like making my dollie's clothes. I have got a little sister who would like one too. Good-bye Father Christmas.

From Your Loving,
Little Friend.

Dear Santa Claus:—

I am a little girl, seven years old. I wish you would come to see me for you're such a jolly old fellow.

I want a great many things for Christmas. Are you coming in a sleigh with reindeers? If you come down our chimney we won't put any fire on.

Dear Santa, how do you get down the little chimney when you are so fat?

One thing I do want is a leather doll carriage. Of course I want candies and nuts.

Are you very rich Santa? You must be to give so many little girls and boys toys.

Good-bye Dear Santa.
With Love From

A LETTER ON THE POWER QUESTION

To the Editor, The Examiner:

In reading the joint letter from the two power companies to the city, I was struck with their mendacity. Whatever may have been the shortcomings of our Council in the past, these companies must not think that our Council is that easy to allow such a job being put up on them as they have hatched between them. To fix a price themselves under the pretence that one of them is going to sell out to the other and that this shall be the price to be paid by the city is a cool proposition. They constitute themselves both judge and jury as show their utter disregard of law and decency they admit that one company cannot sell to the other without the consent of the Council and yet they arrogate to themselves the right to make such a sale without such consent. Indeed they question the right of the Council to expropriate their plant and threaten to proceed to erect poles and wires, etc., if the Council does not submit to their terms. Their letter is quite in keeping with their past records.

We know how the Peterborough Light and Power Company failed to keep their promises in not extending the Street Railway to Ashburnham, and other points. We also know that their recent valuation of their plant exceeded that of the city's sworn expert valuators by one-half a million dollars. I trust our representatives will see that we do not suffer by the bluff and threats of these companies.

Firmness.

CELLS FOR OFFICER

German Who Started Alsatian Row Must Do 43 Days!

WILL LOSE HIS COMMISSION

STRASSBURG, Germany, Dec. 20—A sentence of 43 days' imprisonment was pronounced by a court-martial yesterday on Lieut. Baron Von Forstner, of the 99th Infantry, who was found guilty of a charge of cutting down with his sabre a lame shoemaker of Zabern, Alsace, on Dec. 2. The charge against him was wilful assault and causing great bodily harm by the illegal use of his weapon.

The sentence of imprisonment in a penitentiary involves the loss of his commission as an officer by Lieut. Baron Von Forstner.

Lieut. Von Forstner was the officer who brought about the recent troubles between the military and civilian population of Zabern by making insulting remarks in regard to the Alsatian citizens when he addressed the recruits of his company.

In his testimony Lieut. Von Forstner said that he had acted in the way he did under a sort of semi-compulsion. He had been threatened by his colonel with impeachment before a court of honor if he showed the slightest reluctance to use his weapon. He testified that the officers had received repeated orders from the German army headquarters and from the regimental commander to adopt an aggressive attitude, to stand no nonsense from civilians and to permit no insults or abuse.

Lieut. Von Forstner said he acted under the prevailing German assumption that an officer was irretrievably dishonored if he permitted himself to receive a blow.

Col. Von Reuter, the commander of the 99th Regiment, said he had instructed his officer to act as aggressively as possible. A Prussian officer must not permit disrespect to be shewn to him, he said.

GUARDS ARE SILENT.

Nobody Has Confessed Yet to Selling Tobacco.

KINGSTON, Dec. 20.—As yet none of the penitentiary guards has confessed to having had a hand in trafficking in tobacco with convicts, and at yesterday's session of the commission Chairman Macdonnell repeated his statement of Thursday to the effect that if the guards guilty of this offence confessed they would not be prosecuted under the Penitentiary Act.

It is stated that the commission has strong evidence against the guards, and that the matter was traced through the local postoffice, were the guards received registered letters from relatives of convicts, containing tobacco and money. The convicts declared that guards who got tobacco for them shared the money, half going into tobacco and the other half into the guards' pockets.

The commission adjourned yesterday till Jan. 6, when Inspectors Hughes and Stewart will be examined.

Chief Night Watchman Holland was charged with being drunk on duty on Sept. 18 last. Hospital Overseer Wilson, when pressed hard by the chairman, admitted that Holland staggered while making his rounds, and appeared to be drunk, but a dozen guards under Holland swore he was sober, furthermore, that they had never seen Holland drunk.

Richard McGeein, a guard, frankly admitted that in making out his application for a position he misstated his age in order to come under the age limit, thirty-five.

Evidence in regard to records kept at the prison showed that all records of bad conduct were kept against convicts, but no record kept of good conduct.

Mr. Downey stated that full records should be filed.

Boundaries of Albania Settled.

FLORENCE, Italy, Dec. 20.—The international commission for the delimitation of the Albanian frontier yesterday decided unanimously to abide by any decision which may be reached in London.

The commission appointed to delimit the northern boundary of Albania has, it is understood, adjourned until April 2 next. The southern boundary has been decided on provisionally from Cape Stylos to Koritza, but its precise course has not yet been laid down.

Warships For Chili.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20. — A cable from London to The Herald says:

The Lynch and the Condell, two warships built for the Chilian Government at Cowes, are now ready for immediate delivery.

They are 320 feet long, and with the exception of the British superdestroyer Swift, they are the largest in the world. Both vessels have had satisfactory trails.

Shoe Prices Will Take A Big Jump

Lack of Cattle is Blamed for the High Cost of Walking

LEATHER VERY SCARCE

According to local shoe dealers, a dispatch from Montreal to the effect that the shoe retailers of that city say that they will be compelled to raise their prices on account of the increased prices they will have to pay for their stock is entirely true. The dispatch states:

"The price of shoes is about to soar dealers leading Montreal retailers of footwear. The lack of cattle in the United States and Canada, which is being blamed for the high cost of living, is also being made to bear the blame for the high cost of walking".

Must Pay $6.

Those who have up to the present been content to pay $5 and $5.50 for footwear will now, it is said, find it necessary to pay $6 and over, or be satisfied with an inferior pair.

Leading shoe retailers, when interviwed, state that they are now paying from 10 per cent to 20 per cent. more for shoes than a year ago.

One of the biggest retail shoe dealers in the City confirmed the statement contained in the above dispatch and edded that it would be safe to place the increase at 28 per cent. Sole leather has alone increased in the past year 12 1-2 per cent. Other classifications of leather have increased correspondingly.

Church Barber Shop Opened.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—A special barber is the latest innovation in church life. St. George's Episcopal Church, which the late J. Pierpont Morgan endowed with half a million dollars, has installed a barber shop for the choir. Rev. Karl Reland, the rector, in announcing the new feature yesterday, said:

"For the sake of uniformity in the appearance of our choir boys on Sundays and as a slight evidence of parochial appreciation we have assigned a special barber to the boys on Saturday mornings and on Sundays before services."

TRIED TO SEE KING.

Woman Endeavored to Slip In With Delegates.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The delegates of the twelve nations, including Canada, represented at the International Conference on Safety at Sea, were received by King George at Buckingham Palace yesterday afternoon. Each of them was introduced and presented separately in the throne room by Sydney Buxton, president of the Board of Trade. His Majesty extended to them a most cordial greeting and emphasized his personal interest as a sailor in the success of the conference.

A woman, apparently of French nationality, attempted to smuggle herself into the palace under cover of the crowd of delegates, but a policeman saw her and pounced upon her. The woman protested volubly that she was going to see Queen Mary and created some disturbance when she was led away from the precincts. Apparently she was not a suffragette.

Seeking Charter for Line.

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.—The Norfolk and Elgin Railway will apply to Parliament next session for incorporation. The Western Central Railway want extension of time for the beginning of construction and other railways to guarantee its bonds.

BILL GOES THROUGH

Currency Measure Has Big Majority in U. S. Senate

MANY CHANGES ARE MADE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20. — The administration currency reform bill, proposing a revision of the financial system of the United States and the creation of regional reserve banks to act as stabilizing elements in the banking and financial world, passed the Senate last night by a vote of 54 to 34.

Forces that had fought together for improvement and amendment of the measure to the last, divided when the final vote came. Senator Hitchcock, who had led the opposition to the bill, returned to the Democratic ranks, and Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, a banker, and one of the leaders on the Republican side, with five other Republicans and Senator Poindexter, Progressive, voted for the passage of the measure.

Wide differences exist between the form of the legislation passed by the Senate last night and the bill that passed the House several months ago. Democratic leaders already have partly adjusted these differences, however, and it was predicted last night that the bill would be completed by a conference committee and sent to President Wilson for his signature by Monday night.

Among the chief points of difference between House and Senate are the following:

The House provided for twelve regional banks; the Senate for from eight to twelve, discretion being left the federal reserve board.

The Senate added a provision creating a fund to guarantee the deposits of failed banks that are members of the reserve associations.

The House limited the rediscount of commercial paper at the regional banks to that maturing in 90 days; the Senate provided that 180-day agricultural paper could be accepted under certain limitations.

The gold reserve required of the regional banks against circulating notes was placed at 33 1-2 per cent. by the House and 40 per cent. by the Senate. Banks would be permitted to loan on five-year farm mortgages by the Senate bill, on one-year mortgage by the House bill.

Senator La Follette proposed two amendments just before the bill came to a vote, which caused a wild sensation. One of them was written into the bill and the other rejected by an overwhelming vote.

The first provided that "No United States Senator or representative in Congress shall be a member of the Federal reserve board, a director in a Federal reserve bank or an officer or director of any member bank."

This amendment was adopted without a roll call. The second amendment (rejected) provided that no member of the Federal reserve board, any officer or director of a regional or member bank should be a director or officer of any other bank, trust company, or insurance company.

MAY RELEASE FIFTY.

Young Convicts May Get a Chance In Northern Woods.

TORONTO, Dec. 20. — Mr. Alfred Fitzpatrick, superintendent of the Reading Camp Association, returned from a mining camp in the Sudbury district yesterday, where he had taken a paroled youth from the Kingston Penitentiary. This young man, who was sentenced to four years for theft, had about two years and five months to run, but was released to the association as an experiment. If he makes good, about fifty young prisoners will be released from the penitentiary in the spring and placed in the northern camps under the supervision of the Reading Camp Association teachers. The association hopes to be the means of releasing another youth from Kingston in a few days. He will be taken to another camp, and upon his behaviour depends the release of other young prisoners.

Feeling Against Colombia.

PANAMA, Dec. 20.—An anti-Colombian demonstration took place here late Thursday night. A procession was formed at about 9 o'clock in the evening and marched through the streets, the participants waving torches and letting off firecrackers. The disorder increased toward midnight, when the crowd proceeded to some houses occupied by Colombians and threw stones at the windows and uttered threats.

The trouble was brought about by an article by a local writer reflecting on the Colombians which was replied to by a Colombian resident.

Winter Navigation.

QUEBEC, Dec. 20.—A company has been organized in this city with J. A. Fafard as president to promote winter navigation in the lower St. Lawrence. The company propose to run a weekly steamer, winter as well as summer, from Matane in connection with the Gulfport terminal railway to Godbout on the north shore, thence to Clark City, Seven Islands. The company is asking for a mail subsidy and has the support of the Quebec Board of Trade as a step in the direction of winter navigation of the St. Lawrence.

TIMBER DESTROYED.

Province Will Sell Fallen Trees Left by Big Gales.

TORONTO, Dec. 20. — Millions of feet of first class timber on crown lands have been felled in the north country by the tremendous gales which have driven across within the last few weeks. The Department of Lands and Forests is now engaged in disposing of this at a reduced figure, to contractors who will take it out immediately.

The region particularly affected lies north and east of the Soo and east to Merrick Township on the T. & N. O. Thirty-four townships under timber license suffered severely and the Mississaga forest reserve in like measure.

The C.N.R. will take a large part of that damaged in the Nipissing district at $5 per thousand for blowdown timber, and $13.25 for that standing in the same locality. Direct loss would be felt if this offer were refused.

Deputy Minister Aubrey White states that the timber be removed before the borers attack it and destroy it utterly.

Commuted Fares For Whitby.

WHITBY, Dec. 20.—District Passenger Agent Horning, of the G.T.R., under the direction of Mayor Willis, spent the afternoon here in a thorough inspection of the great improvements under way all over town. This is preliminary to the immediate consideration by the passenger management of extending the zones for commuted fares.

Self Government for Provinces.

MADRID, Dec. 20.—Premier Dato yesterday presented to King Alfonso for his signature a decree involving the principle of decentralization extending the rights of local self-government to the Spanish provinces. The measure generally is commented on favorably.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION
"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness" writes Mr. Wm. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"Justice and a sincere desire to help you, force me, my child. Were you not the woman who entered Mr. Van Burnam's house at midnight with this man?"

"I entered the house."

"At midnight?"

"Yes."

"And with this man?"

Silence.

"You do not speak, Miss Oliver."

Again silence.

"It was Franklin who was with you at the Hotel D——?"

She uttered a cry.

"And it was Franklin who connived at your change of clothing there, and advised or allowed you to dress yourself in a new suit from Altman's?"

"Oh!" she cried again.

"Then why should it not have been he who accompanied you to the Chinaman's, and afterwards took you in a second back to the house in Gramercy Park?"

"Known, known, all known!" was her moan.

"Sin and crime cannot long remain hidden in this world, Miss Oliver. The police are acquainted with all your movements from the moment you left the Hotel D——. That is why I have compassion on you. I wish to save you from the consequences of a crime you saw committed, but in which you took no hand."

"O," she exclaimed in one involuntary burst, as she half rose to her knees, "if you could save me from appearing in the matter at all! If you would let me run away——"

But Mr. Gryce was not the man to give her hope on any such score.

"Impossible, Miss Oliver. You are the only person who can witness for the guilty. If I should let you go, the police would not. Then why not tell at once whose hand drew the hatpin from your hat and——"

"Stop!" she shrieked; "stop! you kill me! I cannot bear it! If you bring that moment back to my mind I shall go mad! I feel the horror of it rising in me now! Be still! I pray you, for God's sake, to be still!"

This was mortal anguish; there was no acting in this. Even he was startled by the emotion he had raised, and sat for a moment without speaking. Then the necessity of providing against all further mistakes by fixing the guilt where it belonged, drove him on again, and he said:

"Like many another woman before you, you are trying to shield a guilty man at your own expense. But it is useless, Miss Oliver; the truth always comes to light. Be advised, then, and make a confidant of one who understands you better than you think."

But she would not listen to this.

"No one understands me. I do not understand myself. I only know that I shall make a confidant of no one; that I shall never speak." And during the long hour [illegible] she buried her head in the bedclothes.

To most men her tone and the action which accompanied it would have been final. But Mr. Gryce possessed great patience. Waiting for just a moment till she seemed more composed, he murmured gently:

"Not if you must suffer more from your silence than from speaking? Not if men—I do not mean myself, child, for I am your friend—will think that you are to blame for the death of the woman whom you saw fall under a cruel stab, and whose rings you have?"

"I!" Her horror was unmistakable; so were her surprise, her terror, and her shame, but she added nothing to the word she had uttered, and he was forced to say again:

"The world, and by that I mean both good people and bad, will believe all this. He will let them believe all this. Men have not the devotion of women."

"Alas! alas!" It was a murmur rather than a cry, and she trembled so the bed shook visibly under her. But she made no response to the entreaty in his look and gesture, and he was compelled to draw back in silence.

When a few heavy minutes had passed, he spoke again, this time in a tone of sadness.

"Few men are worth such sacrifices, Miss Oliver, and a criminal never. But a woman is not moved by that thought. She should be moved by this, however. If either of these brothers is to blame in this matter, consideration for the guiltless one should lead you to mention the name of the guilty."

"But even this did not visibly affect her.

"I shall mention no names," said she.

"A sign will answer."

"I shall make no sign."

"Then Howard must go to his trial?"

A gasp, but no words.

"And Franklin proceed on his way undisturbed?"

She tried not to answer, but the words would come. Pray God! I may never see such a struggle again.

"That is as God wills. I can do nothing in the matter." And she sank back crushed and well night insensible.

Mr. Gryce made no further effort to influence her.

XXXIV.

Exactly Half-Past Three.

"She is more unfortunate than wicked," was Mr. Gryce's comment as we stepped into the hall.

"Nevertheless, watch her closely, for she is in just the mood to do herself a mischief. In an hour, or at the most two, I shall have a woman here to help you. You can stay till then?"

"All night, if you say so."

"That you must settle with Miss Althorpe. As soon as Miss Oliver is up I shall have a little scheme to propose, by means of which I hope to arrive at the truth of this affair. I must know which of these two men she is shielding."

"Then you think she did not kill Mrs. Van Burnam herself?"

"I think the whole matter one of the most puzzling mysteries that has ever come to the notice of the New York police. We are sure that the murdered woman was Mrs. Van Burnam, that this girl was present at her death, and that she availed herself of the opportunity afforded by that death to make the exchange of clothing which has given such a complicated twist to the whole affair. But beyond these facts, we know little more than that it was Franklin Van Burnam who took her to the Gramercy Park house, and Howard who was seen in that same vicinity some two or four hours later. But on which of these two to fix the responsibility of Mrs. Van Burnam's death, is the question."

"She had a hand in it herself," I persisted; "though it may have been without evil intent. No man ever carried that thing through without feminine help. To this opinion I shall stick, much as this girl draws upon my sympathies."

"I shall not try to persuade you to the contrary. But the point is to find out how much help, and to whom it was given."

"And your scheme for doing this?"

"Cannot be carried out till she is on her feet again. So cure her, Miss Butterworth, cure her. When she can go down-stairs, Ebenezer Gryce will be on the scene to test his little scheme."

I promised to do what I could, and when he was gone, I set diligently to work to soothe the child, as he had called her, and get her in trim for the delicate meal which had been sent up. And whether it was owing to a change in my own feelings, or whether the talk with Mr. Gryce had so unnerved her that any womanly ministration was welcome, she responded much more readily to my efforts than ever before, and in a little while lay in so calm and grateful a mood that I was actually sorry to see the nurse when she came. Hoping that something might spring from an interview with Miss Althorpe whereby my departure from the house might be delayed, I descended to the library, and was fortunate enough to find the mistress of the house there. Seh was sorting invitations, and looked anxious and worried.

"You see me in a difficulty, Miss Butterworth. I had relied on Miss Oliver to oversee this work, as well as to assist me in a great many other details, and I don't know of any one whom I can get on short notice to take her place. My own engagements are many and——"

"Let me help you," I put in, with that cheerfulness her presence invariably inspires. "I have nothing pressing calling me home, and for once in my life I should like to take an active part in wedding festivities. It would make me feel quite young again."

"But——" she began.

"Oh," I hastened to say, "you think I would be more of a hindrance to you than a help; that I would do the work, perhaps, but in my own way rather than in yours. Well, that would doubtless have been true of me a month since, but I have learned a great deal in the last few weeks,—you will not ask me how,—and now I stand ready to do your work in your way, and to take a great deal of pleasure in it too."

"Ah, Miss Butterworth," she exclaimed, with a burst of genuine feeling which I would not have lost for the world, "I always knew that you had a kind heart; and I am going to accept your offer in the same spirit in which it is made."

So that was settled, and with it the possibility of my spending another night in this house.

At ten o'clock I stole away from the library and the delightful company of Mr. Stone, who had insisted upon sharing my labours, and went up to Miss Oliver's room. I met the nurse at the door.

"You want to see her," said she. "She's asleep, but does not rest very easily. I don't think I ever saw so pitiful a case. She moans continually, but not with physical pain. Yet she seems to have courage too; for now and then she starts up with a loud cry. Listen."

I did so, and this is what I heard:

"I do not want to live; doctor, I do not want to live; why do you try to make me better?"

"That is what she is saying all the time. Sad, isn't it?"

I acknowledged it to be so, but at the same time wondered if the girl were not right in wishing for death as a relief from her troubles.

Early the next morning I inquired at her door again. Miss Oliver was better. Her fever had left her, and she wore a more natural look than at any time since I had seen her. But it was not an untroubled one, and it was with difficulty I met her eyes when she asked if they were coming for her that day, and if she could see Miss Althorpe before she left. As she was not yet able to leave her bed I could easily answer her first question, but I knew too little of Mr. Gryce's intentions to be able to reply to the second. But I was easy with this suffering woman, very easy, more easy than I ever supposed I could be with any one so intimately associated with crime.

She seemed to accept my explanations as readily as she already had my presence, and I was struck again with surprise as I considered that my name had never aroused in her the least emotion.

"Miss Althorpe has been so good to me I should like to thank her; from my despairing heart, I should like to thank her," she said to me as I stood by her side before leaving. "Do you know"—she went on, catching me by the dress as I was turning away — "what kind of a man she is going to marry? She has such a loving heart, and marriage is such a fearful risk."

"Fearful?" I repeated.

"Is it not fearful? To give one's whole soul to a man and be met by—I must not talk of it; I must not think of it—But is he a good man? Does he love Miss Althorpe? Will she be happy? I have no right to ask, perhaps, but my gratitude towards her is such that I wish her every joy and pleasure."

"Miss Olthorpe has chosen well," I rejoined. "Mr. Stone is a man in ten thousand."

The sigh that answered me went to my heart.

"I will pray for her," she murmured; "that will be something to live for."

I did not know what reply to make to this. Everything which this girl said and did was so unexpected and so convincing in its sincerity, I felt moved by her even against my better judgment. I pitied her and yet I dared not urge her on to speak, lest I should fail in my task of making her well. I therefore confined myself to a few hap-hazard expressions of sympathy and encouragement, and left her in the hands of the nurse.

Next day Mr. Gryce called.

"Your patient is better," said he.

"Much better," was my cheerful reply. "This afternoon she will be able to leave the house."

"Very good; have her down at half-past three and I will be in front with a carriage."

"I dread it," I cried; "but I will have her there."

"You are beginning to like her, Miss Butterworth. Take care! You will lose your head if your sympathies become engaged."

"It sits pretty firmly on my shoulders yet," I retorted; "and as for sympathies, you are full of them yourself. I saw how you looked at her yesterday."

"Bah, my looks!"

"You cannot deceive me, Mr. Gryce; you are as sorry for the girl as you can be; and sa am I too. By the way, I do not think I should speak of her as a girl. From something she said yesterday I am convinced she is a married woman; and that her husband——"

"Well, madam?" [illegible]

"I will not give him a name, at least not before your scheme has been carried out. Are you ready for the undertaking?"

"I will be this afternoon. At half-past three she is to leave the house. Not a minute before and not a minute later. Remember."

XXXV.

A Ruse.

It was a new thing for me to enter into any scheme blindfold. But the past few weeks had taught me many lessons and among them to trust a little in the judgment of others.

Accordingly I was on hand with my patient at the hour designated, and, as I supported her trembling steps down the stairs, I endeavoured not to betray the intense interest agitating me, or to awaken by my curiosity any further dread in her mind than that involved by her departure from this home of bounty and good feeling, and her entrance upon an unknown and possibly much to be apprehended future.

Mr. Gryce was awaiting us in the lower hall, and as he caught sight of her slender figure and anxious face his whole attitude became at once so protecting and so sympathetic, I did not wonder at her failure to associate him with the police.

As she stepped down to his side he gave her a genial nod.

"I am glad to see you so far on the road to recovery," he remarked. "It shows me that my prophecy is correct and that in a few days you will be quite yourself again."

She looked at him wistfully.

"You seem to know so much about me, doctor, perhaps you can tell me where they are going to take me."

He lifted a tassel from a curtain near by, looked at it, shook his head at it, and inquired quite irrelevantly:

"Have you bidden good-bye to Miss Althorpe?"

Her eyes stole towards the parlours and she whispered as if half in awe of the splendor everywhere surrounding her:

"I have not had the opportunity. But I should be sorry to go without a word of thanks for her goodness. Is she at home?"

The tassel slipped from his hand.

"You will find her in a carriage at the door. She has an engagement out this afternoon, but wishes to say good-bye to you before leaving."

"Oh, how kind she is!" burst from the girl's white lips; and with a hurried gesture she was making for the door when Mr. Gryce stepped before her and opened it.

Two carriages were drawn up in front, neither of which seemed to possess the elegance of so rich a woman's equipage. But Mr. Gryce appeared satisfied, and pointing to the nearest one, observed quietly:

"You are expected. If she does not open the carriage door for you, do not hesitate to do it yourself. She has something of importance to say to you."

Miss Oliver looked surprised, but prepared to obey him. Steadying herself by the stone balustrade, she slowly descended the steps and advanced towards the carriage. I watched her from the doorway and Mr. Gryce from the vestibule. It seemed an ordinary situation, but something in the latter's face convinced me that interests of no small moment depended upon the interview about to take place.

But before I could decide upon their nature or satisfy myself as to the full meaning of Mr. Gryce's manner, she had started back from the carriage door and was saying to him in a tone of modest embarrassment:

"There is a gentleman in the carriage; you must have made some mistake."

Cause and Cure of Headache

The cause of headache as you know, is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the soda they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

FOUGHT WITH LORD ROBERTS

Veteran of Crimean War and Indian Mutiny Suffered Horribly With Rheumatism, Until "Fruit-a-tives" Brought Welcome Relief.

GEORGE WALKER, Esq.

Chatham, Ont., April 3rd., 1913

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure, left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I only had one passage a week until I got to using "Fruit-a-tives." They cured me of both the Constipation and Rheumatism. To-day, my bowels move immediately after breakfast, and in my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health. No more Rheumatism or Constipation.

You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter and my photo if it will be advantageous to "Fruit-a-tives."

GEO. WALKER

This letter of Mr. Walker tells how to cure Rheumatism, but does not tell WHY "Fruit-a-tives" cures this trouble. Rheumatism is the result of poisoned blood, due to weakness or faulty action of the bowels, kidneys or skin. In Mr Walker's case, Rheumatism was the result of excessive Constipation. Waste matter remained too long in the system, was absorbed by the blood and inflamed the nerves and membranes in his legs. When he started to take "Fruit-a-tives," these tablets immediately acted on the liver. More bile was given up to move the bowels. As the bowels were cleaned, the poisonous waste matter was removed, the blood became clear and the nerves were no longer irritated. To-day, Mr. Walker is enjoying vigorous health that was his when he fought with Lord Roberts and helped to plant the British Flag firmly in our Over-Seas Possessions. He is as active as a man of forty and cannot praise "Fruit-a-tives" too highly. Try them yourself, 50c. a box. 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c., at all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WOULD COUGH SO HARD

Would Turn Black In The Face.

A cough cold is one of the most dangerous kind. It leaves the throat or lungs, and sometimes both, affected if not taken care of immediately.

Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful soothing action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, containing as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree.

Mrs. C. J. Selig, Dartmouth, N.S., writes:—"My little boy, six years old, had a dreadful, hard cough. At night time he would cough so hard he would turn black in the face, and at times he would cough nearly an hour before he would stop. I tried different cough syrups, but they did him no good. The little fellow was wasting away, as he could not eat or sleep, the cough troubled him so. I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and it did him so much good I got another. Now I am only too glad to be able to write this to tell how thankful I am, and to tell every mother to use nothing else."

Price, 25 and 50 cents.

Be sure you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. See the trade mark; the three pine trees.

A Yuletide Home-Coming

By Charles McCabe

THE club looked just the very thing Gerald Mannersley was craving for—a sense of home.

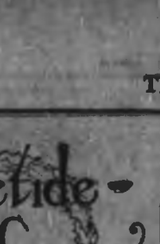
A few lines read accidentally in an out-of-date newspaper had made him restless with longing for the old scenes. And so he had traveled two days and nights in a sleeper, vaguely connecting his journey's end with all the love and friendship his starved nature was demanding.

When he arrived at his old club on a chill, grey Christmas morning, it was only to find that fifteen years' silent absence had been too severe a test for friendship. The place was empty of all but servants, and they wore strange, unwelcoming faces.

He stood at the club window, looking out on the desolate, deserted street which he had always remembered as being thronged, and a great sadness swept over him.

This was not what he wanted. From his pocket he drew out the scrap of paper which had really brought him so many miles, and looked at it bitterly. It was only a death announcement cut from a paper of a year ago, and ran in the usual way—"Michael Townley, at his residence," etc.

In fancy he saw a sweet-faced maiden, who sought her happiness only in the eyes of the youth by her side. There were joybells there, too, as they left the church with the fragrance of mutual love about them.



The bells pealed on outside, and willing fancy led him still further into the realm of "might have been."

In an instant he made up his mind to visit once more the old-fashioned cottage not many miles away, to which he had hoped fifteen years before to take a bride. He would go and see it, even if its neglected condition only added to his loneliness and pain.

Two hours later he was striding through the crisp country air along a winding path which led to a rambling, ivy-covered cottage.

As the last turn brought him in sight of the house he stopped in surprise. He had expected to see dirt, ruin, and decay, but instead he looked upon a trim, well-kept cottage, and a soft, crooning song, in a voice which reawakened the tender memories of long ago, came floating through the unlatched door.

Half believing that it must be fancy leading him still, he entered the house softly, and, following the voice, went into the inner room, and stood in the glow of the warm firelight.

The sweet, tired-faced, middle-aged singer turned as his shadow fell across the light, and then stood white and trembling.

"Gerald!" she whispered. "Gerald! have you come to reproach me? Not today! Not today!"

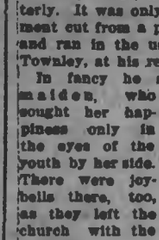
The strong man's voice broke as he held out his arms.

"Nance!" he cried joyfully.

In a moment she was crushed, sobbing, to his breast.

"Oh, Gerald! is it really you? God is very good. I thought you must be dead."

For several moments they stood thus, the strong man's tears falling on her grey-tinged hair. Then he gently put her into a chair.



"You are not alone?" he asked as his eyes caught sight of a little table laid for two, daintily spread with Christmas fare.

"Yes," she answered. "I am quite alone. I have often come down here."

"But you are expecting somebody!" he said, calling attention to the table.

She flushed prettily, looking almost as young as she had in his dreams of the morning, as she replied:

"I was expecting you, Gerald."

He smiled happily at her; then the smile faded, and he sighed as he sank into a chair.

"This is all foolishness, Nance," he said sadly. "You could not live here in the old days, you could no more now, and I could not live here on another man's thousands."

A smile hovered over the woman's face as she flitted here and there, busily preparing things for a meal. Then she slipped behind a chair, and leaning over whispered with burning cheeks:

"Perhaps you do not know, Gerald, that—that Mr. Townley's money goes back to his family if—if I marry again."

The man sprang to his feet and took her into his strong arms again.

"It is not too late," he cried. "We are still young. Will you let me try to make you happy?"

Her answer was drowned in the burst of Christmas bells that pealed from the village church close by. But he did not need her words; he could see her eyes.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat also take glass of Salts Before eating breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to moral activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

ANGRY WATERS STILLED.

When They Reach the Wonderful "Oil Spot" Off Sabine Pass.

A freak of nature never fully described is the wonderful "oil spot," situated about ten miles south of Sabine pass, into which flows the Sabine river to the gulf of Mexico. The river forms the boundary between the states of Louisiana and Texas. The "oil spot" extends two miles along shore and seaward about three-quarters of a mile. A storm from the northeast, by way of east to southeast, has a rate of from 300 to 700 miles across the gulf of Mexico into this mystic haven.

During a gale this spot is wonderfully defined. Looking seaward the scene is grand. An acre of towering foam marks the abrupt dissolution of the lashing seas as they thunder toward the shore. This occurs in about three fathoms, or eighteen feet of water, from which the storm driven craft, creaking and straining in every timber, emerges and suddenly finds herself reposing like a child rocked in its mother's arms, hemmed in by a wall of wrath, where the weary mariner can be lulled to rest by the roar of the winds. The place is termed the "oil spot" not from any known analysis of its nature, but simply from its conditions—it has no troubled water.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

MEND YOUR BROKEN CHINA.

Use a Cement Made With Plaster of Paris and Gum Arabic.

I had such a pretty Dresden china comb and brush tray for my dressing table which was broken into three pieces just the other day by some one dropping a heavy pair of curling irons on it. I was almost heart broken because it was part of a set, and I was afraid I could not replace it, and even if I could I did not feel that I could afford to do so.

One of my friends told me she had been successful in mending several pieces of old china which were treasured heirlooms with plaster of paris and gum arabic. Make a thick solution of gum arabic and water and into it put the plaster until the mixture becomes a paste. This is applied to the edges of the china, which are pressed firmly together.

I tried it on my tray, and it worked like magic. The solution is white, so that it does not show like glue, and, best of all, it makes such a strong joint that they tell me that the article never breaks again the same place.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Consistent Career.

"Times are not as they used to be"—
We hear the old refrain.
There is but little hope to see
The classic days again
When heroes advanced with splendid grace
And dazzled all the throng,
A leader of the human race,
Of mind and body strong.

To arts of war they still return
While seeking to advance
Our opportunities to learn
Of polished elegance.
And as we view their modern works
We blindly enthuse.
Abroad the Greeks are fighting Turks
And here they're shining shoes.

WHEN THE EARTH QUAKES.

Stresses and Strains to Which Our Globe Is Subjected.

When the stairs creak and the furniture gives out mysterious crackling sounds at night we sometimes sit up in bed and wonder if there is a burglar about, but it doesn't occur to us that what we hear is really an earthquake on a small scale. The night air has caused the wood to contract with a snap, thus accounting for the alarming sounds. This is just exactly what the earth is doing periodically. To a microbe, reposing on the polished surface of the table, this disturbance is probably as violent as an earthquake is to a human being.

An earthquake is a terrible thing. It comes without warning. It is over before one knows which way to fly, and its fury can be abated by no man.

Yet to the geologist earthquakes are only symptoms. They are not causes so much as results—results of great stresses and strains within the earth that cause slippings and slidings from time to time. If the rocks on the shell of the earth slip and grate against each other so much as an inch along a fissure ten miles in length a shiver is felt. A slip of fifteen feet along a course of 200 miles suffices to bring about the terrible San Francisco earthquake and fire.

These strains and stresses accumulate steadily within the earth. The point at which they have once found relief is weaker to resist the next strain. It slips again presently. By successive movements its sides become more and more displaced. Rock layers, mineral veins, coal seams that cross the line of displacement, are jogged out of their course. So are roads, fence lines and brooks that run across it on the surface. In the San Francisco quake one man's front yard was moved twenty feet to one side of his house, and in another place the slip line came so close to a man's barn that some piles of straw, thrown out from the windows, were carried away. In Japan a cliff twelve feet high interrupted a roadway, and thousands of similar cases might be cited. These were primary movements along the line of the disturbance that caused the earthquakes.—Brooklyn Eagle.

BRITISH GROUSE HUNTERS.

No Business Is Allowed to Interfere With Their Sport.

The grouse hunting season in Britain opens on Aug. 12. On that day every Englishman and every Scot who makes any pretension to a standing in society goes gunning for two weeks at least. Nothing is allowed to stand in the way of this annual diversion. For a week or two preceding this outing business is of little consequence. Everything to receive any attention at all must relate in some way to guns and dogs. A year or so ago a New York man had occasion to go to London to meet a British financier to put the finishing touches to a matured business proposition. He arrived a couple of days before the 12th of August. The financier was not in his place of business. "No," said his chief clerk; "he has gone for the grouse shoot. He will not talk business with any one. I do not think he will see you at all, sir."

"But," said the New Yorker, "I have crossed the Atlantic for no other purpose than to see him. This business will not take more than half an hour of his time, and then I'm off for home again."

"I should advise against your going to his home, sir. He would not receive anybody at this time. He will attend to no business."

But the New Yorker thought differently. He went to the country home of the financier. A burly butler met him at the door. To him the New Yorker gave his card. It was promptly returned to him.

"The master," said the butler, "will see no one. He sets out for the grouse shooting tomorrow. He says to call, please, in a fortnight."

And the New Yorker was compelled to remain two weeks longer until the Englishman returned from his hunt, when the business was finished in twenty minutes.—Indianapolis News.

"Old Nick."

Nickels and "Old Nick" are derived from the name of a Scandinavian demon. Nikr, who, according to an old legend, is supposed to haunt the mines in which the metal nickel is found and it was long believed that he gave the hardness to the metal.

HER SHORTCOMINGS.

She plays a splendid game of bridge
And she's a fine debater;
She always uses French when she is speaking to a waiter;
Political affairs she knows almost from
A to izzard,
But she has never found out how to dress a turkey's gizzard.

She's in a drama league, and she has studied sex hygiene;
With skill she operates her own six-
cylinder machine;
A dozen clubs have praised her for the papers she has read,
But she never could broil a steak or toast a piece of bread.

She works in settlements and strives to help to save the drama;
The name of her sorority is Beta Something Gamma;
She helps to make all women as exalted as they can be,
But she would throw a fit if she were asked to bathe a baby.

She's deeply interested in political affairs;
She wins much admiration for the tasteful clothes she wears;
'Tis most delightful to sit near and overhear her chat,
But she would be in trouble if she had to trim a hat.

Primitive Fishhooks.

What sort of hooks did our ancestors, our really remote ancestors, use "when wild in wood the noble savage ran?" I am inclined to agree with the American view that the earliest type of hook, if hook it can be called, was a straight bit of flint buried in the bait. When the fish had swallowed the bit of meat, or whatever the bait was, the tightening of the line pulled the flint across its throat, and, as it stuck there, the fish could be hauled ashore without more ado. Perhaps some bright innovator of that misty past one day tried a bit of flint which had a double curve like a pair of buffalo horns and found it effective, and perhaps out of that developed the genuine double hook, which seems to have been a very early form. And perhaps the single hook came into being because it was realised that one bend was as efficient as two for most purposes.—London Telegraph.

No Escape.

Crawford—If your friends poked fun at you for having the artistic temperament, you must have the laugh on them now that you are so successful. Penfield—Not at all. They sneer at me now for being commercialized.—New York Times.

If thou art a man, admire those who attempt great enterprises, even though they fail.—Seneca.

SOME EXPECT TOO MUCH.

Britons Mustn't Look For 100 Per Cent. on Investments.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Deputy Minister Scott, of British Columbia, offered some very frank advice to the intending investor or immigrant at the Royal Colonial Institute luncheon yesterday. "Do not expect one hundred per cent. profit without risks," he said.

"Many Englishmen have bought land without the slightest idea of land values." He had heard people declare that any fool could farm. He said there was not the slightest doubt that Vancouver would eventually rival San Francisco, although things were rather slow just now. It was, however, absolutely necessary to get money for legitimate improvement.

Cat Got Ashore.

KINGSTON, Dec. 20. — "And the cat came back." This old saying applies to the case of a pet cat on the barge Parsons. Three weeks ago the barge foundered in the lake, two miles from shore, the crew being rescued after tremendous exertions. The barge went to pieces inside of three days. On the afternoon of the wreck men on duty at the lake water pumping station heard scratching and meowing at the door of the lake side and open it. A small black and white kitten, wet, miserable and bedraggled entered, and with apparent familiarity jumped to the top of the asbestos-covered boilers and went to sleep. It has just been identified as the pet of the crew of the Parsons.

Death of Loyal Wife.

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 20.—Mrs. Albert T. Patrick, whose husband served 12 years in Sing Sing Prison as the alleged murderer of Wm. Marsh Rice, died here yesterday. Patrick and their children were at the bedside. Mrs. Patrick, as Mrs. Addie M. Francis, was married to Patrick soon after his conviction for the murder of Rice. For the ensuing twelve years she devoted her entire time and expended $50,000 in efforts to prove Patrick's innocence and gain a pardon for him.

Puss and the Owl.

Owls make very amusing pets, but lose the "happy family" knack as they grow older. A friend of mine had one that he wrongly kept tied to a stake by a cord. It was of that "tiger of the north woods" species, the great horned owl, and, while apparently quiet, not to say sleepy, in the daytime, blinking with those great yellow eyes in the manner that has made the country people believe they are sightless in bright light, he had a surprising way of "coming to life" whenever there was any particular reason for doing so. My friend had a favorite kitten that usually gave the owl a wide berth, but one day it strayed within the danger zone. The result was that the apparently somnolent mass of brown feathers suddenly galvanized itself, a powerful claw shot out, a piteous mew was heard and then—finis Felis domestica!—Outing.

ARTISTIC CURTAINS.

How to Circumvent Fate With a Good Torchon Lace Pattern.

Haven't you oftimes wistfully admired the short scrim curtains ornamented with crocheted lace points and hung by the same on little brass rods? Perhaps you've been taking a walk along a particularly well curtained row of homes just to see what kind of curtains it would be best for you to get this season—the old ones are such a sight! And somehow—call it the irony of fate—there wasn't a pair of curtains in that row that appealed to your artistic heart but the little scrim ones with crocheted points. The tragedy of it, for you couldn't crochet!

But there's a way to outwit old Lady Fate yet. Torchon lace is every bit as effective for the purpose. Get it rather heavy, and it must have points. A torchon as near a cluny pattern as you can get is best. The little curtain should be hemstitched at both top and bottom. The wide, pointed lace is whipped along the edge of the top hem, and the bottom of the curtain may be left plain or a small picot edge whipped to it. A broad band of torchon insertion is placed about an inch above the lower hem.

Cluny, of course, makes even handsomer curtains, and by watching the lace sales one can oftimes get a cluny or torchon lace for a mere song.

And now no longer need we gaze wistfully at the curtains of the lady who crochets. In fact, we've a faint suspicion that we've "gone her one better."

To Purify a Room.

It sometimes happens, even in the best managed house, that the scent of cooking or some unpleasant odor may remain in the living room. To get rid of this, if the open window is not all that is wanted, lay a piece of paper on the coal shovel and sprinkle some lavender flowers on it. Set light to the paper and allow the lavender to smolder, and it will leave a very sweet scent in the room.

Two Relatives Are Insane.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Heinrich Schmidt, father of Hans Schmidt, on trial for murder, was recalled to the stand by the defence. He told of a nephew of his, and of a cousin of the defendant, whom he described as still alive and totally mad.

The Rev. Father John S. Braun, pastor of St. Boniface Church, of this city, testified as to marked peculiarities of the prisoner while attached to the church.

Export Tax on Foxes.

REGINA, Dec. 19.—To discourage exportation from Saskatchewan of foxes, provision is made in a bill, introduced in the Legislature by Hon. W. R. Motherwell, for the imposition of a tax of $100 for every animal that is shipped from the province.

During the past few years many thousands of dollars' worth of black foxes and the rare silver foxes have been sent out of Saskatchewan to breeding farms in the east.

Low Spirits From Weak Nerves

Low spirits, depression, discouragement are a form of nervous disease. You worry over little things, and at the slightest ailment apprehend the gravest dangers and diseases. You form the habit of looking at the dark side of things.

Indigestion is a frequent accompaniment, and you probably do not sleep or rest well. The cause of the trouble is to be found in the exhausted condition of the nerves. To get well you must build up the feeble, wasted nerve cells by use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure forms new rich blood, and thereby nourishes the nervous system back to health and vigor. There is nothing like new nerve force to bring back hope and confidence to the weak and discouraged. This treatment works in natural ways to restore health, and, therefore, cannot fail to prove of benefit to you. Put it to the test and you will be surprised with the building-up influence that will result.

The DEALER who sells RONUK Floor Polish is your FRIEND

Your Ronuk-treated floors will add so much to the beauty, comfort and cleanliness of your home that you will always feel grateful to the dealer who first told you about it.

Ronuk is a floor finish quite different from waxes and varnishes. It fills the very pores of the wood. It cleans and preserves linoleum. So it forms a beautiful sanitary surface that cannot absorb dust or dirt. You never scrub it. Simply wipe or sweep off the light dust. Once every month or six weeks a very light application of Ronuk renews the original high finish.

If your dealer cannot supply you we will be glad to send you full information on Floor Polishing, and sample package of Ronuk. Ronuk comes in 10c., 20c., 35c. and $1.00 tins.

Historic Hyde Park.

Hyde park has seen not only magnificent reviews, from Stuart times onward, but has witnessed also military musters with a more warlike intent. Here during the commonwealth were encamped the Roundhead armies of Essex and Lambert, and here Cromwell reviewed his Ironsides. The defenses which were at that time raised in the park have left their mark on Mayfair's street nomenclature, for Mount street, Grosvenor square, commemorates Oliver's mount, as it was called, part of the line of fortifications drawn around London by order of the parliament in 1643. Even the women, Butler tells us in "Hudibras," helped in the defensive work, and—

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

After thoroughly washing white lace curtains, put them in a solution of one teaspoonful of chloride of lime to three quarts of warm water. Let the curtains stand in the solution for about an hour.

When cooking an old-fashioned boiled dinner, place the spinach in a cheesecloth bag, then when the dinner is done it can be easily taken out and the other vegetables will not be covered with bits of green.

If for any reason the red bricks in your fireplace become discoloured or have white spots on them, rub them full of linseed oil, giving them all they will absorb, and after a few applications the spots will disappear.

Before using new tins fill them with cold water, adding a handful of salt. Allow them to stand several hours, then rinse well in clear, cold water. After this method has been followed, nothing sticks to them.

To prevent dresses and other articles from becoming yellow with age, take a good-sized pillow case and blue it thoroughly, and place the dress in it. When you open the blue bag your dress will be as white as when you placed it in.

To stiffen hair brushes, wash the brush well in a quart of hot water, to which a dessertspoonful of ammonia has been added, then dissolve a large lump of salt in cold water; dip the brush in several times and leave to dry in the open air.

To clean a net waist, put it into a two-quart fruit jar filled with gasoline. Be sure that it is well screwed on. Let it stand overnight. In the morning, shake the can back and forth. The motion will clean the dirt out of the waist.

If apples to be used for salad have little flavour, sprinkle them after they are cut up with a goodly amount of lemon juice, to which a few cloves have been added. At the end of half an hour add the mayonnaise. It will be a decided improvement.

To remove grease spots from wall-paper, take a piece of blotting paper and place it over the spots. Take a hot smoothing iron and place it on the blotting paper, when the heat of the iron will melt the grease and the blotting paper absorb the grease.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone rheumatic pains, and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys, and bowels will clear away the pains and aches and make you well again.

NOTES OF THE FASHIONS

In the Ritz restaurant, at one o'clock, the astute observer can get a bird's-eye view of what the fashionable world is wearing. It is the place, the hour, and the city where the best clothes congregate.

What women wear there, they will be wearing in other representative American cities and in Paris, in Rome, and in Canada. It is the same in Quebec and Montreal as in Florence and Pau. Women have an amazing way of dressing alike all the world over, where they represent the same point of view toward life.

Therefore, it was interesting to count six coat suits in the same shade of red coming into the Ritz with their owners for luncheon. One was not aware until this moment how fashionable was this tone called dregs of wine. Added to the coat there were blouses which so clearly combined with the skirt that they presented a one-piece frock when the coat was removed.

Some of the suits were trimmed with fur, in fact, most of them were, and others were topped off by velvet collars and cuffs. None of the hats were red; they were black. Here and there one saw a dark blue velvet hat or a striking one of sealskin, on one of velour in tete de negre.

Skunk fur was the favourite peltry added to these suits, but here and there one saw mouffion, which is the under part of the sable; and again that queer new Russian fur which is pale yellow with irregular flickers of brown. Both Poiret and Callot use it on the suits of dark red, and it is only natural that it should be extensively copied over here.

There is no doubt that these red suits are expensive, for that particular shade of red is not to be found in any of the cheaper fabrics. Duvetyn and velvet show it up very well, and it may be interesting to add that all of the six suits worn at the Ritz were of duvetyn, which is that new fabric invented by Rodier in Paris to take the place of velours de laine.

Duvetyn, as you know, is not to be had for the asking, and when one possesses a suit of it in the colour known as dregs of wine, and trimmed with that new yellow Russian fur, then the costume represents money.

And it should represent more than mere wealth—or extravagance—(for you do not know which is which in the costumes of many of the women of to-day); it should mean that a woman has several other suits, of at least another one, to change into, when she or her public gets tired of the red one.

Red is a Difficult Tone.

There is very little doubt that the women who wore these six red suits at the Ritz restaurant had plenty of money and that their closets were filled with other suits in other colours, and if so, their choice of red was to be commended. But it is not the one to be chosen by a woman who has few clothes, and this verdict applies to evening gowns as well as street suits, to hats as well as slippers.

The only garment in red which a limited income allows is an evening wrap in velvet. One does not tire of this gorgeous colouring in a mantle for it only serves as a background for the gown and does not easily place itself in the minds of the observer.

A red suit is quite a different matter, and it should be avoided by the woman who must wear it day in and day out without the hope of a new one until the last of March. If one admires the colour, then admire it on some one else, and don't let others get tired of it on you.

As for a red hat, it is impossible, except as a caprice. If one wants such a head covering for an occasional hour, all very well, but the price paid for it should be in proportion to the small amount of service it is intended to give.

A red evening gown is a brilliant possession in these days of splendid colouring and gorgeous fabrics which make any foregathering of women colourful and enchanting to the eye; but the same rule should apply to the evening as to the street. Even if you have few opportunities for social gaiety after candle light it is better to avoid red.

Dark Blue for the Street.

Although one was in doubt in the early autumn about the popularity of blue for street wear, the way the fashionable women have adopted it is surprising. It, with a deep and smoky velvet, are the two tones that fashionable women adopt. But such a blue as it is! They may call it marine, or night, or raven's wing, blue, but none of these names really express its depths. In some lights it is black.

It is an admirable choice for the street. No one gets tired of it; neither you or your neighbor, and that is as high a recommendation of a gown as for the decoration of a room.

BEAUTIFUL COLLARS.

Oriental Designs Reign in the Realm of Neckwear.

There are some really beautiful new collars on sale in the shops that look as if they had come straight from the east. To be exact, they have come from Paris, but they are none the less fascinating. If we did not know this we should be prone to believe that the wardrobe of some oriental prince or princess had been sacked for rich embroideries and gorgeous fabrics. More to the point, these collars give just the right touch to the costume of silk or cotton, wool or linen.

They are made in odd, queer shapes and are made of a sort of gauze, like mummy cloth, only thinner. Some of them are made of chiffon. They are all heavily embroidered, with metallic threads and silk and wool, in rich shades of color.

The clever needlewoman could copy these collars and so get one at much less expense than the price asked for them ready made. They cost from $2 to $7.

She should get heavy cotton cloth, stretch it in embroidery frames and mark the shape of the collar and the design to be embroidered. The edge should be buttonholed in heavy thread in a straight outline. Here is one collar that might be copied: It is of deep mauve cotton cloth, edged with buttonholing in a lighter shade of silk. It is decorated with a design of conventionalized daisies worked in old blue and old yellow silk and silver metal thread. This would look well on a blue gown.

Sometimes cuffs are made to match the collars. The cuffs in many cases are no more than little points that are fastened to the sleeve of the frock at the elbow or the wrist, but that do not go all the way around the arm or hand. One attractive set of this sort, with small cuffs that would just give a dashing touch of color to the sleeves of the dark dress with which they were worn, is of Egyptian cloth, embroidered heavily in brilliant green and a burnt shade of red. For wear with morning frocks nothing will be found neater and prettier than the jabot pictured.

Dotted white piquet is the material, and the shape, as you see, is of hammer outline.

Edging the jabot is a narrow hand-made tatting, and the arrangement of the velvet bow is simple and effective.

Clothesline That Winds Up.

It is often convenient to quickly hang up a few pieces when it is not necessary to use the large line in the yard or back inclosure. A little novelty of this kind is just out, which consists of a covered hood reel for the line, which has a hook at one end which can fasten up wherever needed. The line has a little lever which will cause it to wind itself up when not in use. Each line is about twenty-five feet. It is particularly adaptable to use on the porch, where a few stockings, baby shirts, etc., can be hung up in the morning, without stepping off the porch, and the line quickly put away when not in use.

PARISIAN SAGE

The Scalp Cleanser Sold in Canada on Money-Back Plan.

Tried them all and failed, thousands of people will say.

Try the real Parisian Sage and succeed as thousands have done.

In Paris Dr. Sangerbond discovered the dandruff microbe and the way to kill it.

In Paris women have most abundant, beautiful, lustrous and fascinating hair.

They know about hair and its diseases in Paris, far more than we do. They have institutions where the study of the hair is made a specialty.

Parisian Sage is the only certain destroyer of the dandruff microbe, which is the cause of 97 p.c. of hair [illegible].

Parisian Sage is such an extraordinary and quick acting rejuvenator that the Warne Drug Co., who are the agents in Peterborough, guarantee it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back. It makes women's hair lustrous and luxuriant and drives away foul odours in summer.

You can obtain a large 50-cent bottle of aParisian Sage at the Warne Drug Co. and at leading druggists all over Canada. "The Girl with the Auburn Hair" is on every package.

"ASH BARREL GIFTS"

By RUTH CAMERON

"Ash barrel gifts" is the phrase which a friend of mine uses to describe a certain class of Christmas gifts.

By this graphic phrase she means the kind of Christmas presents which are doomed by their lack of distinctive beauty or usefulness to bring up sooner or later in the ash barrel.

Who has not received legions of such presents?

Who has not written a gracious thank note for some useless bit of truck which she knew did not represent any real thought on the donor's part, or any attempt to fill a need?

Who has not sighed as she dusted the 'freckleless' bits of bric-a-brac; who has not fumed as she put in order the unpractical bits of feminine finery with which past Christmases have filled her bureau drawer?

And who has not felt guilty, as, after dutifully keeping the unused, unenjoyed article about her for a conventional period, she finally carried it up the stairs and left it to gather dust in the attic until another cleaning day should see it carried down into its ignominous grave, the ash barrel?

Two hatpin holders made out of test-tubes and much ribbon, (I can use one, although like everyone else whom I have consulted on the subject, I prefer a pin cushion, but I have had five given me during the last few years, a skirt hanger so befussed with blue forget-me-nots that it was distinctly unpractical, and a silver roller blotter on which the blotting paper was so bad that I had to recopy any letter on which I thoughtlessly used it, went up into the garret on my last housecleaning. There were two or three other articles which I started to take but renigged on because they were recent gifts that I could not quite bear to throw them away.

Now, nobody needs to give ash barrel gifts.

It isn't a matter of expense at all. It's just a question of thought and intelligence. A quarter will buy a nice handkerchief or one of those inexpensive but artistic little frames,—both, things of which one seldom has too many. And if you have but a few cents to spend isn't it better to content yourself with a pretty card than to concoct or purchase some useless and inartistic trifle which will embarass the recipient by its utter futility.

"What's that thing you're making to be used for?" a man once asked his wife.

"Oh, that's not to use," she answered, "that's a Christmas present."

One can easily guess the final destination of that present.

NEW HIP DRAPERY.

Modish Possibilities of the Practical Little One Piece Frock.

This is a season when the woman with a limited income can dress effectively for a very small outlay. The alliance of two or more materials and the unprecedented vogue of the tunic offer a wide scope for the successful use of remnants.

To most women the word remnant holds a wealth of possibilities, for it can be purchased at a much reduced price, thereby permitting the use of handsome materials which would otherwise be far beyond the reach of the average pocketbook. Simplicity and style are the leading features of this little one piece frock. The latest drapery on skirts has been lifted from knee to hip, and this little dress shows a graceful yet unostentatious hip drapery. The material used is the old standby, blue serge, and a becoming touch is found in the plaited white net collar and sleeve frills.

A Hot Dish for a Cold Day

During the chilly Autumn weather it is best to start the day with a warm meal that not only gives stomach comfort, but supplies the greatest amount of body-building material with the least tax upon the digestion. Keep the body warm and strong by eating the food that fortifies you against sudden changes of temperature and which contains more real body-building nutriment than meat or eggs and costs much less. After you have tried all the others you will come back to Shredded Wheat—always the same price—always clean—always pure—always the same.

Always heat the Biscuit in oven to restore crispness. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with hot milk or cream will supply all the energy needed for a half day's work. Try Toasted TRISCUIT, the Shredded Wheat wafer, for luncheon, with butter, cheese or marmalade.

NO MORE ANTS.

Here's a Sure Cure For Bothersome Household Pests.

Have you been bothered with antsmensly little red ones that get into your cupboard, icebox and various places where you simply cannot have them?

Try this. It is one of a dozen "sure cures" which came to me well recommended and absolutely the only one which had the necessary effect, says Table Talk.

Get 5 cents' worth of tartar emetic from your druggist. Mix a little of this with about one-fourth as much sugar and add a few drops of water. Stir this with a match or toothpick until well mixed. Be careful not to use too much water. A very thick paste is best. Put drops of this where the ants are; also make "runs" where they will find them.

A good plan is to find where they enter the house. A little watching will show this. You will find that they come and go in a general direction, and it is an easy matter to trace their entrance to a porch post, porch steps, a defective window or perhaps a cold air register. Put your paste at their entrance way, and you will find your ant problem solved.

Quick Pace.

"I suppose that your son is developing apace."

"Yes, and a pace that is much too fast for one of his years."—Buffalo Express.

It seems that just as soon as some men succeed in gaining a residence on Easy Street, some other fellow comes along and attempts to shove him in the gutter. Such is life.

Child Almost Strangled

You never know what minute a child will develop a bad cold or be seized by croup. For this reason it takes a great burden off every mother's mind to have at hand Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Mrs. E. W. Silver, South Milford, Annapolis County, N.S., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for my little boy with most satisfactory results. His throat would fill up with phlegm so bad that he could scarcely make a sound, and I thought he would surely strangle. He grew worse, and had frequent bad attacks, so I began using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Scarcely half a bottle was used when the strangling ceased. This medicine had a wonderfully soothing effect, and when he had taken two bottles I could not tell that he had any throat trouble. We have also used Dr. Chase's Ointment with equally good results. It is a grand medicine for salt rheum."

There are imitations, but the genuine Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

PICKING A PRESENT FOR PLATT

By Douglas Malloch

WHEN Harry Platt said that girl friend of the Greens (I forget her name) were married, it was one of those my-goodness-gracious-just-think-of-that affairs, with no one in on the secret except the suburban minister who tied the knot, the cabman who drive them out there and the girl from the minister's kitchen, who was a witness, and left a thumb-print of grease on the certificate (she was frying doughnuts at the time) and the minister's wife (at least the name was the same). Let's see, where was I? Oh, yes, when the Platts were married, it being that kind of a wedding, there was no chance to send them a wedding gift as I would have liked to do, or to have done, (whichever is proper, or grammatical, though I'm sure I can never tell which). But Mr. Platt is one of the nicest men in the office, that is, he was before this happened. So I felt we ought to do something for him, just to show our good will—and, anyhow, we've lug down for others we thought much less of, so why shouldn't we for him? But the wedding was over, without invitations, or even a reception, and they were housekeeping before we knew it. So what could we do?

Well, just then Christmas came along not just then but two months after the wedding. They were married October 29, so it wasn't quite two months, but that's close enough. When Christmas came along, that is, just before it came along, I suggested that we make up a purse and give them a sort of delayed wedding present, just to show our good will. Everybody thought it was a splendid idea, that is, of course, except Mr. Platt, whom, of course, I didn't consult. So I got up a subscription paper and went to everybody in the office (except Mr. Platt, of course). I got $27.50, including ten cents from the janitor, who wasn't expected to give anything but wanted to give something, which shows just how popular Mr. Platt was with everyone in the building, when a janitor even would chip in.

Christmas shopping is hard enough, goodness knows, when you do it for yourself; but when you do it for a stock company capitalized at $26.50, with 28 stockholders, with 28 different kinds of ideas and tastes, then Christmas shopping rises above a mere annoyance to the dignity of a real trouble. And that's what I was up against. I thought it would be nice to get an expression of opinion. So I went around one morning and asked for ideas. But I couldn't get a word. Nobody could think of anything. I couldn't myself. At noon I went out and looked. I walked miles. I priced. then I went back to the office. You should have seen my desk. Honest, you would have thought some one had turned in a general alarm. They couldn't wait for me to get back. There they were—28 of them, (that is, 27, or 28 with me). They all had suggestions, and they were all different.

The head bookkeeper thought an arm chair would be nice. (He stands up all day). The collector thought a raincoat would be best, while Miss Jones suggested a dress pattern. They all said, of course, that they left it entirely to me; and then each went away sadly, as much as to say that he hoped I wouldn't be so foolish as to buy any of those other things that the others had proposed.

The next day I looked again. But either a thing was too expensive or I would have money left. It is remarkable how few things there are in the world you can buy for $26.50, no more, no less.

And then I saw it. It was in a department store, and marked down from $60 to $26.00! There it was, to a cent! A great, big, glittering, magnificent Punch Bowl! Nobody had thought of that!

But, to make sure, I sent the sales ticket with it and told the Platts they could exchange the punch bowl, if they wished, for something they liked better.

And what do you suppose those [illegible] did?

In January they traded in that magnificent punch bowl for three tons of coal!

ONE WAY TO VISIT

The Tarahumare of Mexico Has a Style All His Own.

NEVER STARTLES HIS HOST.

He Is Too Politely Deliberate For That and the Compliment Is Faithfully Returned—Ceremonies In the House Have a Rather Abrupt Ending.

For a barbarian the Tarahumare is a very polite personage. In his language he even has a word "reke," which is the equivalent of the English "please" and which he uses constantly. When speaking to a stranger or leaving a person, he draws attention to his action by saying, "I am going." As he grows civilized, however, he loses his good manners.

In spite of this he is not hospitable: the guest gets food, but there is no room for him in the house of a Tarahumare. A visitor never thinks of entering a house without first giving the family ample time to get ready to receive him. When he approaches a friend's home good manners require him to stop sometimes as far as twenty or thirty yards off. If he is on more intimate terms with the family, he may come nearer, and make his presence known by coughing; then he sits down, selecting some little knoll from which he can be readily seen.

In order not to embarrass his friends he does not even look at the house, but remains sitting there gazing into vacancy, his back or side turned toward the homestead. Should the host be absent the visitor may thus sit for a couple of hours; then he will rise and go slowly away again. But under no circumstances will he enter the home, unless formally invited. "because," he says, "only the dogs enter houses uninvited."

Never will the woman of the house commit such a gross breach of etiquette as to go out and inform him of her husband's absence, to save the caller the trouble of waiting, nor will she, if alone at home, make any statements as to his whereabouts.

The Tarahumare never does anything without due deliberation: therefore he may for a quarter of an hour discuss with his wife the possible purport of the visit before he goes out to see the man. They peep through the cracks in the wall at him, and if they happen to be eating or doing anything they may keep the visitor waiting for half an hour.

Finally the host shakes out the blanket on which he has been sitting, throws it around himself, and, casting a rapid glance to the right and left as he goes through the door, goes to take a seat a few yards distant from the caller. After some meditation on either side the conversation, as in more civilized society, opens with remarks about the weather and the prospects for rain.

When this subject is exhausted and the host's curiosity as to where the man came from, what he is doing and where he is going is satisfied, the former may go back to the house and fetch some meat and pinole for the traveler. The object of the visit not infrequently is an invitation to take part in some game or foot race, and as the men are sure to remain undisturbed they generally reach some understanding.

A friend of the family is, of course, finally invited to enter the house, and the customary salutation is "Assagi" ("Sit down.") In this connection it may be noted that the Tarahumares in conversation look sidewise, or even turn their backs toward the person they speak to.

After having eaten, the guest will carefully return every vessel in which the food was given to him, and when he rises he hands back the skin on which he was seated. Should occasion require the host will say: "It is getting late and you cannot return to your home tonight. Where are you going to sleep? There is a good cave over yonder."

With this he may indicate where the visitor may remain overnight. He will also tell him where he may find wood for the fire, and he will bring him food, but not unless the weather is very tempestuous will he invite an outsider to sleep in the house.—From Carl Lumholtz's "Unknown Mexico."

"My father"—the English girl's eyes flashed proudly—"led the Six Hundred at Balaklava."

The American girl smiled superciliously. "My mother"—she paused to add impressiveness to her words—"leads the Four Hundred in New York."—Puck.

CHARLIE BRICKLEY'S MOTHER

"Charley is a wonderful boy," sums up the estimation that Mrs. William J. Brickley has of her second eldest son, the wonderful "sure foot" Brickley, of Harvard football fame. And no one knows the Crimson's peerless drop-kicker better than the kindly mother who goes through a season of anxiety every fall for fear that her favourite son will come upon some untimely accident on the football gridiron.

Mrs. Brickley has never seen her son on the football field. She fears the dangers of the game and believes if the slightest accident should befall the youth that she would disregard the conventions entirely, rush from her seat and onto the field.

"I do not approve of football," said Mrs. Brickley, "and I do not want my younger boys to take it up."

That prayer probably plays a great part in the Brickley football triumphs was evidenced when it was learned that this youthful Harvard hero always visits the church on the day of the contest. An admirer came upon him Saturday in St. Paul's Catholic Church while his celebrating comrades were within hearing distance doing their fantastic dances and shouting their cheers.

During the year just ended 6,380,000,000 nickels were spent in this country at the moving picture shows, or $315,000,000. This vast sum would have purchased 300,000 homes for people in ordinary circumstances, or nearly 80,000 good-sized farms.

PROUD OF HIM.

Sandy McPherson started to build a small outhouse of Bricks. After the usual fashion of bricklayers, he worked from the inside, and having the material close behind him, the walls were rising fast when dinner time arrived, and with it his son, Jock, who brought his father's dinner.

With [illegible] pride in [illegible]

looked at Jock over the wall on which he was engaged and asked:

"Hoo d'ye think I'm gettin' on, Jock, man?"

"Famous feythur; but hoo dae ye get oot? You've forgot the door!"

One glance around him showed Sandy that his son was right; but, looking kindly at him, he said:

"Man, Jock, you've got a gran' heid on ye! Ye'll be an architect yet, as shure's yer faither's a builder."

A Guest for Dinner.

"I'm bringing Mr. Wilson up for dinner."

When there's a telephone in the home, the thoughtful husband calls up his wife and tells her of the unexpected guest he is bringing home with him for dinner. Thus the housewife is not taken at unawares, but has time to prepare.

This is only one of the thousands of ways in which a telephone in the home is a boon, saving time, effort, worry, and often life itself.

With a telephone in the home, the housewife is prepared for any emergency, and her social and household burdens are immensely lightened.

Your Directors regret to have to record the retirement of Mr. David Maclaren from the Presidency, on account of ill health. They are glad to be able to report, however, that the Bank will still have the benefit of his counsel and advice as a Director. The Honorable George Bryson was elected to succeed him as President, and Mr. J. B. Fraser was elected to succeed Mr. Bryson as Vice-President.

Since the last Annual Meeting, branches of the Bank have been opened at Estevan, Sask., Fort George, B. C., on the corner of Ashdale and Gerrard Streets, Toronto, and at Dalkeith, Ont. a sub-office has been opened three times a week under the supervision of the Vankleek Hill Manager. The Branches at Englehart, Ont., South Porcupine, Ont., and Birch Hills, Sask., have been closed.

From the accompanying statement it will be seen that the Balance of the Five Thousand Shares of new stock issued in September 1912 has been sold.

The revised Bank Act came into force on 1st. July last. Under Section 56 of that Act, the shareholders are required to appoint Auditors for the Bank at this meeting, and to vote the amount of their remuneration.

During the year buildings have been erected at Pembroke and Cobden, Ont., and a piece of land next to the office at Prince Albert having been secured, the enlargement of that building is now proceeding. In addition, the premises occupied by the Bank at Arnprior, Ont., and Rouleau, Sask. have been purchased.

The usual careful inspection of the Head Office and branches has been made, and the independent audit continued, as shown by the certificate appended to the Balance Sheet.

The Directors desire to testify to the satisfactory performance of their duties by the officers of the Bank.

GEORGE BURN, General Manager.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

UNDER THE MISTLETOE

IT WAS the day before Christmas in the high Sierra, and "Eagle's Nest," as Alicia had named the doctor's unpainted, ramshackle house, lichening the green of the mountain meadow, was filled from top to toe with holiday disorder and mystery.

All the chairs in the living room heaped with clusters of bright mountain berries; white flakes of pop corn strewn over the rag carpet; a mischievous rolly-polly cranberry hiding under the sofa where a broken-nosed doll and a moth-eaten Teddy bear were seated in confidential tete-a-tete. In the kitchen, the sink smoked with unwashed dishes, while the breakfast table was a confusion of red cardboard, strips of bark and straggling tufts of moss, the gleeful click of the twins' scissors chiming merrily in with the song of the teakettle. Upstairs, behind Alicia's closed door, crackling wave sounds of stiff wrapping paper—right in the listening ear that Pink, a silent graven image kneeling outside, had planted at the keyhole.

Suddenly, the front door of the house swung open with a bang, followed by a queer swishing noise—a thud.

With a wild clattter of overturned chairs the twins rushed out in'o the hall. In a series of resounding bumps the silent, graven image leaped down the stairs. Then came an Indian war-whoop — a shriek of excited delight!

"Children," called a plaintive voice from above, "what have you done now?"

"Done nothing!" yelled the twins in unison.

"It's came, Aunt Allie!" shrilled Pink's excited treble. "Our Kismus twee! Santa Taus opened the door and frood it in, and ranned away!"

Alicia Holland, flushed, little brown wisps of hair loosened in pretty disorder from her braids, descended the stairs, Baby Bunting bundled in a red shawl in her arms; Jip, the newest puppy, gurgling a mischievous growl and rolling before her, snapping at the fringe of the trailing shawl, while at the same moment there suddenly appeared in the open doorway, silhouetted against the sunshine outside, the tall, broad-shouldered figure of a man.

"Why, 'Uncle Jack,'" she cried, "is it really you? Who would have suspected that you were anywhere about?"

He answered her with a confidential twinkle of his laughing eyes, then, feigning great astonishment, turned to the youngsters with: "What in the world have you got here?"

"Our Kismus twee!" breathlessly explained Pink, jumping up and down on a creaking board. "Santa Taus opened the door and frood it in and ranned away!"

Jack Norton gave a low whistle. "I thought I caught a glimpse of a reindeer hiding behind the barn, and now I know—"

"Pshaw!" interrupted Dicky, the eighth-of-an-inch taller twin. "When you took us kids and Aunt Allie awalking last Sunday afternoon I saw a tree just like this one growing on the Deer Creek road, and—"

"Hush, Dicky, that will do!" laughingly admonished Alicia. "Micky, what have you on your blouse? It's sticky all down the front! Did you get out the mucilage when Aunt Allie told you not to?"

"No, ma'am. It was on the top shelf. I couldn't reach it even when Dicky boosted."

"So we used 'lasses instead," chimed in Dicky. "We made an awful swell picture frame for you, Aunt Allie, but you mustn't guess, because it's a surprise."

"Might as well take king's leave from any attempt at discipline to-day, Miss Allie," smiled Norton, as he lifted the tree from the floor and stood it in a corner. "Where's Doc?"

"Gone over to White River," sighed Alicia. "There seems to have been an unusual amount of sickness there this winter, and I do hate to have him take that long, cold drive so often."

Norton answered with a twinkling glance, but Alicia's head was bent, her eyes riveted on Baby Bunting, whom she was now trying to put to sleep, having dropped down with him in the living room rocker.

"I had a hunch that Doc would be over at White River to-day," laughed Norton, "and so I thought I'd stop in and see if I couldn't set up the tree and help decorate."

"What would we do without Uncle Jack!"

He turned impulsively toward her.

"Considering my unripened youth," he smiled, "don't you think Uncle Jack sounds a trifle ridiculous? Couldn't you—"

"Of course it sounds ridiculous!" she interrupted, the hurried kiss that she had given Baby Bunting not quick enough to hide the flush that ran up to the roots of her hair. "But it's Out of a clear sky came the sudden flash of small fists, the clattering crash of an overturned chair, a bowl of pain and rage, an awakened wail from Baby Bunting, who resented being laid aside even to give place to the children's fault. You see—you know, I fell into the habit unconsciously, Mr. Norton."

Strong, self-reliant young giant that he was, he stood embarrassed before her, blushing like a school boy. What a blundering idiot he was! She had entirely misunderstood him—was angry—would "Mr. Norton" him to the end of time.

"You didn't get my meaning," he faltered. "Please go on calling me Uncle Jack, in the same old way. I like it's being ridiculous. I like it better than anything else, unless you could—"

"I didn't!"

"You did!"

"You're a story-teller!"

"You're another!"

first aid to the injured.

The day that began in this whirl of excitement whirled excitedly on, and it was four o'clock in the afternoon before a quiet moment came, when Alicia could throw herself on the living room sofa to rest her tired feet and aching nerves.

Norton had gone back to the ranch. The twins and the puppy had been despatched to the post office. Baby Bunting, tied to the table leg, was playing contentedly with a string of sleighbells. Pink, seated on a hassock in a conspicuous corner of the room, was "doing secrets," an important scowl on the woman-child's forehead, as she hung over a snarl of worsted and a bent hairpin.

In a golden drift of day dreams Alicia lay in the drowsy twilight, a smile in the eyes that rested now on the bright Christmas garlands over the mantel, the flashing flames of the open fireplace, now on the Christmas tree with its strings of cranberries and pop corn and little red, yellow, green and pink candles all ready to light.

"Hello there!" awakened the doctor's jovial greeting, just as she was stepping over the stile into sandman's land. "I didn't get back quite on schedule time for a one o'clock dinner, did I, Peggy? And I'm as hungry as a mountain lion, too." Alicia, already on her feet, took the hint to the wise and led the way into the kitchen.

"Whatever Mother Hubbard has in her cupboard will do, Peg," said the doctor, following her as soon as he could free himself from Pink's hugs and Baby Bunting's moist kisses. "Don't go to any bother."

As Alicia hastily made ready the little between meal spread, she cast puzzled glances at her brother pacing the floor—there was a nervous tension, a joyous excitement, about him that baffled her.

"Draw up a chair and have a cup of tea, Peg," he said in a particularly fond, coaxing voice. "I want to have a little talk with you."

Without knowing why, as she seated herself at the opposite side of the table, Alicia experienced that same sinking sensation that she always felt in the descent of an elevator.

"Perhaps you think I haven't appreciated all you've done for me and the children these past eighteen months, Peggy," the doctor began abruptly. "But I have. There isn't one girl in a hundred that would have given up a good position and the city life that she loved to come out here in the wilderness to keep house for a cranky old codger like me and his harum-scarum wild-squirrel kiddies. It's worried me a lot, Peg, to have you make such a sacrifice, but I've got a bully Christmas surprise for you, little girl. You can pack your trunk and go back east as soon after the first as you've a mind to. I'm going to be married again on New Year's Day. What do you say to that?"

For an instant, she sat silent, staring, then she was conscious of hearing a strange, faraway voice quite outside and apart from herself saying: "I'm very glad if it will make you happy, Will."

Mechanically, with woodeny little jerks of response to the demands laid upon her, Alicia went through the supper that night, like a puppet worked with a string. In the same daze she went upstairs afterwards and helped the children get ready for the Christmas tree "party." She plaited Pink's two little pigtails just long enough to be tied together with pink tape. She straightened the zig-zag part in Micky's drenched locks. She inspected each crack and crevice of Dicky's ears. When the noisy trio had clattered down into the living room she put Baby Bunting to bed—with the usual "this little pig went to market, this little pig stayed at home" accompaniment, told off on the five upturned toes. In the habitual, hurried way of making her own toilet she whisked into her new green gown and hastily fastened a bunch of red Christmas berries at her breast and in her hair.

She knew from the shrieks of excitement as she descended the stairs that the surprise that Norton and she had planned was in full swing. Santa Claus had arrived—to the triumph of Pink's unwavering faith and to the twin's newborn scepticism.

The doctor was lighting the candles on the Christmas tree; the children tumbling over each other in a laughing scramble after bonbons that Santa Claus was tossing out of his bag. For a moment Alicia stood unnoticed in the merry midst. Then there was a joyful cry of "Aunt Allie!" A mad rush—the imprisoning of six clinging arms!

Over the children's bobbing heads she waved her hand to Santa Claus.

He waved back—and smiled.

Suddenly she was no longer an automation but a flesh-and-blood woman, with a sharp-edged pain stabbing her heart, an ache in her throat, a band of fire crushing her throbbing brow. The happiness of the room was choking her. She must have air — a moment alone to regain her self-control.

A pattering attack of bonbons—hitting Mick's fat little leg. Dicky's plump shoulder, "ticklishing" the nape of Pinks neck — put to rout Alicia's small captors, who dived shrieking under the table, behind the melodeon stool, back of the sofa, Santa Claus on all fours in hot pursuit.

Alicia, seizing her opportunity, slipped into the hall, snatched up the red shawl that Baby Bunting had been wrapped in that morning, and darted out into the open.

How big and beautiful it all was. How big and beautiful had been her life in the old rameshackle house, crowded with work and responsibility and love. She leaned against the sloping trunk of one of the oaks and sobbed as though her heart would break. A door opened and closed, and someone stood beside her.

"Doc has told me," said Norton in his simple, direct way. "Besides, I you mustn't take it so hard, Miss Allie."

"It's leaving the children," answered Alicia, fiercely. "Surely; it is natural for me to be upset over that. I will go out of their lives. In a year or two they will forget me!"

"Yes," relentlessly agreed Norton, "You can't expect anything else if they never see you, if you go 'way off back east. But if you stay on at Pine Ridge," he continued in a pleading hurry of words. "My ranch, you know is so near. We could have the kiddies there half the time and—Oh, won't you stay on with me — Allie?"

She gave a shy start, womanwise, tried to draw back to loosen her little hands from his tightening love-hold, but in the starshine he looked down and saw the happy surrender in her eyes.

He put his arms about her and kissed her tear-wet cheek.

"What do you mean " she cried, anger, resentment, joy, all in her voice as her face flamed to the touch of his lips. "You have no right to —"

"Yes, I have!" he cried rapturously back, kissing her again. "It is Christmas eve and you are standing right under the mistletoe!"

"It's on account of the children that I care so much—only on account of thechi ldren!"

There was the sound of a closing door, a flash of a hurriedly approaching red figure under the light of the stars — then her drooping little hands were caught up and held in Santa Claus' own.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Weak and Dizzy Spells.

Heart Would Beat Something Awful.

Those feelings of weakness, those dizzy spells which come over people from time to time, are warnings that must not go unheeded.

They indicate an extremely weakened condition of the heart and a disordered state of the nerves. One dizzy spell may pass off, but eventually they will come frequently, and at the same time more serious.

Those who are wise will start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills before their case becomes hopeless, for they have no equal for restoring the heart to its usual strength, and making the nerves firm and steady.

Mrs. Len. Kinsey, Moose Mountain, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with weak and dizzy spells, and my heart would beat something awful. I got so I had those spells every day. I got so I would try one medicine, and then another, but nothing did me any good until I got Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I can safely say they did me more good than anything I ever took, for I feel like a very different woman. My friends often ask me what I have been taking, and I always say 'Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.' I tell all my friends who say their heart troubles them, to take your pills."

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Nine-tenths of All Stomach Trouble Said to Be Due to Acidity.

A Physician's Advice on Cause and Cure.

A famous physician whose successful researches into the cause and cure of stomach and intestinal diseases have earned for him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due nine times out of ten to excessive acidity, commonly termed sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcers. It is interesting to note that he condemns the use of patent medicines as well as of medical treatment for the stomach, stating that he and his colleagues have secured remarkable results by the use of ordinary bisurated magnesia, which, by neutralising the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. He contends that it is as foolish to treat the stomach itself as it would be for a man who stepped on a tack to rub liniment on the foot without first removing the tack. Remove the tack and the foot will heal itself—neutralise the acid and stomach troubles will disappear. Irritating medicines and medical treatments are useless, so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bisurated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after meals, repeating in fifteen minutes, if necessary, this being the dose which the doctor has found most efficacious in all cases.

FOUR ARRESTED.

Two Men and Two Women Taken In Anti-Gambling Crusade.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—In continuance of their crusade against local handbooks, still two more men were arrested yesterday afternoon charged with conducting a gaming house.

For over a week the detectives had been keeping close watch on room No. 111, St. James' Chambers, corner of Adelaide and Church streets, and at precisely two o'clock yesterday afternoon Staff Inspector McKinney, Constables Jackson and Massey and Plainclothesmen Dunn and McConnell smashed the office door from its hinges and arrested A. J. Horton, 179 Geary avenue, and William Gallagher, 156 Dovercourt road, as keepers. With them as frequenters of the house were arrested two women, Edith Doyle and Mary Denning of 88 Church street. The women were employed ostensibly as clerks in the business.

A mass of books and betting records were gathered in, the records showing that there was being bet from $500 to $1,000 daily on horse races.

HERPICIDE

There is nothing "just as good" as Newbro's Herpicide. Some dealers will even go so far as to tell you they have something better.

That dealer has an axe to grind.

You can't stop his grinding, but you can prevent him grinding it at your expense.

There is one sure, swift way to do it.

Go where you can get what you ask for.

You wouldn't be obliged to do this very often, as fortunately the majority of druggists are honest and conscientious.

Newbro's Herpicide has been so long and favourably known as "the original dandruff destroyer" that no one should be deceived.

When you need a hair remedy, you don't want one which merely promises to kill the dandruff germ and prevent the hair from falling.

You want one that will do it.

Herpicide does it.

The hair becomes soft and lustrous. There is life, snap and beauty where formerly the hair was dead, dull and brittle.

Applications of this wonderful prophylatic may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlours.

Send ten cents in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., for a nice sample of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the hair.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

SIX MEN CAPTURED

Raid Near Montreal Results in Arrest of Counterfeiters

COMPLETE PLANT SEIZED

MONTREAL, Dec. 20.—Early yesterday the largest gang of counterfeiters ever arrested in this part of the country was taken into custody in a farm house five miles from the village of Lavaltrie. They were rounded up by Dominion and provincial police, led by Inspector Parkinson and Chief McCaskell.

Five men were taken into custody in the farmhouse where the plant was located, while the sixth member of the gang was arrested here by Detective Lapoint, who was sent in from Joliette by Chief McCaskell to make the arrest.

The men who were caught at the farmhouse and taken to the jail at Joliette, were: Bartholomew Caron, Frederick Eaton, Edouard Pariseau, Philip Bousquet and Eugene Gagne. The man arrested here was Alfred Grenier, an engraver in the employ of the Herald Publishing Company.

Besides the arrest of the six men the police claim to have seized a most elaborate plant including a printing press, plates, specially prepared paper and everything necessary for the counterfeiting of United States ten-dollar certificates.

Chief McCaskell stated last night that the farmhouse where the gang operated was fitted up like an arsenal. Shotguns and revolvers with plenty of ammunition were found, and the gang evidently intended to put up a battle had they not been taken by surprise. It was before dawn when the police reached the house. They smashed down the doors and rushed into the house with drawn revolvers and were upon the counterfeiters almost before one of them could make a move to get out of bed.

The raiders left Montreal Thursday night and got off at L'Epiphanie, where they secured warrants for the arrest of the quintette. Then they left for Lavaltrie, where they remained until four o'clock in the morning. Confronted by revolvers in the hands of the police the counterfeiters became convinced that it would be useless to show fight. Every weapon in the house was seized and the five men were forced to dress.

The printing press, plates, paper and all the counterfeiting outfit found in the house, as well as the guns and revolvers belonging to the gang, was loaded into a farmer's wagon and taken to Lavaltrie to be shipped to Joliette, where it will be used as evidence against the gang when they are arraigned in court to-day.

Inspector Parkinson believes a flood of thousands of bogus $10 and $100 U. S. bills has been issued.

Complaints about the bogus bills were received by the Canadian Treasury Department at Ottawa from Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton and most of the other big cities in Canada, Montreal appearing to be the distributing centre of a gang working with the counterfeiters at Joliette.

BILL IS WITHDRAWN.

Premier Scott Says Temperance Workers Killed Abolition.

REGINA, Dec. 20.—Premier Scott yesterday withdrew the bill to abolish the bars in Saskatchewan, and also the bill for a plebiscite on the question of bringing the former into law. The Premier blames the temperance forces. He made a long speech reviewing the recent agitation for a plebiscite. The temperance leaders, he said, had refused to accept the proposal of the Government to make a fifty thousand minimum vote a condition of the plebiscite. When the proposal to make the minimum vote 40,000 was made their consent was so grudgingly given that he feared they would enter the fight with faint hearts, which would be an unnecessary handicap upon the plan. The Government supporters agreed to the withdrawal of the bill without question, but E. C. Tate, Lumsden, an Opposition member, expressed strong disapproval of the Government's action.

The Legislature prorogued last evening.

TRUST DISSOLVES.

U. S. Telephone Combine Anticipates a Prosecution.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20. — Attorney-General McReynolds last night made public details of an agreement for reorganization of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.—"the telephone trust"—which will prevent litigation to dissolve that corporation under the anti-trust act and under which competitive conditions will be restored in the telephone service of the entire country and the combine will dispose of its holdings in the Western Union Telegraph Co.

The reorganization plan originated with the company, although it, followed many reports that a suit against it might be filed. It was regarded by Department of Justice officials last night as the most striking indication offered in a decade that "big business" has come to the conclusion that it is better to follow the Sherman law than fight it.

Officials were particularly pleased with the last part of the agreement, by which the Bell Company gives long distance service to subscribers of other companies and did not deny that they never had hoped to gain such a point by suit under the anti-trust act.

Manitoba Legislature Gets to Work.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 20.—The motion for an address in reply to the speech from the throne was adopted in the Legislature yesterday, and the Assembly adjourned after the transaction of routine business to assemble again on Monday, Jan. 4.

Hon. George R. Coldwell, Minister of Education, moved the second reading of a bill to provide for a periodical census of school children between the ages of seven and 16 in Manitoba.

J. J. Hartley for Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

At the urgent request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914. Being born and lived my whole life in Peterborough, and a whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the city.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure.

I will do my utmost to keep down the ever-increasing rate of taxation, consistent with the needs of the growing municipality.

I may say that I am in favour of municipal ownership, and in favour of having all city work done by our own people, instead of bringing in outsiders to do it. I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended. I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being chairman of that board for two years. I was also chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honour to elect me Mayor of our city, I will do my best to serve you to the very best of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

GILLESPIE for MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro:

Ladies and Gentlemen—At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Alderman for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the Municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my success in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval, I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE

NO GRAMMAR FOR HER.

In a Fort Scott school the teachers gave orders for all pupils to buy a certain kind of grammar, and bring the book to the class the next day. When school started one little girl walked to the front of the room, and carefully laid a note on the teacher's desk. She picked it up, rather surprised, but she was more surprised when she read the following note: "I do not desire that mattie should engage in grammar, as I prefer her to engage in more useful studies, and can learn her to speak and write proper myself. I have been through two grammars, and can't say they did me no good. I prefer mattie to engage in German or drawin' and rockal music on the piano.

TO THE RATEPAYERS OF CENTRE WARD:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I spoke with a merchant at his store door, and he said he supposed the people would go ahead and elect a raft of dead heads to the Council. In fact, he said "more dead heads." That merchant is a pessimist and has a grouch.

But he may have reasons. His view of things comes from seeing men go into Council, and who have made promises—promised too much. Promised to do things they really didn't believe they could or would do. It is the popular thing.

I am not, please observe, making promises. I don't just know what I can do until I get there—if I ever do—but I can assure the ratepayers that I will try and be as useful, helpful and diligent in their and your service as I can be. That covers it.

I shall be very glad to receive your vote and hope to be so favored

Respectfully,

FRANK H. DORRIN

To The Electors of West Ward

Gentlemen:

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to return me as Alderman for your Ward for 1914. As a business man with a successful business experience, I feel that our motto should be "Business methods in all departments of the Council." Efficiency linked with economy should be our guiding principle.

I trust you will favour me with your support and I promise should I be returned that I will do my best to merit your approval.

Jos. Wm. Worth

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate, but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors, where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors, and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years' experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who had a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the City and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready-made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every home, and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation, like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. Where a worker can have his house and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers will grant good service in the future as I have given the past, will give me their hearty support, I am,

Yours very truly,

W. H. McWILLIAMS.

THE CITY'S FINANCES

Chairman of the City Trust Commissioners Submits Statement of Our Financial Position

NET DEBT IS $500,000

Editor of the Peterborough Examiner:

Sir,— Observing inquiries being made in relation to the City's financial condition, I beg to submit the following statement as being approximately correct:

Debenture debt		$1,600,000.00
Assets—
Sinking funds in hand	$330,000.00
Waterworks. ..	550,000.00
Market block. .	175,000.00
Hilliard farm..	15,000.00
Property East City	10,000.00
Other available properties and mortgages ..	20,000.00
		$1,100,000.00
Net debt		$500,000.00

It will be observed that I have taken no account of the schools, sewers, sidewalks, etc. (in which more than $600,000.00 has been expended) but only such assets as are productive, or are convertible into money if such remote occasion should ever arise.

With an assessed value of $10,000,000, and the net liability stated, our position, I think, should not disturb anyone. Continued prudent management of affairs will assure the high financial position we occupy.

Yours truly,
W. H. MOORE,
Chairman City Trust.

TURKEYS FAIRLY CHEAP ON THE MARKET TO-DAY

There must have been a lot of bloodletting in country parts during the past week, judging by the piles of turkeys, geese and chickens that were piled on the market counters this morning. Not only did the boards groan beneath the load of "eats," but you could almost hear their calls for help. It was an old time Christmas display with turkeys and geese prominent in the foreground.

With two dollars you could buy a goose big enough to last through a couple of meals. And with a $2.50 turkey you could trail it home, confident that you would favourably pass the criticism of those whose standard is the dollar sign.

Turkeys sold as low as 16 and 17 cents a pound, which in itself is something of a Christmas present. It was a bright prospect for those who had the necessary currency, and apparently there is more of it salted away than some people think.

A $3.50 bird, and then there were a few of them, looked as big as an eagle or an ostrich. The farmers' wives stated that they had no difficulty in disposing of their goods. Hence every one was pleased, and good will bubbled over.

Geese ranged from $1.50 to $2.00. Potatoes were $1.10 and $1.15; eggs 40c.; butter, 30c.; pork, front, 13c., hinds 14c.; lamb fronts 13c., hinds 16c.; hogs, dressed, $12.50. Apples (Greenings) per bbl., $3.50; Snows per peck, 40c.; Spies, per bbl., $4.00.

BUSINESS COLLEGE ANNUAL "AT HOME"

The students of the Peterborough Business College held an enjoyable At Home last night. Over one hundred and fifty students and ex-students were present, and were entertained in a pleasing manner by those in charge of the function. Mr. Hastie was chairman for the occasion, and an excellent programme was presented. Every number was given a very hearty reception. The programme was:

Overture—Orchestra.
Piano Duet—Miss Carr and Miss Carveth.
Vocal Solo—Miss E. Webster.
Reading—Miss A. Beatty.
Piano Duet—Miss Butler and Miss Clary.
Vocal Solo—Miss Emerson.
Violin Solo—Mr. Leider.
Piano Solo—Miss Carveth.

The programme occupied the first part of the evening, and after it a promenade was held. The music was provided by Cunningham's orchestra, and added considerably to the pleasure of the occasion. At the conclusion of the promenade refreshments of the choicest order were served. These were prepared and served by Messrs. Coleman Bros., and were voted delicious by the guests.

Every arrangement had been made by the committees in charge of the At Home, in a manner that assured a splendid affair. It is due to their efforts that the function was such an enjoyable one and they are to be congratulated on the success that rewarded their efforts.

The Business College rooms were tastefully decorated for the affair last night. This was done at great labour by the students but the effect when finished amply justified their expenditure in time and good hard work.

REPORT REGARDING WOOLWORTH STORE DENIED BY THE BUILDING INSPECTOR

During the past week, some one has, perhaps inadvertently, started a rumour that the store occupied by F. W. Woolworth & Co. (Knox's) was unsafe. In order to show the utter lack of truth in such a report, the firm has had the building thoroughly examined by their own architect and by Mr. T. A. S. Hay, City Building Inspector. The latter's report is given in full below:—

COPY.

Messrs. F. W. Woolworth Co., Ltd.

Gentlemen:-

In company with Mr. W. Thatcher, Architect, and other gentlemen connected with your Company, I have to-day made an examination of your store building, 377 George St., Peterborough, and beg to report as follows:-

I find that the building appears to be perfectly sound from basement to third floor.

The foundation is of well-built stone and appears to be not less than 20 inches thick, and beam-filled at first floor joists. The joists are 3" x 12", laid 16 inches apart and bridged. The extreme clear span is 20 feet.

I found no indications of subsidence in any of the walls or floors.

I did not examine the roof except from inside but saw no sag or break in the ceiling under it.

The building is closely built up to on both sides by substantial buildings and no cracks are visible on the front wall which is supported on cast iron pillars.

I have no hesitation in certifying that the whole building appears to be in good condition.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) T. A. S. HAY,
Building Inspector.

THE PRESENT WEATHER IS UNPARALLELED

Close Study of the Conditions During the Last Dozen Years Fails to Find Similar Conditions

DECEMBERS OF THE PAST

The universal topic of discussion is the weather. No other subject receives the same amount of attention when friends meet, and it is a never-failing source of supply when the conversation lags in other directions. That weather conditions prevailing this fall are abnormal is shown by the following statistics furnished by the local weather observer who has scanned old registers in vain to find a parallel to similar conditions in other years:

In 1900, during Christmas week and for some days before and after that date, weather conditions were much as at present. There was no sleighing; a few inches of snow lay on the ground in places. Fair sleighing had prevailed that year from Nov. 14 to Dec. 16, with a few interruptions. Below zero had been reached on half a dozen occasions.

The following year (1901) fair sleighing prevailed the m.. of Dec., also the last week of Nov. Zero weather on four days.

In 1902, we had good sleighing at the Xmas tide. Snow and zero weather came on Dec. 16th. Seven days below zero—(once 16 below) is quite a contrast to the present season.

In 1903 one foot of the beautiful furnished sleighing, which had prevailed since Nov. 25th.

We had sleighing from Dec. 8 to 23, in 1904, and below zero on to occasions.

In the following year (1905) snow covered the ground from Nov. 1st and A1 sleighing prevailed at this date. On Dec. 21 our street railway system was completely tied up.

In 1906 conditions were much the same, the ground having a covering of white from Dec. 6th.

Twenty inches of snow covered the ground during Christmas week in 1907.

Next year sleigh-bells jingled from

KING GEORGE IS ACTING AS CONCILIATOR

Premier Asquith Has Held Two Conferences With His Majesty This Week on the Irish Question

LATE ENGLISH NEWS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Right Hon. Lloyd George is renewing his activities as an Irish Conciliator. With Premier Asquith he held two prolonged conferences with King George this week, Monday and yesterday, the latter lasting eighty minutes.

These meetings, following Asquith's meeting with Bonar Law, on Tuesday, admit of only one interpretation as the Daily Chronicle recalls: "In a situation like the present the Crown is peculiarly qualified to act as frank conciliator between the conflicting parties." Queen Victoria, it will be remembered, was the peacemaker in the crisis that preceded the passage into law of the bill for the disestablishment and disendowment o fthe Irish Church.

After leaving the King, yesterday, Asquith had a conference with the Home Secretary, presumably on Irish questions.

PRICES ARE HIGH.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—England, like Canada, is complaining this Christmas of the increased cost of living. Money, happily, is abundant, but everything is dearer, from beef to almonds and raisins. Experts say the rise in prices has only begun. They talk of butter at two shillings, and beef at half a crown a pound, and they attribute the cause to the increased world demand, the rising standard of living on the continent of Europe and to the changed position of the United States which, from a food exporter, has become an importer. One provision firm discussing the situation in the Daily News, pleads for a conference of the nations, to thrash out this world-problem. "It is time the nations stopped building ships for scrap heaps and

Ennismore Man Found Drunk Last Night With $84 on His Person —Could Not See the Use of Putting it in the Bank

PAID ANOTHER'S FINE

In this morning's Police Court an Ennismore resident was charged with being drunk on Smith Street, yesterday. He pleaded guilty and was fined $2. When he was arrested he had $84 in his pockets and the fact that he got as far as Smith Street with his money was a source of wonder to Chief Thompson. The man evidently does not suffer from a stringency of filthy lucre.

"Why don't you put your money in the bank?" asked the Magistrate.

"I have too much there already" was the answer.

"You are foolish to carry so much around with you."

"Sure and it's my best friend," responded the man from Ennismore.

He came from Lindsay yesterday, and as he has no conveyance in the City the Chief wanted to know how he was going to get home.

"How are you going to get home?" he asked.

"Search me," answered the prisoner. As an exposition of the smile that won't come off he was perfect. Whether or not his happiness originated from his supply of money or not is a question but the broad smile never left his face from the time he entered the court room until he left it. He loaned his fellow prisoner the money to pay his fine.

LETTER TO THE MAYOR

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Through your columns I wish to ask Mayor Bradburn the following questions:

How much did the debenture debt of Peterborough, including local improvement debts, increase during the two years you were Mayor of the city?

How much greater is the total assessment this year than it was the year 1911.

How much money in round figures has been expended this year on the municipal electric power plant?

Was it known to you or the Council at the time, that the city served notice upon the Peterborough Light and Power Company to take over all their property, that the company owned the Auburn dam, power house and raceway, connected therewith?

Did the Council instruct the City Solicitor to make a search in the Registry Office to see what property the Peterborough Light and Power Company owned in Peterborough before serving a notice on the company that the city had passed a by-law expropriating all their property in the city?

The Peterborough Light and Power Company claim they own at least $600,000.00 worth of property in the City of Peterborough. Have you or the Council formed any definite idea of the value of their property in the city?

If the undertakings contemplated by the present Council are carried out by the new incoming Council to what extent in round numbers will the indebtedness of the city be increased?

IMPROVEMENTS IN RICH. HALL STORE

Ready-to-Wear Department is Large Airy and Well Lighted—A Delight to Customers

OTHER ALTERATIONS

Extensive alterations in the departments on the second floor of the Richard Hall store have effected improvements that are being greatly appreciated by the ladies of the city. The ready-to-wear department has been enlarged by an addition of over 1,000 square feet of floor space and has interchanged positions with the Home Furnishings Department. All the front section on the north half of this floor has been devoted to ready-to-wear goods, and the Home Furnishings Department has been removed to the section at the west-end of this storey.

The millinery is the only other department on this floor and the new arrangement has made a decided improvement not only in the facilities for displaying articles but in the attractive appearance of the entire floor.

Modern merchandizing has put a greater premium than ever upon light and spaciousness. By the removal of a section of the wall between the ready-to-wear and millinery departments, by a splendid electric lighting system and by the bright appointments on this floor, the entire second storey of the Richard Hall store has been given a brightness and airiness that make it an exceptionally cheerful and ideal place for shopping.

The effect is heightened by fifty-two feet of new show cases in the ready-to-wear department. They are tall, roomy and well lighted, and were designed for the sole purpose of displaying imported gowns and other rich wear without any danger of their becoming soiled. Another large show case has been given over to children's coats and hats and infants' wear.

The bright appointments together with the new lighting system and wider opening between departments has increased the lighting effectiveness by at least fifty per cent.

The Home Furnishings.

The Home Furnishings Department shows new improvements, although it has always received first attention. The windows have been hung with new materials of French chintz, French velvets with Persian trimmings, valance and other effects. Provision has been made for the showing of the effect of harmonized colours in room furnishings, a facility that is widely appreciated.

The aim of these latest alterations has been to provide for the ladies of the city a bright, airy and cheery series of departments devoted to the goods that are of first moment to them. The whole trend of metropolitan salesmanship has been mainly in this same direction with other interests not overlooked. This is an indication that the Richard Hall store is abreast with modern methods.

AN ATTRACTIVE WINDOW DISPLAY

An attractive Christmas window is that of the Peterborough Hardware Company. It was designed by Mr. C. H. McGibbon. Its artistic merit is only one of the many features that commend it to the public. The north window contains a beautiful array of silverware, bearing the well-known "Britannia" trade-mark, also "1847 Rogers Bros. silver plate that wears."

The south window gives but a slight intimation of the extensive stock that is contained within the store. Special attention is directed to the electric chafing dishes, coffee percolators, toasters, and many other articles of representative high-class workmanship, and all designed to lighten the labours of the home.

Fire tongs and sets for grates are also included in the array.

TRUE RELATION OF HYDRO AND CITY COUNCIL

The Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The financial liability of the city of Peterborough, as recently made public, makes the situation serious when we take into account the increased liabilities to be incurred in the near future, such as sewage disposal and other large expenditures that seem to be demanded. These, together with the present city debt, will constitute an annual payment of a large amount. Seeing that these things are so, it is imperative upon the City Council to see that nothing that is not absolutely required should be dealt with, and that full value is received for every dollar spent.

Just now in the Hydro expropriation business the City Council is in such deep water that they are off their feet and do not know what to do next. May I suggest that for a full understanding of the situation we go back one year, when the agreement was made with Mr. Beck for the Hydro Commission to deliver to the city a fixed number of horse-power at a specific price, either inside or outside the city limits—at a price not exceeding a stated sum per horse-power for a fixed number of years, and at the expiry of this time the city to become absolute owners of the power.

The Council has nothing whatever to do with acquiring power; they have the control of distribution only, and this from point of delivery by the Hydro Commission.

It is manifest that the City Council has no occasion for controversy with any power company. The expropriation powers apply only to the poles and other appliances required for distribution throughout the city. The by-law submitted at last municipal election and approved by a large vote gives the Council their financial authority; the expropriation power is conferred by the Legislature.

With regard to the highway bridge over the sewer at Dalhousie Street, when the large cost and grave danger of the site is considered, it is possible that the ratepayers may not please to be in a position to become a liability for next year's Council to act upon.

While thinking of economy, I want to refer to the new street lights. While admitting that they are excellent lights, I might suggest that in view of the present state of our taxes the cost is too great as well as the number. The iron poles and the lights seem to me to be about 200 feet apart, and we have the lights in pairs, about 40 feet apart. This seems to be unnecessary. One light on each side would be enough. Then at the same cost for lamps and power we could have the lighting extended a distance of fourteen streets instead of seven, which is now the case. I like to see the business streets well lighted, but we do not want to incur too great expense nor waste light unnecessarily, which is the same as wasting money; and with our high taxation we don't want to do much of that.—Yours, etc.,

JOHN RIDDELL.

THE BANK OF OTTAWA.

The shareholders of the Bank of Ottawa, who attended the annual meeting on the 17th inst., were treated to the best report in the history of the bank. During the year, which has just closed the bank showed net profits of $706,740, which is the largest in the history of the bank. In other particulars, the position of the bank has been strengthened. The rest account has been increased and now stands at $4,750,000 or $750,000 greater than the paid up capital. Its total deposits now amount to $40,800,000, showing increased confidence on the part of the public in the management of the bank. Current loans amount to $36,500,000, indicating that the Bank of Ottawa is doing its full share in catering to the business needs of the communities where its branches are located. The total assets of the bank stand at $54,674,000.

The Peterborough branch is presided over by Mr. G. C. Wainwright, as manager, and has contributed a substantial share to the satisfactory operations of the year.

WHY IS IT?

What is the cause of the limited production of the farms dairies, stock barns and poultry houses of this province and other provinces of the Dominion? It should not be the case. Our population hasn't grown so rapidly as to account for the failure of our farms to feed our people. Of course there are more non-producers in the cities and towns, but a large proportion of this disproportion in the distribution of population comes from the farms. Why does ot come? There is something to be explained. A few years ago with cruder agricultural methods, with less advanced knowledged of the secrets of success in crop production, we had a greater production in proportion to population. We had enough to feed ourselves, without sending for eggs and butter fifteen thousand miles away—to little New Zealand, with an area of 104,000 square miles compared with Canada's nearly four million square miles. Now-a-days we have the most advanced farming methods. We have the best labour-saving machinery. We have our farmers pumped full of excellent knowledge of the best methods through our Agricultural Colleges. Yet we are not raising in proportion as much as we did in the days before we had riding ploughs, self-binders, silos, and the very last thing in farm equipment. Are the farmers becoming spoiled by luxury? We read, in the despatches, of a banquet at St. Catharines, where a hundred farmers were present in dress suits. And it is a not uncommon thing to see farmers rolling luxuriously in their autos or as luxuriously as possible on the bad country roads they provide themselves. And why not? The farmer is the king pin in the waggon of the world. He is the base of all prosperity, and he has a right to the best his industry and skill can command. It is an old cry that "the farmer feeds us all." But he doesn't do so. He has a perfect right to wear dress suits and ride in his auto cars; but we expect that he will "feed us all," which unfortunately he does not do at the present time. The man who will tell us why and find a remedy will be a greater man than "he that taketh a city."

ROYAL BANK OF CANADA.

When the shareholders receive the annual statement (printed in another column), of the Royal Bank, they will read it with much pleasure as showing a very prosperous year—attractive profits, strong financial position and public confidence, expressed and capacity to meet demands upon its resources. Steady growth has marked the Royal Bank in all its departments and now that it has rounded out its organization—this is the first full year since the absorption of the Traders' Bank—it should be in a position to achieve atill more satisfactory results in the future.

The net profits for the year amounted to $2,142,100.22, equivalent to plightly over 18½ per cent. on the capital stock. The amount available for distribution was $2,752,319.58. Of this amount dividends at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum took $1,387,200; $100,000 was applied to pension fund; $250,000 written off bank premises, leaving an amount of $1,015,119 to be carried forward to the balance of profit and loss account.

A part of the statement, especially important, indicates the manner in which the bank maintained a very strong position by the large proportion of available cash and liquid assets. Liquid assets at the end of the year were equivalent to 46.66 per cent. of the total liabilities, and the proportion of actual cash reserves reached their highest total of 13.83 per cent.

The general statement indicating the year's progress shows total assets of $180,246,785.73. Liquid assets reach a total of $73,385,791.71 and current loans and discounts, together with the loans to cities, provincial governments and overdue debts aggregate $102,716,658.68.

Deposits bearing interest stand at $101,900,790.87, and deposits not bearing interests at $36,276,871.60, bringing the total deposits up to $138,177,662.47.

At the present time the statement of the Royal Bank should be of the greatest benefit to the Canadian situation in London, as it will afford English interests a striking proof of the strong position in which our leading financial institutions are holding themselves.

The local branch of this prosperous, and progressive bank is under the management of Mr. V. Eastwood, and has contributed very materially to the prosperity and progress, reflected by the above statement.

WOMEN POLICE.

A woman policeman, is a misnomer, but is not otherwise incongruous or inconsistent. The local Council of Women of Peterborough are preparing to petition the Police Commissioners to appoint a woman police officer for Peterborough. This may seem to many a striking innovation, but it is perhaps only on that ground that objection to it can be urged. In these latter days the relations of woman to man, and to society in general are so changed that any new departure from hitherto prevailing conditions and relations, can not be regarded as innovation to be specially remarked. Women are taking a place in the world of business and action in a numerically and continuously larger ratio, that may shock some of us old fogies, but which is a legitimate outcome of the new spirit of the age. Not only in these regards, but in the matter of attire, woman's relations to the outlook of on-looking man is changed. Women's dress is become so daring in its approximation to man's dress, so frank in its revelations that no new freak or departure creates more than a momentary sensation, becomes anything more than is to be expected, This can, perhaps, be in small part traced to the modern necessity of women being compelled to invade the domain of business heretofore sacred to mankind, in order to earn a livelihood, to maintain themselves, a home, or dependents. In this connection the fact of two girls in Ottawa adopting boys' attire to enable them to better earn a living, is not surprising. They are to be rather commended for their courage and enterprise than blamed for showing a lack of womanly modesty; and, in the matter of abstract right, the male policeman might have been better employed than in interfering with two poor girls bravely attempting to solve the problem of earning an honest living.

In consideration of the changed relations of women to society, and in consideration of the changed conditions of social life, that bring increasing dangers to young girls, there does not seem to be anything anomalous in the demand for a woman "policeman" in default of any other provision for safeguarding, especially, girl life. If police protection of any kind had been provided for the residence section of the City, the real danger spot, there might not have been no necessity for the demand now made for the appointment of a police woman. Without unconditionally admitting the desirability of such a course, it can safely be said that the proposal is worthy of the very careful consideration of the Police Commissioners. Something must be done to save our young from the dangers with which the undue liberty, modern life, and careless home training menace the modern girl and boy. A little energy devoted to improving and making effective our present ineffective Curfew law would be well employed. As the law now stands neither man nor woman "policeman" can effectively deal with the evils which the law is nominally designed to obviate or minify.

HAMILTONIAN'S PLEA FOR REFORM

MORE ROOM, MORE ROOM.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—We read of the destruction that walketh at noon-day and suppos it applied to some distant time, whereas it is here now among ourselves. Open your eyes and see for yourselves—jails, penitentiaries, poorhouses and asylums so filled that there is constant cry for more room. It is said that $200,000 are to be spent adding to one asylum alone and not one dollar to prevent the great cause of it all. More room, thousands to make more room for the destruction wrought by the saloon, and not one dollar to enlighten the people as to their danger. You say it isn't all due to the saloon. Just listen; after Kansas had been under prohibition for thirty years most of that time poorly enforced, she had 87 counties out of 105 that had no insane. If that keeps up in a few years the asylums of Kansas will be nearly empty. That fact alone should be enough to rouse the most indifferent. Only that we have become so hardened to the slaughter that piece of news would start, a vigilance committee on horseback to wipe out the destruction that worketh all day and most of the night. Vigilance committees have been started for much less cause.

But, listen further. A short time ago Kansas had 53 counties, in which the jails were empty of prisoners and 38 county poorhouses vacant. Thus Kansas has proved that the great cause of insanity, poverty and crime is the drink habit. In view of this fact we must be mad to go on making criminals and building prisons to set them up in. I have only mentioned facts that anyone can verify for himself and that should stiffen the backbone of every man who goes to the polls to vote only for men opposed to the destruction of the people for the enrichment of the few.

The liquor traffic as at present conducted, is a system of slavery. Let us cast off this horrible burden and give men their freedom.

H. Arnott,
18 Ontario Avenue, Hamilton.

EDITORIAL

Looking at the advertising in some Outside City papers just now, one would think you could buy Furs at half their regular price, which is obviously an untruth. One has only to have these goods sent down on approval, and to look carefully into their merits, to find, in our own City, without any cutting in price, in many instances, that they can get better values in Furs.

We don't pose as a philanthropic institution, yet any article in Fur that is now being advertised in these "Slaughter Sales of Furs" can be had at Barrie's at equally as low prices and in some cases lower prices. The values quoted in a great many of these Furs are largely mere fiction, or else they are "Out-of-Style" Furs which any one would be glad to dispose of at a loss.

That there are as good fish in the sea as were ever caught is mighty poor consolation to the fellow who has just lost a four-pound bass or a 125-pound girl.

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

(BY F. M. DELA FOSSE)

Biography, Part Six, Canadian Biography.

By far the greater portion of Canadian Biography treats of those who in one way or another have rendered themselves eminent in the public service of their country. This is not to be wondered at, seeing that Canada is yet young and her progeny of poets, prose writers, philosophers and exponents of the fine arts small in number. When a nation is in the making there is not much chance afforded for the development of men and women of literary and artistic genius. As every schoolboy, thanks to the efficient system of education in vogue in our schools, knows the careers of our statesmen and early explorers almost by heart, there is no need to mention them here further than to state in what measure the Library is supplied with information concerning their lives and labours. In this respect the "Makers of Canada" series, the History section, will be found of the greatest service by readers and students alike. In addition, there are on the shelves Lives of Sieur D'Iberville, Father Lacombe, William Lyon Mackenzie, Sir John Macdonald, Sir Oliver Mowat, Lord Strathcona, Bishop Strachen, and Lord Haliburton, as well as memorials of several of our Governors-General; also reminiscences of Sir George Ross and a volume of the late Richard Cartwright dealing with the political foes and friends of his day.

Although there is no life of Judge Haliburton in the Library we get some slight insight into his career in reading that of his son, Lord Haliburton by J. B. Atlay. In literature he is better known by his nom de plume of "Sam Slick." Judge Haliburton has a special claim to notice as the originator of that peculiar type of humour that has had among its latter exponents, Bret Harte, Artemus Ward, Max Adeler, Josh Billings, Bill Nye and Mark Twain. He was undoubtedly a very able man. Born at Windsor, Nova Scotia, in 1796, he was educated at King's College and at the early age of 23, was educatedvgvvteHaldr of the Court of Common Pleas of his province. In 1856 he retired to England, where he entered parliament as member for Launceston, a place that in after years gave Lord Halsbury his introduction to public life. The judge was not only a good writer, albeit a somewhat vulagr one; he was also a far-sighted man. An instance of this is seen in the fact that many years before the appearance of railways in this country he warmly advocated their institution as a means of linking the provinces together. The germ also of the National Policy may be traced in the expression he gave vent to on a visit to the Falls of Niagara: "What a 'tarnal waste of water power."

The Life of Father Lacombe deals with the career of a very devoted member of the Roman Catholic Church His life work of close on sixty-five years has been carried on amongst the pagan Indians and half breeds of our Canadian Northwest, and there is probably no missionary of any denomination living in the world to-day to whom such length of service may be accredited as to Father Lacombe. Beloved and respected by all who knew him, he deserves mention, not only for the nobility of his life, but also for the great part he played in the last Riel outbreak in keeping the Blackfoot nation loyal to the Crown.

Mr. W. C. Van Horne, in his preface to Miss Hughes' book writes as follows: "Near the Lake of the Woods at sunrise one morning in 1883 I saw a priest standing on a flat rock, his crucifix in his right hand and his broad hat in the other, silhouetted against the rising sun, which made a golden halo about him, talking to a group of Indians—men, women and pappooses, who were listening with reverent attention. It was a scene never to be forgotten and the noble and saintly countenance of the priest brought it to me that this must be Father Lacombe, of whom I had heard so much; and it was." And again he writes: "The noble and elevating example of devotion and self-sacrifice that has been given us by Father Lacombe in his more than sixty years of work among the Indians of Western Canada should not be lost, for he would be stony-hearted indeed who would not be softened and humanized by such an example, which must bring even to the irreligious a feeling of profound respect for the faith which inspired and sustained this good man." These are beautiful words and form a kindly and sympathetic tribute from one of whom the world at large has regarded as a fair type of the apostle of material progress, to one who is a most worthy representative of the apostolate of spiritual progress. On reading it, something in the imagery and the wording of the first paragraph carried my thoughts back a century and a half to the words of another writer who was as great in the republic of letters as the gentleman just quoted is in the empire of finance. Who does not know them? "It was at Rome on the 15th of October, 1764, as I sat musing amidst the ruins of the Capitol, while the bare-footed friars were singing Vespers in the temple of Jupiter, that the idea of writing the decline and fall of the city first started to my mind. And it carried me back also over the period of thirty years to the country that has been the scene of Father Lacombe's labours. One needs to have known the Northwest at that period to even faintly appreciate the difficulties that had to be encountered in the matter of transportation over the territory covered by him in his missionary journeyings. Father Lacombe entered upon his work many years before the Canadian Pacific Railway passed through the country. Even thirty years ago the line was far from complete, for many stretches along Lake Superior and through the Northwest were unconnected. Would-be settlers and survey parties were obliged o make long detours through the northwestern states of the Union or travel from the head of Lake Superior over the Dawson route in order to reach Manitoba. The prairies were still vast pasture lands where the buffalo roamed in isolated twos and threes and antelopes in large flocks skipped gracefully along the hillocks within easy ranke of the traveller. Signs of settlements of half-breeds, leagues upon leagues distant from each other. Here and there over th seemingly illimitabl reaches of the prairies one cam upon migratory bands of Indians, bound from one reserve to another or on five or six tepees in front of which sprawled the noble red men, covered with frowsy blankets, smoking the pipe of peace whilst their squaws busied themselves in the domestic concerns of their establishments. Those were the days when the great Hudson Bay Company was still a power in the land and the outward and visible sign of its greatness was to be found in long lines of freighters which were to be met on all the glistening trails, wending their slow way from sequestered posts to the headquarters of the Company in Winnipeg. Into this wilderness, peopled by Indians, half-breeds and adventurers, Father Lacombe willingly cast himself, and there he will in all probability remain contentedly, true to the last to the dusky children of his faith. He arrived when the first faint speaks of Christian sunrise were beginning to dispel the mists of paganism, and he has lived to witness, in the land he loves so well, perhaps the quickest social, moral and material development that the world has ever seen.

A very successful "at home," which was well attended, was held by the St. George's Society of this City, in the hall of the Woodmen of the World on George Street yesterday evening.

The chair was occupied by the President, Mr. Walter Stocker, while Mr. R. Heafield, the Vice-President, filled the vice-chair.

A good programme, consisting of music and recitations was offered, Messrs Ward (baritone) and Jones (tenor) being exceptionally well received in their respective numbers and needless to say were vociferously encored. As a matter of fact the majority of the performers received their well-merited second call. Mr. McLaren, likewise, was very entertaining in his various recitations.

The following was the programme:

"A Very Merry Xmas to All"

Causes And The Cure Of Tuberculosis

by the Contributed to The Examiner

Peterboro' Health Association

As there are reported a few cases of diphtheria in Peterborough at present, the following remarks on its prevention may prove of interest:

The Prevention of Diphtheria.

This disease is transmitted chiefly by direct contact between the person harbouring diphtheria bacilli and uninfected well persons. Diphtheria bacilli can survive, outside the body, on fabric, wood and glass, for varying periods, depending upon their environment. Exposure to air and sunlight tends to kill. A dark, damp location tends to prolong their vitality.

1. If a child or adult has a formation of a thick, grey white membrane in any part of the mouth, throat or nose, in most instances that person has diphtheria and should be separated from all well persons. If there is no membrane formation, but the child or person appears to be stupid, drowsy, or much prostrated, that person may have diphtheria, and should be kept away from well persons. In all these cases a physician should be called; he should take "cultures" from the throats of all such persons. The examination of these "cultures" will show whether the diphtheria bacillus is present or not; in all cases the early use of antitoxin is urged.

2. If well persons, who have come in contact with children or adults sick as above described, should have cultures taken from their thoats, because an examination of their cultures show that the germ is present in about half of them. All exposed persons should be protected by antitoxin.

3. A llpersons recovering even from a mild case should be isolated until in each of two consecutive cultures no bacilli be found. In persons who are recovering, this period will average about three weeks. In well persons the bacilli usually disappears much sooner. They may persist in either classes for long periods. Well persons harbouring diphtheria bacilli in their throats or noses are probably the most common means of speading the disease to others. Those persons found not to be harbouring bacilli, especially children, should leave the home until all dangerf of infection is over.

FARMERS' BANQUET BIG AFFAIR

Two Hundred Gather to Hear Addresses From Prominent Speakers

This city constituting the hub of one of the best agricultural districts in eastern Ontario was the scene of an agricultural caucus to-day, when over two hundred farmers gathered for a communion of spirit and to hear an appeal for a better understanding between the east and the west. The meeting assumed the form of a farmers' banquet which was held in the "Oriental" Hotel. The gathering was a representative one and included the Federal and Provincial members for East and West Peterborough, bankers, ministers and about one hundred and seventy-five farmers comprising the flower of the agricultural community of which Peterborough is the centre.

The speakers were all prominent officials of co-operative organizations of Manitoba, and their plea was for a better understanding between east and west, a larger interchange of products on a basis of mutual co-operation, and for the uplift of the industry of agriculture to a fuller realization of that dignity which is its true attribute.

Inside History of the Fight.

In a short but interesting address, Mr. G. F. Chipman, editor of The Grain Growers' Guide, the official organ of the western company, gave some of the "inside history" of the fight waged against co-operation by the "big interests."

The early struggles for existence, and the splendid success attained by the Grain Growers' Grain Company of Manitoba were described in detail by T. A. Crearar, President of the company. He showed how, in spite of the vigorous opposition of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, his company would this year handle nearly 30,000,000 bushels of grain, as compared with 2,500,000 bushels in 1906, its first year of operation. The interests represented in the Winnipeg Exchange had used every influence at their command to crush the farmers' company s aidMr. Crearar. It was expelled from membership in the Exchange, and when this failed to accomplish the desired result, the Exchange suspended the commission rule, intending to handle grain free of charge for a time, and thus drive the smaller organiartion to the wall. In spite of all the tactics employed, the company has prospered, and this year had a profit of $16,000 on the season's operations.

How They Fight Combines.

What has been so successfully done in the west, could be accomplished on an even greater scale in Ontario, said Mr. Crearar. "In both parts, the combines are to fight," said the speaker, as he named some half dozen corporations which his association plans to attack. "Our farmers use a great deal of lumber," said Mr. Crearar, "and they are forced to pay an extortionate rate for it. The lumber business in Manitoba to-day is in the hands of a combine.

PASS RESOLUTION IN REGARD TO HOME RULE BILL

At a meeting of the Protestant Federation, held last night in the Sons of England Hall, the following resolution was carried unanimously, the Secretary being instructed to forward a copy to Sir Edward Carson, Belfast:

Resolved, first,—That The Protestant Benevolent Federation of Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, one thousand strong, do hereby place on record its entire sympathy with the men of Ulster in their fight against the proposal to place Ireland under the dominion of the hierarchy.

Second, — That this Federation views with alarm the proposition to place in authority over Protestants those who must henceforth yield in all matters of legislation implicit obedience to the Romish priesthood.

Third, — That since the papal decree of 1907 condemning popular freedom of and freedom of thought, there can be no compromise on the part of Protestants in their active hostility to the renewed papal claim of absolute and universal authority, and,

Fourth.—That a copy of this resolution signed and sealed by the President and Secretary be forwarded to Sir Edward Carson.

Snake In Evidence On December 17th

Mr. M. O'Donnell, whose farm is on the 6th Concession of Emily, was in the city to-day and informed The Examiner of a strange incident that happened near his home on Wednesday. Mr. O'Donnell's daughter while passing along the road noticed what she thought was a green grass snake by the side of the path. In investigating she found that there were really two snakes which she despatched with a stick. The appearance of the reptiles at such a late date in the year is an unprecedented event in the neighbourhood and has caused considerable comment. Some people regard the incident as a sign of an open winter. The snakes were fully a yard long.

Dec. 4th. Nineteen below zero prevailed on the 10th.

In 1909 good sleighing ruled from Dec. 16th. and fair sleighing for a week previously.

The following year (1910), heavy snow came Nov. 28th. and sleighing was good from that date on.

1911 was much like the present year, with the difference that sleighing was fair from Nov. 17 to 23; there was none at Christmas time.

Last year snow fell on several occasions during the last week in Nov. and first week in Dec., but not sufficiently deep for sleighing, until Dec. 19th. No zero was marked.

It will thus be seen that the present year stands in a class entirely by itself. Up to the present there has not been any excuse for getting out the sleighs. This is the only year since 1896 that there has been no appearance of sleighs by this date—Dec. 19th. With the exception of last year this is also the only year in which zero has not been marked.—W. P.

Contributions for the King's Daughter's Distribution, are to be left at the Market Building on Monday.

BANQUE TAT THE CITY HALL

The young ladies of the City Hall staff on Friday evening entertained the men of the Municipal Buildings to a banquet, in the committee room. About twenty-six men sat down to a sumptuous repast. The room was prettily decorated for the occasion.

Speeches were made by His Worship Mayor Bradburn, Mr. T. A. S. Hay, Chief of Police Thompson and Fire Chief Howard.

A BUSINESS WITH A NAME THAT WILL REMAIN

Belleghem's Have Reached the Apex of 37 Years of Consistent Development—Have Withstood the Teeth of Time and the Acid Test of Public Opinion

A COMMERCIAL ENTERPRISE

It is a far cry from 1876 to 1913. A matter of thirty-seven years, encompassing the reign of three British sovereigns and the Dominion in the commercial world, of the well known firm of Belleghem's, Hunter Street. Upon this the birthday eve of one of the oldest established furniture houses in the City, there hangs a special meaning of significance. To sense the import of this significance, one has only to visit the warerooms and factory on Hunter Street, and there witness an ocular manifestation of the striking development that has marked the evolution of the firm during the past thirty-seven years.

Its growth has been steady and consistent. It has withstood the tooth of time and the acid test of public opinion, that is applied indiscriminately to all commercial enterises, and has emerged from the fray with flying colours.

In brief, Belleghem's is a store with a reputation long sustained, and to sustain. Commercial depression may be rampant, but it cannot find a vulnerable point in a business, whose product is a partial necessity and whose reputation is backed by an unblemished business relationship with the public, etxending over a period of thirty-seven years.

Warerooms and Factory.

Therefore it was not a surprise to an Examiner representative who visited the store this morning, to find it invaded with a galaxy of holiday shoppers. To have taken a comprehensive inventory would have been out of the question. Suffice to say that the sales department, which comprises a commodious three-storey building, is stocked to the roof with home and office furniture of the latest design and workmanship. The first floor is given over to an extensive array of dining and bedroom furniture, and the second floor to parlour, library and furniture specialties; while the stock on the third floor consists of bedding and reserve stock.

Immediately to the rear of the warerooms is a four storey brick factory, wherein is manufactured furniture of medium lines and special made to order goods. A section of this building is also devoted to upholstering.

The undertaking facilities connected with the business are second to none; and the funeral equipage is conceded to be the best between Toronto and Montreal. A modern up-to-date ambulance fitted with pneumatic mattresses and electric lighting is also connected with the business.

The undertaking department is in charge of Mr. D. Belleghem and his son, A. W. Belleghem, while the destiny of the sales department is guided by Mr. W. T. Belleghem, who has everything to offer in the way of intelligent and efficient service to the public.

SINGER OF HIGH STANDARD

Miss Florence Hinckle, who has been engaged by the Conservatory orchestra, for the concert in the Grand Opera House, on January 16th, has recently filled three engagements with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and is among the artists engaged by the same incomparable orchestra for the season of 1913-1914. Every sincere artist has reason to point with pride, to the privilege of singing with this orchestra, and where re-engagements follow, it is sufficient evidence that the singer measured up to the high standard of those who control the destinies of the Boston Symphony.

INVESTIGATE BEFORE GIVING TO THESE MEN

Two dark-hued men are in the city at the present time collecting funds for an orphanage in Asia Minor and among their credentials they display letters signed by local ministers.

In this connection the Gazette of Montreal says: In a letter signed by Rev. E. Scott, of the Presbyterian Record will appear a warning against two men from Asia Minor soliciting funds in Canada for an orphanage and stating that the Foreign Mission Office of the Presbyterian Church has information that proves that they are impostors.

TURNBULL'S

MR. JOHN CORKERY, JR. ADDRESSED LADIES' LITERARY OF T. A. S.

Spoke on Dr. Walsh's Book on the 13th Century at the Regular Meeting Last Night

MUSICAL PROGRAMME

The hall of St. Alphonsus' Lyceum was well filled last evening, to hear Mr. John Corkery, Junior, speak on Father Walsh's book, "The Thirteenth the Greatest of Centuries." This was undoubtedly one of the most interesting lectures that has been heard in the Lyceum during the past three years. The speaker commenced with an explanation of the title of his address. Although the age in which we live is truly a wonderful one in regard to the progress of invention and commerce, can it be called "progressive" in the true sense of the word? As one great personage has expressed it—"This is an age of locomotion, but not of progress." To many, the assertion contained in the title of Father Walsh's book will come as a surprise. They forget that the history of those times has been written from a narrow and prejudiced standpoint. "The history of the Middle Ages has been a conspiracy against the truth," so that a person desiring a knowledge of the true state of affairs in that much-maligned period must search for himself the authorities of the age.

Ruskin has said that in order to properly estimate the accomplishments of any epoch of human history a careful study of the three books must be made; the book of deeds, the book of arts, and the book of words—meaning the consideration of what it has accomplished for man, the artistic qualities to be found in the art of the period, and of what it wrote for subsequent generations.

During this century were solved many of our vexing modern problems, especially in the social order, and its people saw the foundation laid of our modern system of education, and the birth o fthe democratic spirit, in the signing of the Magna Charta. The beginning of the 13th century was the beginning of the two first universities, that of Bologna, noted for its school of law, and of Paris, noted for its school of medicine. It was not long after that the University of Oxford was founded, while all over Europe universities and preparatory schools were unceasingly set up. By a decree of the Council of Literan, in the beginning of the century, a school had to be maintained in connection with every Bishop's Church, and the Archpiscopal Cathedrals were commanded to maintain three chairs—one in philosophy, one in canon law, and one in grammar. It is a surprising but undeniable historical fact that, in proportion to the population, more students attended the universities of the 13th century than those of the present day.

This century also saw the erection of those wonderful monuments of stone, the beautiful Cathedrals, of which it has been said that they are so perfect that it would seem that the hand of the Divine Creator, Himself, had directly assisted in their construction. Modern experts admit that they are unable to equal the craftsmanship of that age—the stained glass, the wood-carving, the wonderful needlework. And it was chiefly through the workers in these arts that the Guilds were formed, through the instrumentality of which were solved some of the knotty problems confronting us in the social world at present, arising from the breach between capital and labour. These guilds were also directly responsible for the rapid spread of democracy in England, while in France, Spain and Germany the thirteenth century saw the beginning of a representative parliament for the people.

In art, this period produced Giotto, one of the greatest of the old masters, in poetry, the Italian, Dante, and we are indebted to it for the production of the great Latin hymns, those sublimely elegant religious poems whose glory will never be extinguished, and the development of the Gregorian plain chant.

In literature, we have the Arthur legends, forming a subject for the ballad and epic poets—as Mallory, in the 15th, Spenser, in the 16th, and Tennyson, in the 19th century.

During this period we have the establishment of circulating libraries, and of City Hospitals. The foundations of three hospitals which are still in existence were then laid, that of the Holy Spirit, in Rome, and of St. Bartholomews and St. Thomas, in London.

The speaker closed his address with a quotation from Macaulay, in speaking of the thirteenth century: "It is there that we must seek for the origin of our freedom, our prosperity, and our glory. Then it was that the great English people was formed....then first appeared with distinctness that constitution,.... which, in spite of its many defects, deserves to be regarded as the best under which any great society has ever existed during many ages."

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Corkery and Rev. Father Phelan rose to congratulate both the speaker and the Ladies' Literary Society.

Rev. Dean Kelly of Trout Creek, who was present, spoke encouragingly of the good work to be done by the Society, and the laudable ambition of the rising generation for a higher education.

Miss May Manel presided at the meeting and the musical programme was as follows:

Vocal solo—Mr. Jos. Minicolo.
Fairy drill by Convent pupils.
Vocal solo—Miss Marguerite Menel.
Dialogue—Miss Fanny Doris and Miss Geraldine McCollum.
Accompanists — Miss L. Hurley, Miss Marion Gorman, Miss Grant.

SOME CIVIC ITEMS AND A FEW OTHERS

"'Dwams and boogles, twains and days' is all I hear these days," said the father of a three-year-old boy this morning. And the smile on his face looked real.

Some pipes emit such a vile reek that to bann them from the street cars would not seem too severe to forbid all smoking in vestibules.

Having discovered that a workman's pick probably put the hide in Hydro comes the question, after a glance at that $600,000, who put the high in the said Hydro?

At night you can tell the time on the west face of the Market clock from Rubidge Street. This illumination is thrown in with the Hydro lights for good measure.

JURY'S VERDICT GAVE $105 TO MAN WHO BOUGHT HORSE

Examiner Special:

COBOURG, Dec. 20.—After being out four hours the jury in the Quinn—Curle case brought in a verdict giving Mr. Quinn $105 with full costs. The plaintiff, Quinn, bought a mare last spring from Curle, who resides near Campbellford. After using it about two weeks someone told him there was something wrong with the animal's wind. Plaintiff complained to Curle and wanted him to buy it back. Defendant would not hear of this, but offered to give him $15 as "luck" money. It was known that the horse had been worked every day and, at night, was often driven to Campbellford from the Quinn place, and back, a distance of twenty miles. On the canal work, this summer it earned some $200. Dr. Johnston of Peterborough, who examined the horse, declared her sound. The hearing opened on Dec. 12th and was concluded Thursday night. The jury was out four hours and were divided 10 to 2, but in civic cases, this carried. Six veterinary surgeons were called, three for each side, and a total of twenty-three witnesses were heard.

The horse was sold for $175 of which $160 was paid. Mr. Quinn's suit was for $110.00 and he got judgment for this amount minus the $5 balance making a net amount of $105 with costs.

F. M. Field, of Cobourb, and D. J. Lynch, of Campbellford, appeared for Quinn, and Mr. D. O'Connell, of Peterborough, and Mr. Geo. A. Payne, of Campbellford, for Curle.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

ENGLISH SOCCER LEAGUE RIVALS MEET TO-DAY

Many Interesting Games in the Leagues--Rangers for Dundee---Football Transfers Are Rife--Clubs Strengthen Their Forces.

Under the auspices of the English Football League first division no game schedule for to-day stands out so prominently as Blackburn Rovers versus Manchester United. These clubs are the present leaders and runners-up respectively, and one of the greatest contests of the season is sure to be seen. If the Rovers win they will balance that game in arrears which the United have over them. If United win they will become leaders and if the game is tied the positions will remain unchanged. It will be a game of games and the spectators will have the opportunity of comparing the respective abilities of Meredith and Simpson, the two greatest right-wingers of the day. I have a notion that Blackburn with advantage of home territory will win the day. It is only a notion however, not a confident expression of opinion.

About The Others.

Looking over the list of the other games in the first division I pick out the following to come out on top. Bradford City, Middlesboro', Sheffield United, Sunderland, Tottenham and West Bromwich. It will be observed that I select all the home teams. In two cases I may be wrong, these being Sunderland v. Oldham, and West Bromwich v. Oldham Wanderers. These will provide exciting struggles. Newcastle may also come away with one of their spurts and beat Derby.

The Second Division.

I don't look for any change being necessary in the compilation of the second division table to-night so far as the leadership is concerned. Bradford and Notts County, although both away from home, should secure the points, and in every other case except Grimsby Town v. Clapton the home team should win.

Southern League.

In the division there is no game which could be called a tit-bit. Swindon, the leaders, may be regarded as safe winners, with Cardiff as their guests and the same may be said of Crystal Palace as the hosts of Gillingham. Southend may beat Southampton and Exeter City may get home first at Bristol but in the other games the points are likely to remain at home.

For Bonnie Dundee.

In Scotland the piece de resistance is Dundee v. Rangers, and here is sure to be seen a terrific struggle for the points. The champions cannot afford to lose many more games, this side of the new year, for not only would it affect their chances of retaining the championship, but it would detrimentally effect the great New Year's attraction wtih Celtic on New Year's Day. The Dundonians, however, always put on their best fight when class talent visits Den's Park and Bill Hogg is sure to let himself out against his old chums I look for the game being drawn.

CROSSED THE ICE.

Mr. Dan. Whetung, Jr., made the trip across the ice of Chemong Lake safely yesterday, the first passage of the season. Last year the first crossing took place on December 16th, and two years ago on Nov. 25th.

O. H. A. INVESTIGATING A NUMBER OF CLUBS

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—At the special meeting of the O.H.A. sub-committee last night several matters of importance were dealt with. The meeting did not adjourn until an early hour this morning.

The matter of charges preferred by E. J. Livingstone against the Parkdale Canoe Club hockey team in which Livingstone said that he could prove professionalism, was dealt with briefly. The sub-committee did not consider Livingstone's retraction of the charges sufficiently comprehensive. He was suspended and refused any concteion with the O.H.A. in any capacity until such time as he can make good his charges against the Parkdale club or apologizes to that organization.

The investigation into the affairs of the Toronto Rowing Club was not concluded.

Two players of the Waterloo junior team, Wesselch and Uffelmann, were reinstated. The entire team was suspended last season on account of some of their number being over age.

A player named J. L. Schultz, who is a railroad man and has no permanent residence, asked for a ruling as to where he should play this season. Permission was given him to play with the Goderich team and no other.

Prout, Farlow, Dorr, Imbleau and Grannary of the Sarnia Intermediates, will be asked to attend the next meeting of the sub-committee before they will be given certificates.

Another meeting of the sub-committee will be held next week.

Junior City Hockey League Bars Men Who Played O.H.A. Last Year

A meeting of the Junior City Hockey League executive was held last night in the Examiner Office. Mr. M. J. Maher presided. The teams were represented as follows: Alerts, Elmer Galvin; Boston Exploits, Mr. W. Wryde; Y.M.C.A., Walter Flowers; Wanderers, T. H. Stewart.

The League placed the bann on those who have played in the O.H.A. previous to this season; Wednesday nights were decided upon for the games; twelve certificates were issued to each club. The boys are displaying a fine spirit and it is sincerely hoped that this will be carried into the games. The aim of the executive is to encourage clean hockey, and it is with this intention the league will appeal to the old lovers of the game who realize that the Junior League prepares the boys of to-day for the senior games of a few years hence. The rules drawn up are as follows:

1. Players in this league must not have attained their twentieth birthday before January 1st of the year in which they intend to play. Every player must file with the Secretary of the League an official document issued by the Registrar-General's Department, or a local Registrar, or an extract from a church baptismal record that the said player had not attained his 20th birthday on the first day of January of the year in which he intends to play, and no certificate shall be issued to any player without such declaration.

2. No player shall take part in any league game until the refere has been furnished with a list of the players and has been shown their certificates.

3. No club shall be allowed to take out more than twelve certificates.

4. No player shall take part in any league game unless he has been a resident of Peterborough continuously from the fifteenth of December, 1913.

5. No player who has played in an O.H.A. game or games previous to the present 1913-14 season shall be eligible in this league.

6. The certificates of all players must be approved by the president and secretary of the league before any game in which they play.

7. Any club playing a player who is not eligible shall forfeit the game or games in which he has played.

8. Each certificate must be signed by the player, the president and secretary of his club, and the president and secretary of the league.

9. Each club shall place in the hands of the secretary not later than seven days before the first scheduled game a sum sufficient to pay its share of the cost of renting the rink for the season, this money to be forfeited to the league in the event of the club dropping out after the first game.

10. Protests must be in writing, must be in the hands of the Secretary of the league within twenty-four hours of the advertised time of the match protested, and must be accompanied by a deposit of $5, which sum shall be forfeited to the league should the executive disallow the protest. The defending club shall within twenty-four hours of being notified by the league secretary of the protest deposit a like sum of $5, which shall be forfeited in the event of the protest being decided against them.

11. Referees, shall be appointed by the league secretary in cases where the competing teams cannot agree upon officials. The secretary must be notified at least 48 hours before the game in question where the clubs fail to agree.

12. The officers of this league shall consist of Patrons and Patronesses, Hon.-President. President, a Vice-President, a Secretary-Treasurer and an Executive composed of one member from each club.

13. The secretary-treasurer shall take charge of all funds, shall look after the taking of gates and shall hold the receipts in trust to be divided after expenses are paid among the league teams.

14. No member of the executive shall be allowed to vote upon a protest in which his club is directly or indirectly concerned.

CANADIAN CITIES USE FORDS

The Ford is becoming the universal car for Canadian municipality uses. Cities and towns throughout Canada are rapidly buying Fords for the use of their various departments. The business transacted to-day by a city department demands the use of a motor car of some sort, and the economy, efficiency and ease of running a Ford are well recognized by many Canadian municipalities.

In September, six new Fords were added to the list of cars owned by the City of Toronto. Four for the Works Department; one for the fire and one for the architectural departments. This makes a total of twenty-seven Fords now owned and operated by the deparuments of the City. Winnipeg has a total of six Fords, having bought two early in October—one for its engineering and one for its heat, light and power department. There are three Fords in the service of the Government Telephone Service in Manitoba. Vancouver has five Fords. The provincial government has recently purchased a roadster for the superintendent of the prison farm at Burnaby, B. C. London has ordered one for the Chief of her Fire Department, and Regina recently ordered six cars for immediate delivery. Several other Canadian cities have Fords running daily in the work of their various departments.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

Monday will likely see further short covering in the active stock leaders. The general list shows a very heavily sold condition, still the shorts are reported to be covering in fear of favourable news from Washington, the nature of which does not crystalize into one central fact as yet. It is reported that James Speyer, who recently had an interview with President Wilson, was given assurance that led to believe that the Inter State Commerce Commission will permit eastern roads to advance freight rates. This information has been used by the speculative forces to induce the short interests to trade in the railroad list. The buying of U. P., Rdg., U. S., S. P., and G. Q. is of the best character, and they may be put higher. C.P.R. has regained its strength and everything points to higher prices this coming week.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Adds Healthful Qualities to the Food

Prof. Prescott, of the University of Michigan, explains why Royal Baking Powder adds healthful qualities to the food.

Testifying before the Pure Food Committee of Congress, the Professor stated that fruit acids were excellent articles of food and that of these cream of tartar, the acid of grapes, held rank with the highest both in itself and its effect in the process of leavening and baking. He regarded the results from cream of tartar baking powder as favorable to health. Scientists and hygienists are in accord with this opinion.

Royal is the only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar.

LABOUR CONDITIONS.

LONDON, Dec. 20.Syndicalism has suffered marked defeats this week. The Leeds strike is now moribund. Dublin labour is seeking peace, the railway unrest has been momentarily curbed by the men's leaders; the Postal discontent is passing until after Christmas. The London police unrest, however, which has been given publicity by the warning of the Police Commissioners that the men will be liable to dismissal if they join the newly-formed police union, may give trouble. The policemen recomplain that their work has been enormously increased in recent years, especially through suffragette activities. This week the police of over fifteen years' service were granted half a crown a week increase in pay. This has only deepened the discontent among the younger men.

Free Pats for Dolly to Every Little Gir

We intended to answer all the letters that the little girls sent telling us what they wanted Santa to bring to them on Christmas. De did answer a large number of them, but we found that the letters were coming in so fast and so numerously that it would be impossible to answer them all.

However, we invite every little g'rl to come to TOY LAND with their mother and we will give to every little girl a doll's pattern free.

Tell all your litle friends, we have a pattern here for every little girl in and around Peterborough.

THERE WILL BE NO CHARGE

Two Letters Picked at Random to SANTA

Dear Santa Claus:—

It is near Christmas and if I write to ask you perhaps you will bring me a nice doll for a present. Mr. Elliott is going to give me a pattern of a nice dress to make for her and in the picture it looks very nice and if I can make one like it I shall be very pleased. I like making my dollie's clothes. I have got a little sister who would like one too. Good-bye Father Christmas.

From Your Loving,
Little Friend.

Dear Santa Claus:—

I am a little girl, seven years old. I wish you would come to see me for you're such a jolly old fellow.

I want a great many things for Christmas. Are you coming in a sleigh with reindeers? If you come down our chimney we won't put any fire on.

Dear Santa, how do you get down the little chimney when you are so fat?

One thing I do want is a leather doll carriage. Of course I want candies and nuts.

Are you very rich Santa? You must be to give so many little girls and boys toys.

Good-bye Dear Santa.

WOULD LIKE TO HAVE THE PUBLIC'S OPINION

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Editor,—Would you please give me a small space of your valuable paper, as I would like the opinion of good, sensible people of Peterborough. There is a home in Peterborough that has no man to support it, with a family of four. Now there are five young men out of work, laid off from work. These young men are good, honest and respectable and have tried in vain to get work, and seeing things very dark they put their little money together and decided to sell fish to pay their board and keep the householder out of debt. On Dec. 18th they were stopped making their bread by the storekeeers of the town complaining to the police, demanding them to procure a license at $40 each. I think this is out of reason, and as these young men go from door to door, the conditions of homes are most terrible to see with the bread winners out off work. Here are these men, willing to work and are not allowed. This is a Christian country with Christian people in it, and we had better take heed, for God's hand is not short. He can take away as well as give.

Live and Let Live.

It is a noted fact that many women frequently "lose their head." Such being the case, why do they insist in buying and wearing twenty dollar hats?

LOST GIRL IS FOUND

Finnish Domestic Dies Shortly After Being Discovered

ABDUCTED BY SLAVERS?

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—Unconscious from hunger and exposure, and almost lifeless, Anne Yakinson, the Finnish girl who has been missing from her place of employment at Annesley Hall, Victoria College, for three weeks, was found by John Dew near a corn stook in his field at the southwest corner of Forest Hill road and Eglinton avenue yesterday morning about 11 o'clock. The girl died in Mr. Dew's home a few minutes after she had been taken in.

Attracted to the spot by the moans of the dying girl, Mr. Dew at first attempted to elicit from her some information as to how she got there; failing in this he carried her to his home, summoned Dr. Bond of Yonge street, but in spite of all the restoratives administered, she died before the arrival of the doctor. Near where she was lying on the ground was found her hat, coat and gloves, lying in a pile as if they had been thrown there.

The deepest mystery surrounds the disappearance of the girl. Three weeks ago, in company with Mardta Diunqvist, a Finnish domestic of 67 Howland street, she visited a picture show, after which the girls parted at the corner of Spadina and Bloor. Since that time Miss Yakinson has not been seen, although a reward of $500 was offered for her discovery.

In the minds of the police officials there is no doubt but what she was abducted by unknown persons and kept somewhere for the past three weeks.

James Lindala, a prominent Finnish Torontonian, who has been active in the search, declares she has undoubtedly been a victom of white slavery, and believes the girl has been carried to the field where she was found during Monday night. The fact of her hat and coat and gloves being found in a pile beside her, he says, proved this conclusively.

A strong smell of stale beer from the clothes on the body lends additional weight to Mr. Lindala's statement. According to Dr. Bond, who examined the body, the smell of stale beer would last for weeks. The body was unmarked, except for the face, which was badly scratched. Dr. Bond's opinion as to the cause of death last night was that she had died from starvation and the night's exposure in her weaken d condition.

WENT THROUGH ICE.

Two Men Drowned In Rideau Canal Going for Supplies.

KINGSTON, Dec. 22.—Pushing a trap boat across thin ice on the Rideau Canal near Cushendall, eight miles from Kingston, cost the lives yesterday afternoon of two men, Geo. Anderson, aged 45, and Russell Weir, aged 21, son of John Weir, both living at Cushendall. Charles Gray, aged 25, also of Cushendall, had a very narrow escape. Anderson's body has been recovered and search is being continued for that of Weir.

The three men were pushing the boat across the canal from Cushendall with some supplies when the accident occurred. On starting on the ice appeared quite solid, but when they got half way across its suddenly gave way and the three men went into the water. Gray, a good swimmer, made a gallant but ineffectual attempt to save the other two men and was exhausted when he reached shore.

Anderson was married and is survived by a widow, but no family. Weir was unmarried.

The accident occurred directly in front of Anderson's home.

Japanese Arms For Mexico.

BOUND IN CELLAR

Frank L. Barrett, of Guelph, is Victim of a Robbery

SAFE DOOR FOUND OPEN

GUELPH, Dec. 22.—Tied hand and foot and effectively gagged, F. L. Barrett, president of the Barrett Dairy Co., Carden street, was found on Saturday afternoon about 4.45 in an unconscious condition, lying on the floor of the toilet room of the dairy. He had been last seen at 11.30 on Friday night, and although the safe in the front office was found open, and a dinged-in hat was picked up nearby, no suspicions of foul play were aroused in the minds of the company's drivers when they came for their loads in the early morning. Mr. Barrett is frequently out of the city on business, so that his absence caused no particular anxiety.

So far as can be ascertained he was placing some papers in the safe, when he was felled by an unknown assailant and rendered unconscious. He has no idea of the identity of the man or men who attacked him.

He is a heavy man, and the distance from the point of the assault to the inner section of the cellar where he was first carried is considerable, therefore, it is practically certain that there must have been more than one assailant. It appears that he recovered consciousness some time after being attacked, but was unable to break the fastenings which securely bound his arms behind his back, and his legs. He struggled until he again became unconscious. Again recovering he succeeded in crawling out of the inner recess of the cellar to the boiler room, where he was found by Leonard Warrington, an employe of the dairy, who had gone into the cellar to fire up. The police were notified, a doctor was summoned, and Barrett, who had again lost consciousness, was removed to the hospital. Yesterday morning he regained consciousness, and is reported to be doing well. A few dollars appears to be all that is missing from the premises.

VETERAN EDITOR DIES.

John S. Sidney of Welland Had Tribune For Over 50 Years.

WELLAND, Dec. 22.—John S. Sidney, for nearly half a century editor and proprietor of The Welland Tribune, died at his home, Maple avenue, Saturday night shortly before 11 o'clock. He had been ailing for the past six months.

Mr. Sidney was perhaps the best known man in Welland County. He was born in Stamford in 1844 and from Stratford moved with his parents to Thorold, where he was educated in the public and high schools. In 1864 he came to Welland, and in 1865, in partnership with Albert H. Patterson, purchased The Welland Tribune. He later took full possession, which was continued up to the time of his death.

TRADES AND LABOUR NOTES

Notes by the Official Scribe

The meeting this week was mainly interested in listening to Representative J. J. Hartley as he outlined his platform for the forthcoming Mayoralty contest.

In introducing the speaker, President Moore deplored the fact that Mr. Hartley had been so tardy in declaring his candidature. The Council had been waiting for a favourable reply for the last two weeks, and thus valuable time had been wasted. If the Chief Magistrate's chair was to be occupied next term by a labour representative, then the organized workers of the City must take off their coats at once, so to speak, and get busy.

Representative J. J. Hartley, of the Bricklayers' and Masons' local, rose and was given a rousing welcome. The delay, he admitted, was regrettable, but he had thoroughly turned the matter over and over, and much careful thought had culminated in the decision published in the local press. These were not a lot of promises, but such as were stated he would stand by. He had a record of 40 years as a labour man; he knew the City every inch, as he had served seven years as assessor; he had always paid the highes wages, giving men over the recognized scale, acknowledging that the best paid men were the cheapest, and he could not name one discontented employee while he had been contracting around this City. The speaker said that it was the persistent demands of labour men and their promised staunch support that had caused his decision. Labour should be represented in the local Council. Too long have the reins of government been left in the hands of professional men. The workers of Peterborough have a fine chance of asserting themselves and showing what can be accomplished by a little organized effort. Labour representatives in local Councils, the Provincial and Dominion Houses should mark the oncoming tide of a ruling democracy which must ultimately triumph in its endeavours to remedy the hideous social differences now existing. Mr. Hartley concluded by asking for criticism, comment and questionings from the delegates, avowing his determination to stay right with the proposition.

Delegates then testified to the high esteem and complete confidence they had of the Mayoralty candidate. There is no reason why Peterborough's labour representative should be turned down. The only cause can be the workers of the City not recognizing their privilege, and to educate them, workers would start in and not quit till 5 p.m. on January 5th.

SCREAMED WITH THE TERRIBLE PAIN

"Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured Distressing Kidney Trouble.

ST. THOMAS, ONT., April 1st, 1913.

"In 1911, I was laid up with Kidney Trouble and not able to get out of my chair. Had tried many kidney remedies without satisfactory results. The pain was excruciating and my screams could be heard on the street. One day a friend from Ottawa came to see me, and when she found me in such poor health, said she would send me a sample of "Fruit-a-tives", which he did and I commenced taking them. The results were so apparent with the first few doses that I continued to take "Fruit-a-tives" and was completely restored to my normal state of health. I would strongly advise anyone suffering with Kidney Trouble to take "Fruit-a-tives" and cure themselves" CHARLES CALVERART.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Mr. Gryce, who had evidently expected a different result from his stratagem, hesitated for a moment, during which I felt that he read her through and through; then he responded lightly:

"I made a mistake, eh? Oh, possibly. Look in the other carriage, my child."

With an unaffected air of confidence she turned to do so, and I turned to watch her, for I began to understand the "scheme" at which I was assisting, and foresaw that the emotion she had failed to betray at the door of the first carriage might not necessarily be lacking on the opening of the second.

I was all the more assured of this from the fact that Miss Althorpe's stately figure was very plainly to be seen at that moment, not in the coach Miss Oliver was approaching, but in an elegant victoria just turning the corner.

My expectations were realized; for no sooner had the poor girl swung open the door of the second hack, than her whole body succumbed to a shock so great that I expected to see her fall in a heap on the pavement. But she steadied herself up with a determined effort, and with a sudden movement full of subdued fury, jumped into the carriage and violently shut the door just as the first carriage drove off to give place to Miss Althorpe's turn-out.

"Humph!" sprang from Mr. Gryce's lips in a tone so full of varied emotions that it was with difficulty I refrained from rushing down the stoop to see for myself who was the occupant of the coach into which my late patient had so passionately precipitated herself. But the sight of Miss Althorpe being helped to the ground by her attendant lover, recalled me so suddenly to my own anomalous position on her stoop, that I let my first impulse pass and concerned myself instead with the formation of those apologies I thought necessary to the occasion. But those apologies were never uttered. Mr. Gryce, with the infinite tact he displays in all serious emergencies, came to my rescue, and so distracted Miss Althorpe's attention that she failed to observe that she had interrupted a situation of no small moment.

Meanwhile the coach containing Miss Oliver had, at a signal from the wary detective, drawn off in the wake of the first one, and I had the doubtful satisfaction of seeing them both roll down the street without my having penetrated the secret of either.

A glance from Mr. Stone, who had followed Miss Althorpe up the stoop, interrupted Mr. Gryce's flow of eloquence, and a few minutes later I found myself making those adieux which I had hoped to avoid by departing in Miss Althorpe's absence. Another instant and I was hastening down the street in the direction taken by the two carriages, one of which had paused at the corner a few rods off.

But, spry as I am for one of my settled habits and sedate character, I found myself passed by Mr. Gryce; and when I would have accelerated my steps, he darted forward quite few feet from the curb-stone. The planation or any acknowledgment of the mutual understanding which certainly existed between us, leaped into the carriage I was endeavouring to reach, and was driven away. But not before I caught a glimpse of Miss Oliver's grey dress inside.

Determined not to be baffled by this man, I turned about and followed the other carriage. It was approaching a crowded part of the avenue, and in a few minutes I had the gratification of seeing it come to a standstill only a which she was so grievously agitated, opportunity thus afforded me of satisfying my curiosity was not to be slighted. Without pausing to consider consequences or to question the propriety of my conduct, I stepped boldly up in front of its half-lowered window and looked in. There was but one person inside, and that person was Franklin Van Burnam.

What was I to conclude from this? That the occupant of the other carriage was Howard, and that Mr. Gryce now knew with which of the two brothers Miss Oliver's memories were associated.

BOOK IV.

THE END OF A GREAT MYSTERY.

XXXIV.

The Result.

I was as much surprised at this result of Mr. Gryce's scheme as he was, and possibly I was more chagrined. But I shall not enter into my feelings on the subject, or weary you any further with my conjectures. You will be much more interested, I know, in learning what occurred to Mr. Gryce upon entering the carriage holding Miss Oliver.

He had expected, from the intense emotion she displayed at the sight of Howard Van Burnam (for I was not mistaken as to the identity of the person occupying the carriage with her), to find her flushed with the passions incident upon this meeting, and her companion in a condition of mind which would make it no longer possible for him to deny his connection with this woman and his consequently guilty complicity in a murder to which both were linked by so many incriminating circumstances.

But for all his experience, the detective was disappointed in this expectation, as he had been in so many others connected with this case. There was nothing in Miss Oliver's attitude to indicate that she had unburdened herself of any of the emotions with which she was so grievously abitated, nor was there on Mr. Van Burnam's part any deeper manifestation of feeling than a slight glow on his cheek, and even that disappeared under the detective's scrutiny, leaving him as composed and imperturbable as he had been in his memorable inquisition before the Coroner.

Disappointed, and yet in a measure exhilarated by this sudden check in plans he had thought too well laid for failure, Mr. Gryce surveyed the young girl more carefully, and saw that he had not been mistaken in regard to the force or extent of the feelings which had driven her into Mr. Van Burnam's presence; and turning back to that gentleman, was about to give utterance to some very pertinent remarks, when he was forestalled by Mr. Van Burnam inquiring, in his old calm way, which nothing seemed able to disturb:

"Who is this crazy girl you have forced upon me? If I had known I was to be subjected to such companionship I should not have regarded my outing so favourably."

Mr. Gryce, who never allowed himself to be surprised by anything a suspected criminal might do or say surveyed him quietly for a moment, then turned towards Miss Oliver.

"You hear what this gentleman calls you?" said he.

Her face was hidden by her hands, but she dropped them as the detective addressed her, showing a countenance so distorted by passion that it stopped the current of his thoughts, and made him question whether the epithet bestowed upon her by their somewhat callous companion was entirely unjustified. But soon the something else which was in her face restored his confidence in her sanity, and he saw that while her reason might be shaken it was not yet dethroned, and that he had good cause to expect sooner or later some action from the woman whose misery could wear an aspect of such desperate resolution.

That he was not the only one affected by the force and desperate character of her glance became presently apparent, for Mr. Van Burnam, with a more kindly tone than he had previously used, observed quietly:

"I see the lady is suffering. I beg pardon for my inconsiderate words. I have no wish to insult the unhappy."

Never was Mr. Gryce so nonplussed. There was a mingled courtesy and composure in the speaker's manner which was as far removed as possible from that strained effort at self-possession which marks suppressed passion or secret fear; while in the vacant look with which she met these words there was neither anger nor scorn nor indeed any of the passions one would expect to see there. The detective consequently did not force the situation, but only watched her more and more attentively till her eyes fell and she crouched away from them both. Then he said:

"You can name this gentleman, can you not, Miss Oliver, even if he does not choose to recognize you?"

But her answer, if she made one, was inaudible, and the sole result which Mr. Gryce obtained from this venture was a quick look from Mr. Van Burnam and the following uncompromising words from his lips:

"If you think this young girl knows me, or that I know her, you are greatly mistaken. She is as much of a stranger to me as I am to her, and I take this opportunity of saying so. I hope my liberty and good name are not to be made dependent upon the word of a miserable waif like this."

"Your liberty and your good name will depend upon your innocence," retorted Mr. Gryce, and said no more, feeling himself at a disadvantage before the imperturbability of this man and the silent, non-accusing attitude of this woman, from the shock of whose passions he had anticipated so much and obtained so little.

Meantime they were moving rapidly towards Police Headquarters, and fearing that the sight of that place might alarm Miss Oliver more than was well for her, he strove again to rouse her by a kindly word or so. But it was useless. She evidently tried to pay attention and follow the words he used, but her thoughts were too busy over the one great subject that engrossed her.

"A bad case!" murmured Mr. Van Burnam, and with the phrase seemed to dismiss all thought of her.

"A bad case!" echoed Mr. Gryce, "but," seeing how fast the look of resolution was replacing her previous aspect of frenzy, "one that will do mischief yet to the man who has deceived her."

The stopping of the carriage roused her. Looking up, she spoke for the first time.

"I want a police officer," she said.

Mr. Gryce, with all his assurance restored, leaped to the ground and held out his hand.

"I will take you into the presence of one, said he; and she, without a glance at Mr. Van Burnam, whose knee she brushed in passing, leaped to the ground, and turned her face towards Police Headquarters.

A Daring Escape.

General de Negrier was one of the French officers who succeeded in escaping from German custody in 1870. He was in Metz—and in hospital—at the time of the capitulation, but instead of constituting himself a prisoner he put on his uniform, mounted his horse and rode off as an independent gentleman. Before long he was stopped by a sentinel who demanded his papers and, as he had no papers, he handed up his ticket of admission to the hospital. While the German was slowly spelling it out Negrier shot him through the head and galloped off, crossing the Belgian frontier, and recrossing it, after a rest, to take part in the operations of Faidherbe's army of the north. It is not surprising that so resourceful a soldier got quick promotion and was successively the youngest colonel, the youngest general of brigade and the youngest general of division in the French army.—Westminster Gazette.

Care of the Sickroom.

In taking care of an invalid it is a good idea to change the furniture around a little as one becomes so tired of the same furnishings in the same places. Be sure to coax all the sunshine in the room and allow fresh air to pass through often. Keep a patient's room tidy. Change your costume often just to make a little variety. Do not let bottles, half filled glasses, spoons, stand around; they may seem trifles to you who can get about, but are sometimes unendurable to one who is nervous. Not of small importance is the tray. Always have a clean cover—paper napkins are nice for the purpose. Use your best china. Serve hot things hot and cold things cold, not warm.—New York Sun.

Britain and Conscription.

Although few people are aware of the fact, conscription has been part of the British constitution for 700 or 800 years. The militia law states that every Englishman between the ages of eighteen and thirty is liable to be called upon for military service and that each county must furnish a contingent in proportion to its population. At the time of the Napoleonic wars this law was actually applied, but since then it has fallen into disuse, without, however, being repealed. Every year since 1829 parliament has solemnly gone through the form of suspending for one year this ancient conscription by ballot.—Pearson's Weekly.

Infallible.

The druggist was becoming wearied by a shopkeeper, who, with no intention to buy, kept asking questions, examining various articles, pricing them and demanding the manner of their use. Finally she picked up a bottle.

"Is this pest exterminator reliable?" she asked. "How is it applied?"

"You take a tablespoonful every half hour, ma'am," the druggist replied with more than an ounce of satisfaction, and the woman asked no more questions.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Some of the brightest, most piquant faces we ever beheld were covered with freckles. GOD OUR PATTERN IN GIVING GIFTS

Every Good and Perfect Gift Comes From Above.

THE BIRTH AT BETHLEHEM

The Greatest Gift of God to Man—The Pleasure of Giving—God the Great Exemplar—He Giveth All Things Richly to Be Enjoyed—Every Good and Every Perfect Gift—Gifts to Angels—Gifts to Men—Gifts to the Saints—Gift to Sinners—All Should Imitate Him—Precious Gifts Which All May Lavishly Receive.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Louisville, Ky., December 21. — Of the two discourses which Pastor Russell gave here to-day we are reporting the one from the text, "Every good and every perfect gift is from Above, and cometh down from the Father of Lights, in whom is no variableness nor shadow of turning." (James 1:17.) He said:

Christmas is a delightful season in many respects. Admitting the claim that it is the date of the Annunciation, and that our Lord's birth was nine months later, in October, it matters not. It is a delightful custom that draws the attention of the whole world to the birth at Bethlehem, and memorializes to men the great Gift of God on our behalf. We rejoice in it, even though the Higher Critics have wrought such destruction of faith in Christendom that to many the day and the events it commemorates have lost their meaning. The custom of giving little tokens of remembrance and esteem is still a blessing in the world. To the extent that we enter into it heartily, we are exercising a godlike quality. God is the great Giver, from whom cometh every good gift and every perfect gift.

Let us begin with some of the common things that God has given all men richly to enjoy. How delightfully adapted to our needs is the air we breathe! How it carries life and refreshment to our lungs and to every part of our bodies! Think of the great boon of water—refreshing, exhilarating, absolutely a necessity to our habits and our life. Take the sunshine and the golden grandeur in which it clothes the earth, and the life and vigor which it imparts—not only to our bodies and minds, but to all nature.

Even in the matter of colors God is gracious to us. The predominating colors are well adapted to our sight, and restful to the eye. The variegated colors of the flowers brighten the landscape, refreshing and pleasing us. Not only so, but the infinite variety of of these flowers in size and shape is wonderful. Even the storm clouds are beautiful. The Creator, who gave us the organs appreciative of shape, beauty and color, provided us also gratification of these senses. Additionally, He gave us the sense of smell, and then provided in all nature wonderful varieties of odors to gratify us. Do not all these gifts come from the Father of Mercies?

Time would fail us to examine these common blessings which God has given all men richly to enjoy—not only His consecrated saints, but every creature. We can readily see that a grand provision was made for the race it its original perfection. All these things are blessings to mankind, notwithstanding our fallen condition, notwithstanding our weaknesses of mind and body which hinder us from proper conception, appreciation and use of these. When we remember that the sick lose their appetite and fail in all their powers of appreciation, and when we remember that our entire race is sin-sick, we may well wonder how much more a perfect man might have enjoyed the various blessings which are still precious to us.

God has given gifts. They are on every hand, and may be richly enjoyed or not richly enjoyed. But as the majority of people swallow their food without richly enjoying its flavor, so the majority receive and use God's favors in a stupid, unappreciative manner, and do not richly enjoy—indeed are unconscious of the blessings that they have. What is the matter? The reply of the Bible is that we have the wrong spirit. But where did they get the wrong spirit? The Bible answers that sin vitiates every good quality of mind and of body.

The world, through depravity, through losing its relationship with God, has lost the sense of appreciation of many of God's gifts. Mankind have them, and use them, but do not enjoy them. Consequently they are unhappy, unholy, unthankful. Alas, poor world! It is rushing madly hither and thither, seeking pleasure, seeking joy, seeking happiness, but finding discontent, disappointment.

Only one class of people are really able to highly enjoy Heaven's gifts. These have passed through a certain mental experience which is for them transforming all of life's affairs. They have caught a glimpse of the Almighty Father, and have learned that all these gifts and blessings of nature are of His Wisdom and His bestowing. More than this, before their eyes were opened to see deeply and clearly, their hearts were regenerated. They had given their hearts to the Lord, and He had given them new hearts. With these new hearts, new minds, transformed wills, old things have become new. They open their eyes upon the world and the fulness thereof; and recognizing the relationship between these and the Heavenly Father, their hearts are warmed and enlightened. The spirit of love and appreciation is shed abroad.

The Apostle exclaimed, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable Gift!" He refers to the Gift of God's dear Son to be man's Redeemer—to pay the price, the penalty, of sin—the death penalty on our behalf. Ah, yes! that is an unspeakable Gift, far beyond anything that could be asked or imagined. The death sentence passed upon Adam by the Supreme Court of the Universe could not be revoked, and that sentence included all of his posterity; for we were flesh of his flesh, bone of his bone. If an unblemished human life could be substituted for his, the majesty of the Divine Law could stand, and he and all of his race might be granted a fresh trial for life everlasting or death everlasting. But no such perfect man was in the world. And had there been such a one, who knows that he would have been willing to sacrifice his life for a race?

The will of the Redeemer was not ignored. He was not sacrificed. On the contrary, the Scriptures make very clear that the Father presented His Plan for the approval of the Son, and attached to the proposition exceeding great and precious promises, and that the Son willingly and joyfully co-operated in the Plan. As we read, "For the joy that was set before Him, He endured the cross, despising the shame, and is (now, as a reward) set down at the right hand of the Throne of God"—awaiting the still further glories and honors of His Millennial Kingdom and of eternity.

God's time has not yet come for giving the gifts of the Redeemer's sacrifice to the world. The distribution to the world of mankind of those blessings is held in abeyance, waiting for the glorious Thousand-Year Day—earth's Jubilee. Meantime God has been preparing for a special class of humanity other gifts, the richness and value of which "eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man."

God has a right to give different gifts to His different creatures. He has given to the angels the gifts, blessings, which cause their everlasting happiness; and now He is selecting from amongst men by various trials, tests, a very special class—a saintly class, of all nations and denominations. While He calls all perfect intelligent beings (angelic and human) "sons of God," He purposes that the saintly ones now being selected shall be His sons on a still higher plane, to which Jesus has been exalted as a reward for His obedience—"far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named."

To such of these as respond to the drawings and leadings and tests, God is giving special gifts at the present time—not earthly gifts, tangible and seen of men, but spiritual gifts—new hearts of appreciation, new eyes of understanding, new ears of comprehension, new powers of spiritual enjoyment. To them "old things are passed away, and all things have become new."—2 Corinthians 5:17.

Give without hoping for gifts in return—every gift at this season should be a love token. We value the gift not so much for its monetary worth as because of the love and fellowship of which it is a reminder. It is eminently proper that friends and parents should prepare gifts for others in secret, and keep them until the opportune time for presentation. In all this they are merely copying the Heavenly Father, who is thus preparing for the world the wonderful gifts of the Messianic Kingdom, described as a "feast of fat things for all people."

But there are others gifts which should not be kept back merely for Christmas time. Each one, and especially each Christian, should every day shed forth on life's pathway gifts and blessings that would bring joy, cheer, to many hearts—the kindly word, the nod of recognition, especially to one in less favored circumstances, the kindly look, the word or act of sympathy. Oh, how much these gifts mean to the poor world, whom the Apostle Paul describes as the groaning creation! Many of them have little that they know how to enjoy in the present life, and no prospect beyond. How blank such lives! What a godly pleasure comes from casting upon them an occasional ray of sunshine!

At times financial help may be appropriate in proportion to our ability. At times personal [illegible] ship and sympathy would be of more value than money. What we all need is to be more and more filled with the Spirit of our Father in Heaven—the Spirit of our Saviour—the Spirit of love, joy, peace. This Spirit, the racings, is continually giving off, yet never lacking in quality. God is the abundant supply. He who thus loves and gives is continually a recipient from God 'more abundantly; and his treasure-store of joy and pleasure is an ever-increasing one, regardless of what his outward circumstances and conditions may be.

Writing to the Ephesians (4:8) St. Paul notes gifts specially bestowed upon the Church—of the Father by the Son. He says, "When He (Christ) ascended up on High, He led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men." More literally it reads, "He led forth a multitude of captives, bestowing gifts unto men." The Apostle quotes from the Psalms a poetic description representing Jesus as a great Conqueror who had vanquished the enemy and was returning home with the spoils. The enemy is Sin and Death.

Jesus by His sacrifice gained the victory and the right to control the millions of Adam's race who were in bondage to Sin and Death. He had humbled Himself, had become a man, had given His life a Ransom for all, had been raised from the dead by the power of the Father, and had then ascended a conquering Hero, welcomed by the Father and acclaimed by the angelic hosts.

The multitude of captives in His train have not yet come into sight—merely the vanguard, the Church. And the Church will not be fully delivered until all of its members shall have been changed to glory, honor and immortality beyond the veil, as sharers in the First Resurrection. Soon the Heavenly portion of the delivered captives will have followed the Leader into the presence of the Father.

Then for a thousand years the other captives will be following on. As St. Paul declares, it will be "every man in his own order," or company, or regiment. The ranks will ultimately include the entire race of Adam and himself. All these willing to be led forth from captivity will attain again the full liberty of the sons of God, lost through Adam's disobedience, and the right to recovery of the same—redeemed for them at Calvary.

But the Apostle mentions the triumphal entry of Jesus into Heaven itself merely as an incidental, prefacing his statement that our Lord immediately began to give gifts to men. The first gifts, bestowed at Pentecost, were to the Church. Indeed, all of Jesus' gifts thus far have been to His followers. The prophecy from which the Apostle quotes takes in the world, however, declaring that the gifts are "for the rebellious also."—Psalm 68:18.

St. Paul, continuing, tells us the special gifts bestowed by Jesus upon His Church: "And He gave some Apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers." Jesus tells us about some false apostles. We can readily suppose that there have crept into the Church also false teachers, false pastors, associating godliness with vain, as the Apostle explains. All the name we are to have in mind that there are true Apostles, prophets, pastors, and teachers appointed by the Redeemer as His special gifts to the Church, as His special representatives in the Church, for their guidance and blessing.

We further read of the object and purpose of these gifts; they were "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

Only in proportion as Apostles, prophets, pastors and teachers fulfil this mission are they really the Lord's gifts to His Church. Consider that these were not appointed for the world, but for the saints—and not merely to start them in the way of saintship, but especially to perfect them as saints. And this perfecting of the saints is not merely an instruction of them in knowledge, nor merely the bringing of them to an appreciation of the joys and the peace of the Lord, but a preparation of them for the work of ministry—the work of service. All the saints are to be servants, even as the Lord Jesus, the greatest Saint, was Servant of all.

Whoever does not learn to be a servant of God, a servant of righteousness, a servant of the brethren, will not have learned the lessons necessary for a share in the Kingdom. Besides, the Kingdom itself will be a service to mankind for human uplift, and only those who have come to an appreciation of the privileges of service in the present conditions will be granted a share with the Lord in the more glorious service of the future.

The edifying of the Body of Christ, in modern language, means the upbuilding, the strengthening, the development of the Church, which is the Body of Christ. Not merely with sinners and with the heathen, therefore, are the pastors and teachers to be engaged, but chiefly with the Church, edifying it, strengthening it, educating it, with the knowledge of God, and building it up in all the fruits and graces of the Spirit. The Apostles, prophets, pastors and teachers who are the Lord's gifts to the Church will be found doing this work, whatever may be said of others.

Their work will not be finished until the Church completed shall have entered into glory. This is the Apostle's statement, "Till we all come in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect Man." The perfect Man signifies the glorious, complete Christ, of which Jesus is the Head and of which every member of the Church is a part. When the entire Body shall have been completed, perfected, developed, the work of this Age will be at an end, the gifts of Christ will have accomplished their work, the Body of Christ in glory will then begin the glad Reign which is to bless the world and shower gifts upon men—"the rebellious also."

"Love Divine, all love excelling,

Love doth all Thy favors crown.

Pure unbounded love Thou art;
Thou hast brought to us salvation;
Thee we love with all our heart."

J. J. Hartley for Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

At the urgent request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914. Being born and lived my whole life in Peterborough, and a whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the city.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure.

I will do my utmost to keep down the ever-increasing rate of taxation, consistent with the needs of the growing municipality.

I may say that I am in favour of municipal ownership, and in favour of having all city work done by our own people, instead of bringing in outsiders to do it. I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended. I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being chairman of that board for two years. I was also chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honour to elect me Mayor of our city, I will do my best to serve you to the very best of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

ISSUER OF AUTOMOBILE LICENSES

Mr. G. K. Rackham, secretary of the local Automobile Association, has been appointed Government Issuer of Automobile Licenses.

This is the first appointment of its kind in this district, and owners, as well as prospective owners, will find it a great convenience. Heretofore it has been necessary to send to Toronto for licenses, and they could not always be secured as promptly as required.

Mr. Rackham may be found at his office, 181 Charlotte Street.

J. J. HARTLEY'S

COMMITTEE ROOMS will be opened early in the coming week, in the Rooms over 420 George Street, (next floor to Trade and Labour Hall).

TO THE RATEPAYERS OF CENTRE WARD:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I spoke with a merchant at his store door, and he said he supposed the people would go ahead and elect a raft of dead heads to the Council. In fact, he said "more dead heads." That merchant is a pessimist and has a grouch.

But he may have reasons! His view of things comes from seeing men go into Council, and who have made promises—promised too much. Promised to do things they really didn't believe they could or would do. It is the popular thing.

I am not, please observe, making promises. I don't just know what I can do until I get there—if I ever do—but I can assure the ratepayers that I will try and be as useful, helpful and diligent in their and your service as I can be. That covers it.

I shall be very glad to receive your vote and hope to be so favored

Respectfully,

Life's Romance Hidden in Tales of Unclaimed Fortunes

WORLDWIDE SEARCH FOR HEIRS OF MME. CELIER

(Copyright, 1913, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

SOME years ago—in 1870, to be exact—there was at Wells College a foreign woman who was instructor of French and German in that institution. Her name was Frances Celier. During the two years that she was connected with the college her colleagues on the faculty had no opportunity of becoming intimate with her, for she kept to herself most of the time, and at such times when she was forced to be in their company she spoke very little. Of course, the students had even less chance of becoming intimate with her. Her dealings with them were strictly those of teacher and pupil. She was supposed to be a widow, but that was only a surmise and there was nothing by which to establish it as a fact. All that was definitely known about her previous to the time at which she came to Aurora was that she had obtained her appointment through the Schermerhorn Teachers' Agency. From her manner while at Wells it was quite apparent that she guarded some kind of secret, but what it was no one there could find out.

Now, on June 16, 1869, which was her first year at Wells, this Mme. Celier walked up to the teller's window in a certain bank in New York city and opened an account. Many times between that date and June of the year following she appeared at the bank and each time made a substantial addition to her deposit. To the bank officials she gave her address as Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., at the time she opened her account, but when, in July, 1870, she left the institution and moved to New York she did not inform the bank that she had done so, but permitted them to think that she was still to be found at the original address.

The bank officials did not suspect the truth; in fact they had no suspicions at all concerning her, for she continued to call regularly, sometimes withdrawing money, but more often depositing it. This went on for seven years, but on the 17th of May, 1876, after placing on deposit a check for $125 and then withdrawing $100 in small bills, she walked out of the place and from that day to this has never been heard from.

A large deposit belonging to her is still in that bank. Detectives and attorneys have been scouring this continent and Europe for the last few years, but not a trace of her has been found. The first clew that they worked on was certain data that she had given to the bank. It was the custom in those days for banks to demand certain information about new clients, and in accordance with that custom she had signed a statement that her names was Frances Celier, that she was a native of Furtle, near Nuremberg, Germany, and that the date of her birth was December 31, 1831. But search in the village of Furtle revealed the fact that no Frances Celier was known there; in fact no such name as Celier appears on any of the records of the community. But, knowing that Celier is a French name, the attorneys carried the search over to France, believing that she had married a Frenchman by that name. This was not an easy task for the name is common enough in France. Many families bearing it were questioned, however, but none of them had any information about a Mme. Frances Celier.

The hunt was next directed toward Wells College. Then for the first time the bank learned that for the last five years previous to her disappearance she had lived in New York. But there was nothing comforting in this because none of the New York city directories for those years—nor of other years—showed her registered as a resident of the metropolis. New York contained one more source of hope for the searchers—the Schermerhorn Teachers' Agency. It was traced, though it had moved from its original office, at No. 14 Bond street; it is still in existence, but all records connected with its affairs prior to 1890 have been destroyed.

She Continued to Call, Sometimes Drawing Money.

Once more an attempt was made to pick up the trail at Wells College. In answer to a letter from the attorneys one of the officers of the institution wrote:—"No one here can give any information concerning Mme. Frances Celier. She was instructer here in 1869-1870, but all trace of her was lost by the college authorities after she left the college."

There were two other women who were teaching French at Wells during the time that Mme. Celier was connected with the college. They were sisters. But though they were successfully traced, nothing came of the effort, for it was learned that one of them had died in New York years before the search for the missing Mme. Celier had begun, and not long after the death of this one the other committed suicide at her sister's grave.

There was only one more direction for the attorneys and detectives to turn. They must try to get more information about the object of their hunt through some of the young women who attended Wells when Mme. Celier taught there. They are now of mature age, but more than fifty of them have been traced. Some of them are the wives of men prominent in financial circles, literary circles, political life, and so on. To all of them that have been located, and they are scattered all over the world, letters were written. They were asked to tell all they could remember concerning the mysterious instructor in languages. But evidently she had made no great impression on them. Some could not recall her at all. Others could vaguely remember her as a woman "of a neutral type, very quiet in manner and externals; the kind that makes little impression," to quote one of the replies.

Another, who had a slightly better memory, wrote:—"I had no acquaintance with Mme. Celier except the usual friendly salutation of the day, or a visit to her room when she was indisposed. This was about the relation she sustained to the faculty and students generally."

Most of the replies were about as explicit as the ones quoted. There was one, however, which contained what was considered a very promising clew. The wife of a very well known clergyman wrote that she remembered seeing on the walls of Mme. Celier's room at Wells two pictures. One of these was named "Fast Asleep" and the other "Wide Awake." Henry Ward Beecher's weekly paper, the Christian Union, had issued these two pictures as premiums back in 1869 and 1870. Quite naturally, it was inferred that Mme. Celier had been a subscriber to the magazine. Therefore, if the subscription list of the publication could be found it would in all probability give the address of the woman sought. The hopes thus raised were shattered when it was learned that all the old subscription lists of that periodical had been destroyed when it was merged with the Outlook.

That is where the search for Mme. Celier ends. There have been attempts made to find trace of her through all kinds of records, both in New York and its suburbs, and the German Consul has extended this sort of search in Germany, but nothing has come of it all. George V. Celier, dealer in hair at No. 757 Broadway, lived in New York in 1861: a carpenter by the name of Celier lived in Brooklyn in 1860, and Felix Celier, dealer in dress trimmings, lived in New York, at No. 4 Amity street, in 1862. But efforts to identify and trace any of these men as the husband of Frances have met with no success.

Perhaps she died not long after that May day when she last visited the bank, and was buried unidentified. Perhaps she was killed and robbed and her body concealed successfully. Perhaps she had a secret reason for leaving New York without giving the slightest clew to her destination. The fact that she kept her address in New York a secret seems to back up this last theory. But the solution to the mystery is still a matter of guesswork, and while the guessing is going on her fortune still continues to pile up in the bank in which she left it.

Three unsolved mysteries of unclaimed fortunes and missing heirs will be described in the next article.

$8,000 LONELY WOMEN IN CITY OF LONDON.

IN London, as in all other great cities, there are hosts of solitary women. By the census returns the fact is revealed, as a surprise to many, that there are over 58,000 women in London living alone. A correspondent of a London journal, who states that she is one of them, urges that some social provision should be made for such solitary lives, and complains bitterly of the limitations which are set to women who are friendless in the metropolis.

"On behalf of the other 58,595 women who are placed as I am," she writes, "may I suggest that the lonely women of London be granted more liberty to live? For nearly ten years I have lived alone in London, and in all that time I have not met one acquaintance whom I could talk to intimately, or whom I could really call 'friend.'

"Only those who have to endure the horror of living alone know in what narrow circles one has to move when the limits of one's existence are the office or the shop and one's private rooms in a dismal square. In smaller cities it is possible for a woman to go about alone and find the social happiness which every nature seeks. In London it is dangerous for women to be alone. I dare not go to the theatre, I dare not dine out, I dare not undertake an occasional trip to the seaside. There patience is maddening, and the life has become to me like that of a bird in a cage, seeking room to fly, but denied it. Is there no way out of this cage, whose bars are unseen, but very real?

"One has a natural reluctance to go to 'homes for women' and say that one is a lonely woman. One prefers to remain lonely, protesting at the same time against a social system which gives no opportunities for intelligent beings who have come to the Big City. Is it not possible that some kind of club or establishment could be formed which would be a place for meeting fellow creatures without seeming to be 'forward' or assuming? There is not such a place in the whole London for women, though there may be one for men. The Young Women's Christian Association does not appeal to me, and I hesitate to take advantage of any institution which labels its faith in gilt letters on the housetops. I am not what people call a 'fright,' nor am I a suffragist, and I am not old. I am simply an average human being with a desire to live fully and well, and with a great grievance that no experiences come to me which come to girls who have brothers and sisters. What would people think of me if I walked into the Savoy alone and started to eat a lonely supper? Of course, I know that the proper thing to do is to take no notice of what people would say or think, but, being a woman, I do mind, and I never met a woman who didn't."

NEW YORK'S UNIQUE JUVENILE SETTLEMENT FOR BOYS

Digging Trench for Water Pipes.

Latest Cottage Built by Boys.

Dormitory Constructed by Boys.

Mural Decorations by Boy Who Never Had a Lesson.

THERE is the house that Jack built and Jim and Pete and scores of other boys. They built it for the Children's Village, and enthusiasm and loyalty went into the laying of every stone and brick and the nailing of every board and shingle." Thus spoke an officer of the unique institution that crowns Echo Hills, overlooking the Hudson River, at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. He was pointing to a very good looking building, into the basement of which was filing a double row of blue suited boys ranging from six or seven to fifteen years old.

"They are going in to get ready for dinner," the officer explained about the boys. "There are wash rooms and shower baths down there. When the boys are seated at dinner we can go in and see them." The dining room was a cheery place, with boxes of plants at the windows and pictures on the walls. The small tables were covered with spotless cloths and the manners of the boys as they ate their pork and cabbage would have compared favorably with those of boys of the same ages in a good class boarding school. Yet these are boys of the New York streets, most of them sent to the village by the juvenile courts. Here and there was a boy who looked capable of mischief or something worse. A few looked dull or sullen, but most of them were just average boys in appearance.

The Children's Village has 550 of these boys and is trying to give them a new view of life as well as an experience and training which shall make them of use when they leave and fit them to earn their living. Instead of being huddled in one large building they are distributed in groups of twenty in homelike cottages. These families are in charge of a matron who "mothers" them, or in some cases, of a man and his wife.

One of the things that strikes the visitor forcibly is the lack of suggestion of an institution. If it were not for their clothes, which are more or less uniform, he would never dream that these boys were serving even a beneficent term of detention. They are a very happy looking lot of youngsters and they have none of that look of slyness that so often characterizes the children of an institution. They seem to be on terms of the greatest friendliness with the matrons and other persons in charge of them and to meet them half way in their efforts to entertain them. In each of the cottages there is a large living room, with piano, books and pictures, plants and an open fireplace, where the boys can enjoy themselves after work and school hours are over, and there is plenty of room outdoors for games and sports, the institution having bought almost three hundred acres when it was decided to abandon the old juvenile asylum in the upper part of Manhattan and to establish a village for the children on the lovely heights above the Hudson.

There was one modest building on the property and into that Mr. Charles Dewey Hilles, who had been brought from Lancaster, Ohio, to take charge of the new enterprise, moved with his family. There he superintended the erection of the first buildings and saw the village well started before he left to accept a place in Washington under the administration of President Taft. Mr. Guy Morgan, who succeeded him as superintendent, lives in the same house, adhering to Mr. Hilles' policy of building for the boys first and letting the superintendent get along with the old quarters. That is another thing that makes the Children's Village different from many another one, where the elegance of the official quarters is in striking contrast with those assigned to the children.

"How can the boys turn out such buildings?" the superintendent was asked. "There is nothing about them that suggests the amateur."

"Oh, it is the direct application of their vocational training," he replied. "They work under the direct supervision of their instructors and thus learn their trades in the best possible way—the practical one. You see, these boys will have to make their living and their experience here is worth far more than any mere theoretical education could be as a preparation for getting profitable work later. I've just heard from a boy who learned carpentry here so that he could work from blueprints, and he got a job at $17 a week at once. You see there is an opportunity for various kinds of masonary. The boys put in the rock foundation and laid the brick, some plain and some in fancy designs. They did the interior woodwork, plastering, painting, everything that mechanics do."

In one of the cottages a deep frieze about the wall of the dining room had been painted by one of the boys, who had had no art instruction. His subject was an ambitious one, the portrayal of the chief naval events in the history of the United States, beginning with the voyage of Columbus and ending with Dewey's victory at Manila. It is obviously a boy's work, but graphic and interesting, more valuable in its place than the work of a master could be.

The latest building operations have been those connected with enlarging the hospital.

The boys not only build the houses they live in but they make the clothes and shoes they wear. They learn printing and telegraphy and have practice in applied electricity. In the summer they raise fruits and vegetables. They also get some experience with live stock—pigs, sheep and chickens being raised on the place.

Half of the day is given to manual work and the other half is spent in the class room. There is a half holiday on Saturday and recreation hours on other days, so there is no chance of all work and no play making Jack a dull boy.

On another occasion they went to a matinee in the city, the expedition being carried through with equal success and satisfaction to every one concerned.

The boys are sent to the Children's Village for a two year term. At the end of that time they are sent to their homes or, if they have none, homes are found for them in the West, frequently on farms. To many of them these are the first real homes they have ever known. One little chap asked the matron of his cottage if she had ever slept out of doors or under steps, as, when he found that she had consistently gone to bed all her life beneath a roof he looked at her in wonder, shaking his head.

In 1860 Abraham Lincoln sent this message to the old New York Juvenile Asylum: "Tell the boys of the New York Juvenile Asylum that they must follow truth, justice and humanity if they wish to become useful and honorable men." These words are emblazoned on the wall in the auditorium in the Children's Village, which has superseded the congregate system of the old asylum, but still seeks to promote the principle expressed by Lincoln.

Aristocrats of Animal Society.

NEW YORK, Saturday.

EVEN in Zoological Park, where civilisation might be thought to have imposed its artificial institutions as little as anywhere in the settled areas of the world, there are class distinctions.

A list of the F. F. Z. P. has recently been prepared by the Zoological Society, which includes fourteen families, in addition to "Dit," the alligator, which is believed to be the oldest inhabitant.

None of these animals arrived in the Park later than 1902, and the earliest settlers mentioned in the list came in 1899. They are almost all entitled to be called sons and daughters of the revolution, as they have been engaged in some of the Park's most famous battles.

"Dit," whose name is short for "Ditmars," was a gift to the Park from Mr. Raymond Ditmars and was named in his honor. He occupies an exclusive tank in the reptile house. When the chief keeper or retainer of the reptile house pokes into his black pool with a pole, "Dit" thrusts up his head in a dark and grewsome manner that somehow suggests the Wagnerian drama in its gloomiest moments. The smile of "Dit" is a one-sided affair, but none the less beautiful for that.

"You see," he explains to the caller, "they put some one in to share my room and bath, an ordinary person who didn't belong to the F. F. Z. P. We had a slight altercation."

As a result of the altercation a large portion of "Dit's" jaw disappeared. He bore the misfortune with the fortitude of the well born. His wound received no treatment whatever, and yet he appeared the next morning after it had been inflicted and ate his usual breakfast of rats and mice.

Since then "Dit" has been permitted to occupy his apartment alone. If any fresh alligators which require separate apartments arrive at the Park he will have to be put back in the tank with his enemy, but in that event he will first be strapped to a board, as will also his future roommate, and a dental operation will take place which will make it impossible for them to testify too intensely to their distaste for each other's society.

For a long time the Park attendants have been looking for a white hope in the person of a light colored young alligator who would be fit to cope in battle with the veterans of the pools, but so far none has arrived.

When "Dit" first came to the Park there were very few alligators roaming around in the wilds beyond its gates, but now he often hears his kind trumpeting outside, and he displays them back with a similar roar, just to let them know that a cousin is penned up in a small pool in the reptile house. His song sounds somethink like a steam exhaust and something like the blasting of rock. If the alligator could get out of his pool and go in search of the other alligators that he supposes to be responsible for those regions outside, instead of a troupe of his own friends from the slimy banks of tropical rivers, he would find a band of Italian organ grinders, with a bear and a performing [illegible] all dressed.

[illegible] to the F. F. Z. P. This is [illegible] to the Park in 1904.

Billy's Christmas Greeting

By EUGENIA RABBAS

Copyright, 1913

O I am a heartless flirt, who doesn't understand the meaning of the word love, am I, Mr. William Dunning?" stormed Marjorie all to herself, in answer to the final decree of rage and defiance which that gentleman hurled at her by means of a vigorous slam of the front door.

"I believe he would have shaken me, if he hadn't rushed out in time to prevent himself from doing it," she continued, the ever ready dimples venturing out of their hiding places, but she banished them severely. "I'll never, never forgive him, even though he asks me to, which of course, he won't! And he calls me stubborn!"

Next morning Marjorie was tremendously busy wrapping up dainty little parcels, for the next day was Christmas, and her many friends must be remembered, in spite of quarrels and Billy.

Still, she seemed very much preoccupied over her work, and quite suddenly she threw aside the piece of holly she had been toying with, and hurriedly flew to the telephone.

In answer to her impatient summons, she was quickly connected with Brown & Co.'s book store. "Have you sent out those books that were ordered for Mr. William Dunning?" she asked anxiously.

The answer evidently pleased her, for she breathed a sigh of relief. "That's all right: I'm glad you haven't, for I have changed my mind about them. Please cancel the order."

Marjorie hung up the receiver with an air of triumph. "There, I'm glad I thought of that! Billy would have construed a Christmas present into an abject apology," she said, her indignation rising at the very thought of such a thing.

But when she went back to her parcels and picked up the little twig of holly she had intended tucking away into one of them, her face softened. "I know that isn't the right kind of a Christmas spirit to have, but I can't have Billy thinking that I am admitting I was wrong, when I know I wasn't," she argued with herself.

The joyous ringing of Christmas bells and merry shouts of her younger sisters and brothers, when they discovered their stockings the next morning, only served to emphasize her depression.

"Billy never loved me; if he really and truly did he never could treat me like this," she told herself as she stood looking with unseeing eyes at the snowy Christmas world.

Just then a young man, fairly tearing around the corner, arrested her attention. It was no less a person than Billy himself who was coming, post haste, to see her.

Marjorie looked at him in wonder. What had come over Billy? Why this sudden contrition, when, she admitted it now for the first time, even to herself she had been greatly, if not altogether, to blame for their quarrel.

"O, Billy, I am so glad you came." Billy took some little time to emphasize his appreciation of her welcome, then "Glad I came? Why wouldn't I come, dear?" he asked.

"Because you vowed you wouldn't unless I apologized," Marjorie explained mischievously.

"You didn't think I'd be so narrow and unforgiving as to ignore your dear little peace offering? I brought one of the books with me to read something to you," he told her, and diving into his pocket he produced a little copy of "Romeo and Juliet."

Marjorie was surprised for a second, then it flashed over her what it all meant. Brown & Co. had forgotten to cancel her order and Billy had received the books. Billy had construed her sending them into a humble plea for forgiveness.

He most probably wouldn't have come at all if it hadn't been for that. She stiffened visibly and all her love was swallowed up in a wave of rebellious pride.

"You are mistaken," she commenced coldly, but Billy interrupted her. "Here, I have found it.

"'My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep, the more I give to thee.'

"The more I have, for both are infinite," he was reading, and the simple beauty of the lines awoke something in Marjorie stronger than pride or resentment and she only smiled when he added tenderly: "My Christmas greeting to you, dear."

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lansdowne, N. S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

LEAP OF A KANGAROO.

Never Over Four Feet High, but May Be Thirty Feet Broad.

Precisely how far a big kangaroo can jump is a matter of some dispute. A writer in Cassell's Natural History says that they can leap "over ten fifteen or more feet." Mr. H. R. Francis tells us that he has "known an 'old man' to cover nineteen feet at each bound for full half a mile," and he believes that he does leap "an average of full twenty feet."

Mr. Lydekker is of opinion that the great kangaroo leaps "not far short of thirty feet," and Mr. Thomas Ward gives it as "at least thirty feet." Probably Mr. Rudyard Kipling's "twenty-five feet to a bound" is near enough as a general rule.

But with this more than Olympic leaping power they seem commonly either unable or unwilling to rise any height from the ground. Their specialty is broad jumping only. Mr. Ward says that they "cannot clear an obstacle greater than four feet," and a five foot fence is commonly high enough for any kangaroo paddock.—London Times.

The Spirit of Christmas.

There is hardly a festival in the calendar which has such a hold on the hearts of old and young alike as Christmas Day. The ring of the car bells and the voices upon the streets seem to take on a more cheery tone, and the spirit of the time seems to throw a glamour over places and things which ordinarily are devoid of all beauty.

As it is with places, so it is with people. They, too, not only seem to change, but the transformation does take place in millions of hearts to a greater or less degree. The spirit of Christmas even affects people who for the rest of the year are devoid of sentiment and of feeling for their fellows. The most interesting stories of Christmastide are those which will never appear in print—true stories of men and women whose thoughts have been only of their own selfish aims and pleasures, but have been awakened, if only for a day or two, from their usual self-complacency, moved by some force of which they are only half-conscious to do some act of kindness to make the day happier for someone less fortunate than themselves in a worldly way.—The Christian Herald.

HERNAN SINGH GOES.

Hindu's Last Effort to Stay In Canada Is a Failure.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 20. — Hernan Singh, the Hindu who has been the subject of strenuous litigation on the part of his friends in efforts to prevent his deportation, has lost out in his fight with the immigration authorities. Yesterday he lost the last and fatal round of the conflict. Late last night he was deported on the steamer Empress of India and taken back to Hong Kong.

Justice Macdonald held that the man had been properly found guilty of misrepresentation by a properly constituted board of enquiry, and that he must pay the penalty of being deported.

A new and sensational development was given to the proceedings by the disclosures that a plot existed whereby the signature and official statement of Immigration Inspector Malcolm R. Reid had been obtained to the photograph of Hernan Singh and others long before the man ever visited the country.

Mona Lisa to Go to Rome.

FLORENCE, Italy, Dec. 20.—Dr. Ricci, director-general of fine arts, yesterday personally supervised the packing of the painting "Mona Lisa," which will be forwarded to Rome to-day. The picture will be guarded by police and museum officials. The school children, accompanied by their teachers, were allowed to view the "Mona Lisa" yesterday.

An unknown man visited Perugia's lawyer yesterday afternoon and offered to advance $1,000 for Perugia's bail.

Big Concerns Announced.

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.—A new Brockville company with a capitalization of $1,000,000 is the Walhausen Hat Corporation, which will manufacture hats and caps.

A seven-million-dollar company the Oil Princess Limited, has been incorporated. Headquarters will be at Ottawa.

Fined for Impersonation.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 20. — Walter Burnside, aged 19, pleaded guilty in St. James' police court yesterday morning to attempting to impersonate a voter at Macdonald bye-election polling last Saturday. He was fined $50.

TOO MANY CHILDREN

are pale and frail—backward in studies—with pinched faces and poor blood—their minds and bodies are actually starved because their regular food does not nourish.

Such children need Scott's Emulsion above everything else; it contains nature's rarest life-giving fats; it is essentially food value—blood-food and bone-food, free from wine, alcohol or harmful drug.

Scott's Emulsion often builds many times its weight in solid flesh—its medicinal, tonic and nutritive properties make all good food do good.

IT IS NOT A TROT, BUT A FOUNDATION FOR STURDY GROWTH.

13-120 Every Druggist Has It. Avoid Substitutes.

A FEW EVIDENCES OF C. P. R'S GROWTH

As an instance of the manner in which the business of the C.P.R. has grown during the past few years it may be stated that whereas the revenue from passengers amounted a few years ago to something like $8,000,000 per annum, it now amounts to $35,000,000 per annum. To earn this money meant that the company had to carry 1,766,989,013 passengers one mile. A decade ago the revenue from freight was something like $50,000,000. To-day it is $89,855,223, which means that 11,242, 600,998 tons were carried one mile during the year while the total tons of all classes of freight during the year were 12,986,619,155. This gives an illuminating idea of the strides the company has made since the original mail carrying contract was entered into with the C.P.R. and other companies. Especially does it show the standard quality and capacity reached in so few years — so that even in districts which have yet to yield a noticeable volume of business the character of the operating is of the highest, in respect of everything entering into a first-class system. This has its effect in the general result, but the point is that the C.P.R. has aimed at providing the amplest accommodation, not only in the East, where the population is denser, but even in sparsely-peopled districts in the West, which nevertheless will yield the fruit of which the company has sown the seed in confident faith.

YARDS FIRE-SWEPT

Portsmouth Naval Establishment Visited With Heavy Loss

TWO SIGNALMEN LOSE LIVES

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., Dec. 22.—A fire involving damage variously estimated at from $1,.50,000 to $2,500,000, devastated the famous dockyard Saturday night and resulted in the loss of two lives and the destruction of the century-old semaphore tower, which in the pre-telegraph days was the great signalling station between the fleet and the Admiralty.

An examination of the ruins today disclosed the fact that two of the three signalmen who had remained in the tower to summon help when the fire broke out, were burned to death. The third managed to make his escape through the smoke and flames to an adjoining roof and there fell unconscious. He was subsequently rescued.

Nothing is known as to how the fire originated. When it was first observed from the deck of the new battle cruiser, Queen Mary, it had already obtained a good hold on the inflammable material in the rigging loft and sail house. All the fire-fighting apparatus in the dockyard was rapidly brought into action, and the efforts of the men were devoted to preventing the fire from reaching the main store at the end of the burning building, which was filled with 30,000 tons of heavy oil. After many hours' strenuous work the fire was gotten under control. It had then reached within eight feet of these tanks. The flames were finally extinguished about three o'clock Sunday morning.

Many valuable models of old warships, records relating to Nelson and earlier periods, and old naval relics were destroyed.

Neptune Smashes Dover Harbor.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—It is feared that the $20,000,000 spent by the Admiralty on the improvement of Dover Harbor has been wasted. There is to-day a rushing tide rip across the harbor entrance which makes it next to impossible to enter at certain stages of the tide.

It has also been found that the harbor silts up very rapidly, in spite of the fact that $350,000 are spent annually on dredging. Altogether, Dover Harbor has cost the nation $50,000,000, and many millions more will have to be spent if it is to be of any use to the larger ships of the navy.

ROBBERS LEFT $10.

Vancouver Bank Tha Much Better Off After Exciting Episode.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 22.—A gang of robbers Saturday morning entered the Robson street branch of the Bank of Ottawa of this city, but failed to get away with any money; in fact, they left a small souvenir in the shape of a $10 bill.

It was just after the bank opened at 10 o'clock, that two young men approached the teller's desk, and, pushing through a $10 note, asked for change. The teller reached for his cash and at the same moment each of the two men produced a revolver and commenced shooting. The teller ducked under the counter. The robbers fired five shots and tried to reach the bills, but could not do so. People in the neighborhood began to rush towards the bank and the robbers, still firing, started away. They escaped in the fog, which was heavy at the time. The bank still has the $10 bill brought in by the robbers.

More Federal Troops Rebel.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 22.—The list of Federal troops who have revolted was augmented Saturday by a detachment formerly under the command of Gen. Gaudencia de la Llave, in the State of Puebla. The mutineers are said to number 500 men. They took with them two cannon and a few machine guns.

The activity of adherents of the rebel leader Zapata in the State of Mexico and Tlaxcala was manifested yesterday by the destruction of three sugar cane plantations.

A heavy consignment of oil from the Tampico district has reached San Luis Potosi.

Darrow Completely Cleared.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 22.—Court records of Los Angeles County were cleared yesterday of the McNamara dynamiting case, when the indictments charging bribery against Clarence S. Darrow, who was counsel for the dynamiters, were dismissed. District Attorney Fredericks told Judge Jackson of the Superior Court that Darrow had been tried twice, once when the jury acquitted him, and again when the jury disagreed, and that evidence in the light of previous experience was not sufficient to convict.

Both Arms Broken.

GUELPH, Dec. 22.—One arm broken at the wrist and the other at the shoulder were the injuries received by Mrs. Davison, wife of Principal James Davison of the Collegiate Institute, Saturday afternoon by a fall on the stairs of their residence. With both arms broken she managed to take down the receiver and telephone Dr. Davison at the Collegiate. The injured lady is doing very well and resting easily to-day.

Husband Took Wife's Pay.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 22.—In ordering the deportation of Gordon Maidment to England Saturday, Judge Carman advised him to tell any others of his kind in the old country not to come to Canada. Maidment was arrested on a charge of non-support and desertion. He and his wife had been employed at a Grimsby canning factory, but the most of the time was put in by his wife. The man turned up on pay day and secured both pay envelopes and disappeared. Charitable neighbors had provided for the woman and placed her in the St. Catharines hospital. The couple will be deported together.

Ladies! Secret To Darken Grey Hair

Bring Back Its Colour and Lustre With Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur ad alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

Thin wispy, grey faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

TRAVELS LIKE A QUEEN.

"Mona Lisa" 'n Taker To Rome In a Special Train.

ROME, Dec. 22.—Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" arrived here Saturday from Florence escorted by Dr. Torado Ricci, director-general of fine art in Rome; Prof. Giovanni Poggi, director of museums in Florence and numerous officials. The train on which the picture was brought here was guarded along the entire route in the same manner as royal personages.

The painting was taken from the station to the ministry of fine arts, where it was inspected by the King of Italy and then consigned to Camille Barrere, French ambassador to Italy, who to-day, will return it to the Italian Government which is to place it on exhibition for three days. Afterwards the picture is to be on exhibition in Milan before being handed over definitely to the French authorities for transport to Paris where it is to be placed in the Louvre museum from which it was stolen by Vincenzo Perugia on Aug. 22, 1911.

Others In Theft.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—At the moment the "Mona Lisa" was officially restored to France, Magistrate Drioux, who has had the case under his charge since the painting disappeared from the Louvre, ordered the arrest of Vincente Lancelotti, Michele Lancelottie and Mme. Clamagirand, friends and neighbors in Paris of Vincenso Perugia, on information telegraphed from Florence by the French police official Vignol.

The Lancelotti brothers were announced several days ago by another Italian as having been implicated with Perugia, and they are now charged with receiving and concealing the masterpiece.

FATHER MURDERED.

Daughter Maltreated by Unknown Desperadoes.

FORT LAIN, N.Y., Dec. 22. — A crime that has aroused the countryside was discovered early yesterday morning, when Helen Barrett, 20 years old, succeeded in freeing herself from gag and ropes at her home, six miles west of Fort Lain, where, after she was attacked Saturday night, her father was murdered by a man or men in search of money. The victim was John Barrett, 60 years of age. He was clubbed and shot through the head. His money, a considerable sum, he had hidden behind a wall panel and it was untouched.

Helen Barrett was stunned by a blow of a club while reading, between nine and ten o'clock. She was gagged and bound and thrown into a small ante-room. Her father was slain when he came to her aid. The daughter did not know who committed the crime, and the authorities have had to work without a clue.

Menelik Dead at Last.

ROME, Dec. 22. — That Emperor Menelik, of Abyssinia, died on Dec. 12, is confirmed in the latest despatches received here from Addis Abeba, the Abyssinian capital. Although official announcement of the Emperor's death is lacking, this is due probably to the necessity of precautions being taken to insure the succession to the throne.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—Snow west and southwest, giving needed protection to the winter crop, acted as a check today on bullish sentiment regarding wheat. The market closed weak, 1-2c to ⅞c under last night. Corn showed a loss of 1-8c, oats finished 1-8c off but there was also substantial support in the form of resting orders that commission houses play into play in the declines. In addition to the snowfall, news regarding the Canadian wheat tariff made caution seem needful to a like advance, and provisions from 10c decline to a gain of a shade.

PREMIER WHITNEY ILL.

Sir James In Bed In New York—Condition Is Improved.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, is confined to his bed at the Hotel Manhattan, Madison avenue and Forty-second street, where he has been stopping since he arrived in this city from Washington several days ago. The Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, and Sir James' personal medical advisor, who is accompanying the Premier, was asked about the condition of his patient late last night, and he reported that Sir James was greatly improved. He said that Sir James was suffering from a nervous disorder, but would remain in New York until after the holidays.

Inquiry at the Parliament Buildings on Saturday elicited the following statement:

"Sir James Whitney was unable through pressure of business this year to take any vacation until a few weeks ago, when it became absolutely necessary for him to have a rest. He has spent the last couple of weeks in Washington, in company with the Hon. Dr. Pyne, and had intended to return to Toronto this week. On the return journey it was decided it would be better for him to remain over in New York for a week. Lady Whitney has joined him, and Sir James will, therefore, not be expected home before Wednesday, although the reports as to his condition are reassuring."

UNCOOKED PORK A MENACE.

U. S. Government Warns People of Ravages of Trichinosis.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—To prevent the spread of trichinosis, a dread disease little known to the American people, the Department of Agriculture last night issued a warning against the consumption of raw or uncooked pork products, the declared source of the malady.

The department asserts that during November and December, 1911, there was 58 cases of trichinosis that terminated fatally in one California community. In each instance the disease was traced to sausage, eaten in an uncooked condition. Other outbreaks of the disease with many fatalities are cited.

The disease is caused by a parasite or worm, microscopic in size, found in hog flesh, and there is no known effective method of treatment.

ROYALTY SHOPPING.

Their Presents This Year Will Be All-British Goods.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The King and Queen are both booming British goods this year, and are making a special feature of giving all-British presents. It is customary each year around Christmas time for royal warrant-holders to send a selection of Christmas presents to Buckingham Palace for Their Majesties' approval. They are stored in a large room which is temporarily converted into a luxurious shop. This year the warrant holders are specially requested to send no goods of foreign manufacture, in whole or even in part. The present gift list of the royal family is necessarily on a huge scale. This scheme facilitates the housing of a large number of presents. But the old idea that royalty never goes shopping in person but selects only from wares sent to the palace is completely exploded. Queen Mary is often to be met with shopping in Bond street, Regent street, and Piccadilly, while in the past two days Queen Alexandra has been seen mingling with bargain hunters.

The Delicacy of Baby's Skin

Cold Air, Rough Winds, Strong Soaps Often Bring on Chronic Eczema.

More beautiful than the rose is baby's skin when in health, and so delicate that it is susceptible to anything which irritates. For this reason baby's skin troubles are many, and frequently chronic itching eczema is developed.

Nothing can be better for baby's skin when irritated, than Dr. Chase's Ointment, and when eczema is developed you can apply this preparation with the knowledge that its wonderful record as a healer of the skin is due to the success it has proved in the cure of eczema.

The intense itching of eczema of the face and scalp is very hard for the little one to bear, and is a source of worry and anxiety to the mother. The itching parts are scratched, and nasty and coloured scars are formed. Eczema naturally becomes chronic and spreads over the body. You can positively control eczema and cure it by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. What is better still is to use this ointment for all chafing and irritation of the skin and prevent eczema from getting started.

WESTERN FARMERS ARE INDEPENDENT THINKERS

Says Mr. Chipman, of the Grain Growers' Guide—They Want the Land Speculator Eliminated and the Tariff Removed.

THE FARMERS' BANQUET

For over two hours some two hundred farmers listened to a forceful enunciation of the freedom of the western farmer from grain trade combines. The speakers were Mr. G. F. Chipman, Editor of the Grain Growers' Guide, and Mr. T. A. Crerar, President of the Grain Growers' Grain Company of Manitoba. The meeting which constituted a banquet was held in the Oriental Hotel on Saturday afternoon. Mr. J. H. Garbutt, Warden of Peterborough County, presided.

The speakers were enthusiastically acclaimed and the spontaneous outbursts of applause that punctuated their remarks, indicated to some extent, the interest that was displayed.

Mr. H. B. Cowan, Editor of Farm and Dairy, in introducing Mr. Chipman, observed that the meeting was the largest of its kind ever held in Peterborough.

Mr. Chipman, Editor of the Grain Growers' Guide, the official organ of the Association, upon rising to speak, said that he represented the organized farmers of Canada. He showed how, in spite of strenuous opposition from various sources, the Grain Growers' organization had flourished, and was being developed along practical and remunerative lines for the benefit of the Western farmer.

"Fifteen years ago," added the speaker, it was practically impossible for the Western farmer to get a square deal from those who handled the grain. The railways contributed to this condition by granting exclusive rights to the grain interests, to construct elevators at logical points. The railways agreed to accept only such grain as was consigned to the parties operating the elevators. The farmers were docked for dirt, etc., to a maximum extent, and the way they were used, on the whole, was desperate."

"The elevator men practically said 'you can take our price or leave it; this is a free country.' What could the farmer do? He had no other alternative but to accept the terms offered by the grain interests."

The Outcome.

"The result of this," said the speaker, was manifest in the organization of the Grain Growers' Association. The first call for relief, such as the Association offers, came from Indian Head, Saskatchewan. Since that the movement has spread throughout the Prairie Provinces. A central organization was formed following which the Manitoba Grain Act came into existence. The latter made provisions for a loading platform to facilitate the loading of cars. The railways indicated their objection to the measure by refusing to supply the necessary cars, whereupon special legislation was secured, in 1908, which conceded to the farmer the same rights and privileges as those which the grain operatives received. This culminated a long, drawn out fight in which the grain and railway interests participated."

The Grain Act contains a clause which is designated as the car distribution clause. It is the best piece of legislation that was embodied in the "character of liberty."

Reviewing the present-day status of the organization, Mr. Chipman said that it contained about fifty-two thousand members, representing the best element of the Canadian West.

"Would Look it Over."

"When Sir Wilfrid Laurier visited the West a few years ago, he was met at Brandon and other points by deputations of farmers who recorded a desire to have the tariff removed. In the words of Mr. Chipman, the Liberal leader said: "I thought the tariff was all right, but when I go back to Ottawa I shall certainly tell Mr. Fielding to spit on his hands, and look it over."

Next year Mr. Borden decided it would be in his interest to visit the West as Sir Wilfrid had done. This, he accordingly did. The farmers met the Premier and presented the same arguments as they had presented to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and his education progressed likewise. This goes to show," said Mr. Chipman that the grain growers are independent thinkers and when the Government leaders come out again they will get some more straight talk."

The Press Agent.

The Grain Growers' Guide was started five and one-half years ago, and by the look of things it is likely to be going for some time. The grain combine which naturally was not feeling very pleasant about the work of the Association, decided that it must be exterminated. They accordingly engaged a press agent at a salary of $4,000 a year and started a publicity campaign in both the Lib-

YESTERDAY THE SHORTEST DAY IN THE YEAR

The Closing Month of the Calendar Year Presents Each Year Two Characteristics of General Interest—The Longest Night

STAR GROUPS

The closing month of the calendar year presents each year two characteristics of general interest. The one which has been honoured by festivals since early historical times is the arrival of the sun at its greatest distance south of the equator and its turning northward again. In our present calendar this event occurs on either the 21st or 22nd. This year it occurred yesterday at 5:35 a.m., which represented the shortest day and the longest night of the year; by the end of the month the day will be three or four minutes longer. In our calendar the increase or decrease of the day is not applied equally to morning and afternoon by the clock. The shortest afternoon occurs two weeks earlier, and the shortest morning two weeks later. The afternoon will gain nine minutes by the close of the year.

Brilliant Star Groups.

This is the month in which the most brilliant star groups in the whole sky rise in the evening hours, giving the eastern heavens peculiar brilliancy of the scene, for they are pella may be seen shining brightly in he northeast. The Pleiades and Aldebaran are low in the east. As the evening advances Orion appears with its two brilliant stars Betelgeuse and Rigel on either side of its Belt. Castor and Pollux at the left soon ayyear, followed by Procyon and shortly after by Sirius, the brightest of all the stars in the heavens — a star much more brilliant than our sun would be if seen at as great a distance. It is not these stars alone which give brilliancy to thes cene, for they are accompanied by many others of only a little inferior brightness.

This year the appearance of these brilliant constellations is materially enhanced by the two planets, Saturn and Mars, which are brighter than all those named, with the sole exception of Sirius, and Mars slightly surpasses Sirius for a few evenings near the end of them onth.

How to Locate Planets.

These planets may be located with regard to the stars as follows: Saturn is at the left of Aldebaran, the red star in the V-shaped group known as the Myades, and about half-way to a bright star now known as Beta in the constellation Taurus. It was formerly known as Nath, an Arabic word which referred to its position at the tip of the Bull's horn. Saturn is the brightest of the three and shines with a white light slightly tinged with yellow, in marked contrast to Aldebaran. Much farther to the left is Mars, which is red, and the brightest star in the vicinity. The two stars north of it and nearly in line with it are Castor and Pollux. The motion of Mars among the stars this month is marked; it moves to the right or westward about 10 degrees. It is now at its greatest brightness for this year, as it is near the earth. At midnight on the 31st, as the new year is ushered in, it will be at its nearest point to the earth, about 58,000,0000 miles. Sometimes it is as near as 36,000,000, when as now the earth passes it, as they move in their respective paths about the sun.

The moon will be near Venus in the early morning of the 26th.

NEW HARDWARE BUSINESS HERE

Mr. H. P. Morgan Will Commence Business on George Street

Work was commenced this morning on the store formerly occupied by Yeates Bros as their tobacco store, next to the Bank of Nova Scotia, making alterations and changes to accommodate a new hardware business to be conducted by Mr. H. P. Morgan. Mr. Morgan was for fifteen years with the Peterborough Hardware Company, and is an experienced man in every department of the hardware business.

The store is well situated and will be stocked with a full line of the goods usually found in a well appointed hardware store. The store itself will undergo considerable changes and alterations, making it up-to-date in every particular.

Mr. Morgan is welcomed to the business interests of this City, as a young man of good ability and character.

TEMPLE BAND WILL COMMENCE ITS CHRISTMAS SERENADE TO-MORROW

The Temple Band of the Salvation Army will commence its Christmas serenade to-morrow, and it is hoped that the citizens will respond liberally. The band is an organization of which the people of Peterborough are justly proud. Forty-four strong, splendidly equipped, the organization has reached such a state of efficiency that a recent issue of the War Cry styles it "one of Canada's best." The past year has been the best in the history of the band. A saxophone section has been added which has increased the strength of the band, and at the same time has meant an addition to the expenditure. The serenade system is one of the few opportunities the band has to raise money for the purchase of instruments and music, and a generous response in answer to the appeal will be appreciated. The bandsmen, of course, give their services gratuitously and their work is purely a labour of love.

POKER GAME WAS BROKEN UP

Five Youthful Gamblers Made a Christmas Donation of $75 to the City's Funds This Morning

A DUMMER FEUD

Five local young men appeared in Police Court this morning charged with breaking the Lord's Day Act by gambling on Sunday. They all pleaded "guilty," and four of them were fined $10 and costs. The other member of the party was assessed $20 and costs—$23.75 in all—because this was his second offence, he having been convicted once before during the year, since the provision of the law under which they were fined, came into existence.

The party, which chose gambling as a means of celebrating the approach of Christmas, was gathered in a room over a George Street merchant's establishment, Sunday morning, about 2 o'clock. The merchant heard a noise above his store, and notified Constable Phymister, who was on duty. He followed up the clue and surprised the young men, who appeared to be in the very heat of an exciting game of poker. Piles of chips, a quantity of money and a deck of cards bore evidence to the unduly developed gaming instinct of the members of the merry-makers. They were arrested, the money confiscated and this morning they contributed $75 to the City Treasury.

A family feud of years standing reached a crisis in the Munro House on Saturday, culminating in a fistic combat between the scions of two Dummer clans. It was continued some hours later in the American House, on Hunter Street, and finally resulted in the badly disfigured combatants being taken to the Police Station.

One of them, who answered to the name of Crowe, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance and paid into Court $5.75. His face was so badly disfigured that no conception of his original facial appearance could be gained by those who saw him.

Frank Harding, whom events thrust upon the honour of representing the Harding clan in the struggle, pleaded "not guilty" to the charge against him of creating a disturbance. Mr. G. N. Gordon defended him this morning.

Harding said that Crowe attacked him first in the Munro House. Then later, in the American House, the two men met again. Harding put Crowe down on the ground. Crowe caught hold of Harding. I would not let him rise, while two of Crowe's brothers used Harding's head as a punching bag, and his side for a football.

P. C. Patterson soon appeared on the scene and broke up the fight which, by that time, was entertainment for over a hundred people.

The charge against Harding was dismissed and the Magistrate issued a warning for Crowe to walk the straight and narrow path the next time he came to the City.

"He only comes once a year," said the Chief.

"That's once too often," replied Magistrate Dumble.

A South End woman charged a neighbour with assault. The trouble arose over two dogs and two families of young children. The Magistrate gave both a lecture, the substance of which was very appropriate with the season and dismissed the charge.

TO GET AFTER THE MIDDLEMEN

Western Ontario Farmers Discuss the Formation of a United East and West Farmers' Organization

MEETING AT LONDON

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 22.—Colonel Fraser, of Burford, Ont., and Mr. Woods, of Portage La Prairie, are here, and at one of the most important meetings ever held in this district, addressed a large number of farmers with the object of uniting Eastern and Western Canada in a co-operative body so that there may be mutual interchange of products at a minimum cost. If the plans work out the middlemen who are now reaping a rich harvest will be eliminated, and it is also planned for farmers to unite regardless of politics and secure legislation which is long overdue. The meeting which was held under the auspices of the Middlesex Fruit Growers' Association was attended by farmers from all over the district who listened with the keenest attention to the arguments.

JAMES McEWING

Former President of the Dominion Grange, who led the big delegation of farmers from all over Canada before Premier Borden and his Cabinet on December 16th, to make renewed appeal for reciprocity with the United States in farm products.

May Hold A Public Meeting

To Give Candidates a Chance to State Their Platform

The question of holding a public meeting to give the various candidates for the different municipal honours an opportunity of stating their position on the different vital questions now before the public is being talked of. It has been suggested that just after nomination day when it is known who are in the field would be an appropriate time.

INDUCEMENTS TO BARRISTERS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 22.—Ontario barristers and solicitors are to-day in receipt of a circular from the Ontario Bar Association urging them to attend a meeting and banquet to be held at Toronto on Monday, Dec. 29. One of the inducements offered to attend is to the effect that applicants for positions will get assistance from the association. The circular states that efforts are made by the association from time to time to have the vacant legal positions filled by those best qualified for the office.

ERNIE MARKS HERE TO-NIGHT

The "Ernie Marks" theatrical company open a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House this evening. The company is well and favourably known to the theatre-goers of Peterborough, and their presence in the city during the holiday week, will no doubt enlist the interest of their many local patrons. The bill which will be changed each night will lead off with the presentation this evening of "The Canadian Gentleman." This is an intensely interesting play and is supported by a strong cast.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

The worshippers in St. Paul's Church have reason to be proud of their choir, and organist. At the services on Sunday morning and evening, the large congregations received such an uplift from the rendering of specially selected Christmas music as must have inspired the most indifferent, and elevated thought to a higher perception of what Christmas means. The messages of song were greater numbers than customary, and gave evidence of a lot of careful practice before such proficiency was reached. The feelings of the auditors were especially responsive in the morning to the anthem, "The First Christmas Morn," and a very effectively rendered solo, "The Anthem Celestial," by Mr. Gordon Wright; and in the evening, Shelly's anthem, "Christmas," with solo and obligato by Miss Allan, was like "a chime of bells whose music sweet, a message brings of peace and love." It is not too much to say that many a heart went home to commemorate Christmas as they never did before.

AN OPEN LETTER TO HIS WORSHIP MAYOR BRADBURN

Mr. W. H. Collier Asks Some Pertinent Questions in Regard to the Local Power Situation.

INFORMATION ASKED FOR

To His Worship Mayor Bradburn:

Dear Sir,—The ratepayers of Peterborough are completely "at sea" in respect to our Hydro-Electric scheme. Even the aldermen with whom I have talked have vastly different ideas as to what property the City is going to get, or how much it will cost after taking expropriation proceedings against the Peterborough Light and Power Company authorized by the by-law passed by themselves.

I am making this an open letter, Mr. Mayor, not in spirit of criticism against you or any of the aldermen, I am seeking information on behalf of myself and many other ratepayers. I told you personally I would support you if you again ran for Mayor, and I expected to support your candidature for Water Commissioner if you decided to run.

You have personally followed and been instrumental in directing every step of the City's Hydro-Electric proceedings from the beginning, so you are no doubt familiar with all the details and can explain the present situation.

To get at the explanation definitely, I am going to state certain facts as many ratepayers understand them, and desire to ask you some pertinent questions.

The ratepayers have been led to believe that the City could obtain possession of the Company's pole line and other distributing equipment in the City of Peterborough for an approximate sum of $94,000.00 and upon payment thereof the Company's franchise for 30 years to place poles and wires on the streets would thereupon cease and determine. Is this a fair and correct statement of the facts?

It is expressly provided by the statutes of Ontario, 1913, Chap 114, Section 4, that "upon the acquisition "of and payment for the lands, pro- "perty, erection, machinery, works, "plant and appliances of the said "Company so used and operated with- "in the City of Peterborough all the "rights, privileges and franchises of "the said Company under said By- "law No. 1497 and the agreement set "out therein or to the use of the "streets of the said City or any of "them shall cease and determine and "be at an end."

In compliance with this part of the Act passed by the Ontario legislature, the present City Council have passed a by-law expropriating "all the Com- "pany's property in the City of Pe- "terborough," and have served notice on the Company to that effect.

At the time this Act was passed by the legislature, did you and the present Council know definitely what property, and approximately its value, you would have to purchase from the Company in order to cancel this 30 year franchise?

When you passed the recent by-law expropriating all the Company's property in the City of Peterborough, did you know that the Company owned the Auburn dam power plant and raceway connected therewith? I am aware that the Act passed by the Legislature gives the City power to expropriate the whole or any part of the Company's property, but if the City do not take the whole of this property then the Company are still entitled to their 30 years' franshise and may replace the part of its plant that is taken by the City and proceed to enter into competition with the City's plant.

Is this not a correct and fair statement of that part of the situation.

On the hearing before His Honour Judge Huycke, experts for the Company swore that a fair valuation of all the property owned by the Company within the City is $600,000.00. The City's expert swears to a valuation of $94,000.00. The experts are all honourable men with reputations to sustain and especially familiar with values of this class of property as would not sacrifice their reputation to swear to absurd values. There is only one reason for such a vast difference between the two figures, the Company's experts must have included property that the City's experts did not know of. What property of the Company did the City expert not value? Before passing the by-law expropriating the Company's property were you not in a position to find out definitely all the property in the City limits owned by the Company? Did you and the Council instruct the City's solicitor to search in the Registry Office to ascertain what else the Company owned within the City limits?

I sincerely trust that you will give a full and complete answer to all these questions and if any facts are mis-stated be kind enough to let the ratepayers have an explanation from them as the majority of ratepayers are anxious to know the real facts.

Yours, etc.,

W. H. COLLIER.

The good old [illegible] days seem to have passed, but occasionally one is displayed in time to save a train load of passengers from a horrible and untimely death.

ELEVEN YEAR OLD YOUTH IS ALMOST DROWNED

Francis Bourbonais in the Hospital, a Result of Immersion—Father in Jail and Mother in Hospital

A NARROW ESCAPE

Francis Bourbonais, an eleven-year-old local boy, came very near being a victim of the skating season yesterday afternoon. In company with a number of other youths of about his own age, the young fellow was sliding on the ice in the river, just below Sherbrooke Street. Sliding out farther than his companions, he went through the ice. The water was deep where the youngster fell in and in a frenzy of excitement the other boy called a number of passersby. After some little time the lad was rescued from the water by three boys in a punt, and the work of resuscitation was looked after by Dr. Mann, he being assisted by a number of men who gathered at the place. It was only after a period that life was restored.

To-day the young fellow is in the hospital recovering from the shock and effects of his icy immersion.

The boy's father, Louis Bourbonais, is in jail waiting trial for attempting to kill his wif and the boy's mother is in St. Joseph's Hospital, being treated for injuries received when her husband attacked her with a razor.

IS HARD TO FORECAST THE XMAS WEATHER

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—Just what kind of weather Old Ontario will have for Christmas day the meteorological office is as yet unable to forecast. Whether it will be wintry or soft and mild depends on uncertain movements of a disturbance which has arisen in the Gulf of Mexico. In Northern Ontario and Quebec the thermometer took a considerable drop early this morning, going down to 14 degrees below zero. In the Canadian West it is quite cold, the minimum temperatures in most places going down to zero. On only nine Christmases since 1854 has there been sleighing in Toronto, and then it was not always good. On 31 Christmas days there was snow and the other 27 were green.

A "SURPRISE"

Twenty young people "surprised" Mr. A. Hartshorn and family, 533 Park Street, on Friday evening, and a very delightful night was the result. The time was very pleasantly spent in games and singing, the party breaking up at 4 o'clock. Among those present were:

Miss Muriel Hartshorn, Miss Olive Hartshorn, Miss Dorothy Hartshorn, Miss Annie Pollard, Miss Leah Norman, Miss Patty Roberts, Miss Mary Entwisle, Miss Farnell, Miss Crowley, Mss. Heaslip, Mr. Norman Hartshorn, Mr. Bert Hartshorn, Mr. Fred Hartshorn, Mr. Gordon Hartshorn, Mr. Wilfrid Hartshorn, Mr. Alfred Parkinson, Mr. William Flynn, Mr. Harry Kelsey, Mr. Fred Kelsey, Mr. Cecil Newman, Mr. David Melton.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Will you permit me as Federal representative, for the time being, of this constituency, to wish the people of West Peterborough one and all a very pleasant Christmas season.

Yours,

J. H. BURNHAM,

Mr. J. H. Smith A Candidate

Mr. J. H. Smith, Rose City, and for a number of years a member of the Village Council, it is expected will be a candidate for the Board of Education. Mr. Smith is an experienced campaigner and will no doubt put up a strenuous candidature.

A REAL SUFFRAGETTE.

The west has developed the true suffragette. In Calgary we have her "arriving" as the French would say, and also have the Scripture fulfilled—"the last shall be first." Miss Foote has been elected to, and the Foote is to be made head—of the Calgary Board of Education—for school circles think she will be made "chairman" of the Board. Miss Foote, who headed the poll in the recent elections, is slated for the position, and it is thought that a majority of the members of the board will vote for her. Miss Foote is the first woman ever elected to public office in Calgary, and the members of the board declare it would be a fine tribute to her to place her at its head. Her large experience is held to qualify her in every way for the position, as she has had seventeen years' teaching experience in Calgary and the west.

SHYLOCK OR CHRISTMAS SPIRIT?

A correspondent calls attention to the case of the five young men who were prevented hawking fish at the alleged instance of the Retailers' Association, in default of having procured licenses at $40 each. No doubt the Association was perfectly within its rights if it took the action attributed to it. This is an age of money making, [illegible] protection, and it is in accordance with a proper spirit of local patriotism that outsiders, who pay no taxes and have no civic responsibility should be prevented from entering into competition with local merchants. In this view of the matter there are others who transgress, in a different, but equally effective, way, the spirit of fair play to our local merchants. Some of our citizens are under greater obligations, for they have made their money by the help of fellow citizens, by whose presence and patronage, in various ways, money has been honourably gained, and should consistently be spent in the city. Yet we find many persons patronizing merchants outside the city, sending their good money, made by the help of the masses of citizens, to the mail order departments of big city establishments. The young fish hawkers are not the only offenders, but unfortunately there is no means provided for exacting a $40 license from civic patriots of the mail-order variety; yet they offend, in the spirit, if not in the letter, as truly as the young men guilty of the heinous offence of trying to turn an honest penny without the authority of a license at $40, when perhaps the whole five hadn't forty cents to devote to such a formality. Here seems to be a chance for the play of the spirit of Christmas.

The pity of it is that in this land of plenty, where employment is the most needed factor in the development of our boundless resources, young men of honest life and industrious dispositions, willing and anxious to work, if work were available, should be faced with a requirement so rigorous in its character as to be prohibitory, that prevents them from earning an honest living. The situation seems to be hopeless. If men, honest and willing to work, are out of employment they must exist. If they steal they are punished. If they beg the majesty of the law, likewise, comes down upon them. There seems to be no remedy except—and that is only temporary — the Christmas spirit. This is the divine offset to the letter of the law — the Shylock way. The most striking moral antithesis is—the Shaylock way and the way of the Lord of Christmas. We must do our best to share our substance, our divinely bestowed prosperity with the destitute, of which we have more than we know. Many who are in need are too honourably proud to complain. A little boy came to a house the other day with a message. In conversation with the lady of the house he said his father was out of work now and he was selling papers and was "saving up" for Christmas. "How much have you saved?" "Nothing, yet," and he got a "quarter" to open his Christmas bank account. This is a typical case and a revealing one. We who are comfortably housed, well fed and warmed, with an income to meet all our needs, cannot, without thinking and inquiring, know, or even fairly guess the pinch, and privation that come with the cessation of the wage income. Many who have work may be improvident, and when in receipt of wages, spend their money foolishly. But no matter what the cause, hunger pinches as badly, frost bites as keenly, and the wail of hungry children is as heart-stabbing as if they were not to blame. Giving charity, or doing kindness to the "deserving" only, shuts us out from doing anything at all. If we all got only what we deserve from the Divine Almoner, we should be in a sorry case. The phrase "deserving poor," in this connection, is the most miserable cant. We are all undeserving, rich and poor alike, and if the Shylock rule were applied to the best of us, we should be of all men most miserable. Think the whole matter over and try, in this blessed Christmas season, to decide which is the better way—the Shylock way or the Christmas spirit. If you are inclined to bargain with your duty you may decide in favour of the "pound of flesh," but only, justifiably, if the pound of flesh is sent to fill some mouth that but for your bounty would be empty on Christmas day.

SCARE MAKERS AND MONGERS

With hard times upon us, with lack of employment and daily bread in many a home an unknown quantity, we can appreciate the crime of inordinate expenditure of money that could be better devoted to peaceful development. A British statesman hits one of the causes of undesirable conditions:

> "We are in the hands of an organization of crooks," said Lord Welby, a few days ago. "They are politicians, generals, manufacturers of armaments and journalists....all of them anxious for unlimited expenditure and given to inventing scares which terrify the public and terrify Ministers of the Crown."

Lord Welby continued that he could remember six war scares, each one made to order, and in each of which the public had been gulled. Each time the scare had been exposed later on, but each new scare took, and resulted in enormous expenditure on armaments. It was the last of these made to order scares which Mr. Bord[illegible] sinker. Ever since then Canada has been, in the words of Lord Welby, "In the hands of an organization of crooks."

TO WHOM WILL THE PROVINCIAL PREMIERSHIP FALL?

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Dec. 19.—There is unanimous hope throughout the Province that Sir James Whitney will fully recover his health and be able to continue his leadership of the Government. It is true, however, that the indisposition of Sir James Whitney this autumn has given rise to much speculation as to who would succeed him in case he should be compelled to retire from the responsibilities of the Premiership. It is generally thought that Mr. Hanna would have been his successor had it not been for the Proudfoot charges. But it is now frankly admitted even in Conservative circles, that Mr. Hanna cannot succeed Sir James. Enough was admitted by the Prime Minister and the Provincial Secretary to put Mr. Hanna out of the running. When to this is added what was proved by the enquiry and what even his own friends fear might have been proved had the Conservative members on the committee not come to his rescue and blocked the investigation, it is easy to see that Mr. Hanna has lost his opportunity of becoming Prime Minister.

Mr. Hanna is also menaced by the opposition of Mr. Beck. It is well known that these two ministers do not waste any affection on each other and some of those who are best posted as to the relations between the two do not believe for a moment that Mr. Beck would serve under Mr. Hanna. The small public ownership wing of the Conservative party, headed by Mr. Beck, does not trust Mr. Hanna. It looks upon him as the corporation representative in the Government and considers that his relations are entirely too close to the Standard Oil interests to enable him to be a trustworthy Prime Minister.

Mr. Beck's own name has been mentioned for the position. He is very ambitious and it is generally believed he is anxious for promotion. He is strong at present in popular favour owing to his work on the Hydro-Electric Commission, but he is not popular among the Conservative members of the House. They look upon him as too distant and autocratic in his manner. Nor is he popular among his own colleagues in the Government, and it is an open fact that he seldom attends Cabinet meetings. The choice of Mr. Beck as Prime Minister would probably upset the Government completely, for Mr. Hanna would not serve under him, and, it is said, that several other Ministers share Mr. Hanna's views.

A quiet rumour that has been going around for some time is that owing to the lack of material in the Whitney Cabinet, Sir William Meredith instead of becoming Governor of the Province, is slated to succeed Sir James as Prime Minister. It is not likely, however, that this would be acceptable to Sir James' colleagues, who strongly resent the influence of Sir William over Sir James and are restless because at present they feel Sir James' voice is more more potent than even that of Sir James himself. If Sir William did accept, the murmurings which have been increasing of late about a "Family Compact" might break out in a noisy and indignant protest.

With all these cross-currents within the House and within the Cabinet, it is no wonder that in Conservative circles there is greater anxiety over the indisposition of the Prime Minister.

EXPROPRIATION BY-LAW AS PASSED BY CITY COUNCIL

In view of the City's recent application to Judge Huycke for possession of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's plant and of the admitted beclouded condition of many citizens, the principal clause of the City's by-law, No. 1708, passed on Oct. 21, 1913, is given herewith. It gives the City power to expropriate the property under the following enactment:

All poles, wires, insulators, generators, meters, lamps, and all other materials, equipment, apparatus or plant, owned, operated or used by the Peterborough Light and Power Company (Limited) in connection with the arc light generating and distributing system or the alternating current system, or any other system of the Company within the City of Peterborough, including the generating equipment and apparatus owned by the said Company Limited; all easements and rights which the said Company now has to enter upon and erect, construct and maintain poles, wires, insulators or other apparatus upon, over or across any lands or property within the said City of Peterborough and all other easements or rights in the nature of easements which the said Company now owns or has a right to exercise in the said City of Peterborough and in any wise necessary to be used by it in the construction or operation of the plant, apparatus or work hereby expropriated, and all other property of the said Company used and operated in connection with or as part of the system, plant or appliances used or operated by it within the City of Peterborough for supplying electrical power or energy to the customers of the Company and also all other property of the said Company within the said City which under the provisions of said Acts may be entered upon, acquired, taken possession of, expropriated and used by the Corporation of the said City, are hereby expropriated.

The question has been asked: "Did the Council know the properties owned by the Company when the above by-law was passed?"

It is, of course, admitted that the Council's idea of the Company's possessions did not include the Auburn dam and power house, which undoubtedly represent a large part of the $600,00 valuation made by the Company.

To an Examiner reporter a few days ago, Mr. A. B. Colville, counsel for the company, admitted that the transfer of the Auburn Power house and dam was registered during the summer.

And the city's by-law to exercise the power of expropriation was passed just two months ago, on October 21st.

From these facts it would appear that by applying at the Registry Office the Council could have learned that the Auburn plant was included in the Peterborough Light and Power Company's possessions in this city.

When the Council made application to Judge Huycke for possession of the properties covered by the by-law empowering them to expropriate, Mr. Colville objected to what he said was an attempt at examination for discovery on the part of the City Solicitor.

Then upon receiving copies of the affidavit of Mr. R. T. Jeffrey, whose valuation of the company's plant was $94,000.00, Mr. Colville submitted the affidavits of Mr. Munro and Mr. Almert, with their valuation of $600,000.

The question naturally arises as to what the result would have been if the Council had been in possession of the company's transference statement at the Registry Office.

BANK OF COMMERCE YEAR BIGGEST IN ITS HISTORY

In addition to the showing of larger profits which has been revealed in the recent year-end bank statements—for 1913 has been a good banking year — the most striking feature of these exhibits has been the exceptionally strong position in which banking institutions generally have placed themselves. Apparently the year has been as free from large losses in banking, as were those immediately previous. The latest annual statement to appear, that of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, which was issued last night, emhasized the leading features of the returns of the other banks which preceded it.

Profits are shown at $2,892,961, or almost twenty per cent. on the paid-up capital of $15,000,000, and 10.5 per cent. on the paid up capital and reserve. The bank's proprietors received this year a ten per cent. dividend and two bonuses of one per cent. each, the whole equal to $1,800,000. There was written off bank premises $500,000, being the same proportion for this purpose as last year. There was transferred to rest $1,000,000, as compared with $2,000,000 last year, and the reserve is now $13,500,000. The amount transferred to the pension fund was increased to $80,000, and the emaining balance of $384,529 was carried forward. This compares with $771,578 carried forward in 1912 and $203,394 carried forward in 1911.

Although the form of the bank statements this year has been changed in accordance with the bank act, rendering comparisons less easy, it will be seen that the Bank of Commerce loans amounting to $154,576,000, shows a falling off of over $9,000,000 from last year. This will probably be accurately interpreted as being occasioned largely by the remarkably rapid movement of the western crop this year and the speedy return of funds to the banks and the agricultural communities. At the close of November, 1912, the liquidation of the grain business was in a much more backward state than at the same date this year.

Aggregate deposits of the bank at the close of the year were $192,813,000, a decrease from the previous year of somewhat less than $5,000,000. It will be remembered that the Bank of Commerce deposits in the statement of 1912 showed an increase of some $51,000,000, and that the General Manager, referring to this unusual showing in his annual address to the shareholders, attributed a considerable portion of the large gain to the accession of special amounts, which he intimated would be shortly withdrawn.

The statement is also impressive in its presentation of assets. Liquid assets are set down at $97,388,000, or 37 per cent. of the total. These assets show an increase of over $20,000,000 upon 1912, and of $30,000,000 upon 1911. Approaching one-third of this amount, namely, $30,415,000, is held in gold and legals, these reserve being, roughly, $3,000,000 in excess of 1912. Total assets have increased to $260,-000,000 from $246,571,000.

In addition to the contribution to the pension fund the bank a few days ago authorized a ten per cent. bonus to its employees. It has since been estimated that as the Canadian Bank of Commerce staff numbers some 3,-000 people this special distribution will amount to some $300,000.

eral and Conservative journals of the West. The press agent also wrote a number of letters over the non de plume of "Observer." The farmers made up their minds to combat this with the result that a number cancelled their subscriptions with papers publishing "Observer's" letters. After that the grain combine hadn't enough money to buy a line of space in the papers and the press agent was without a job.

Mr. Chipman remarked that the newspaper managers were not fully informed as to the origin of the letters signed by "Observer"; if they had been the letters would not have been published.

A Good Thing.

"The attack," said the speaker, "was a good thing for the Association, as it flourished more than ever before. Another attempt was made to put it out of business by the withdrawal of advertisements from the Grain Growers' Guide. This attempt proved unsuccessful, as the farmers metaphorically said: "Well, if that is the game you are going to play, we will play it, too, and you can sell your goods elsewhere." The farmers have learned that it is in their best interests to do their own thinking. It has been a real good light and everybody feels better for it."

The farmers are now asking for a reduction in freight rates, the elimination of the land speculator and the removal of the tariff. They are also burdened with high bank charges. Interest on loans range all the way from six to twelve per cent. In conclusion Mr. Chipman said: "There is a feeling of goodwill on the part of the West towards the East and they are anxious to get together and join hands. All other institutions are organized and it is only right and proper that the farmers of Canada should organize. They represent the largest industry in the country."

Mr. Crerar's Address.

"There originally existed a popular fallacy that a farmers' organization, intended to work out on business lines, invariably failed," said Mr. T. A. Crerar, President of the Grain Growers' Grain Company of Manitoba. "This has worked out in a number of cases, but not so with the Grain Growers' Association of the West," said Mr. Crerar.

The Grain Growers' Association was organized under Provincial charter, and no farmer is allowed to hold more than four shares. The purpose of this is the control of the association by the farmer. At the time the Association was formed the grain trade of the West was converging into the hands of a few men, to the exclusion of the small commission man. The Association applied for and secured, strange to say, registration on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. The purpose of this was revealed later. A few weeks after its organization the Association was receiving upwards of one hundred cars per week. The business progressed for several weeks without any material opposition.

A Technicality.

"A technicality, re the division of the profits, was raised by the Winnipeg Grain Exchange that resulted in the cancellation of the Association's right to sell their grain through the Exchange. This was done with the object of destroying the organization effectively and utterly."

An action was then instituted against three members of the grain exchange for conspiring to restrain trade. This action was effective and resulted in a special act being passed by the Provincial Legislature, which gave the Winnipeg Grain Exchange a limited time in which to reinstate the Association. The original capital of the Association was five thousand dollars. This has been increased each year together with the dividends, which now amount to ten per cent.

Cheaper Flour

The Association also revokes the idea that the farmers cannot conduct their own business. We have extended our scope this year, continued Mr. Crerar, by engaging in the flour milling business. We secured control of a small mill and have been able to sell in Saskatchewan at 20 cents a sack cheaper than the large mills can lay it down to the retailers. We also found that farmers were paying from $5 to $6 a barrel for apples. By getting in touch with a Fruit Association in Ontario we were able to supply the farmers in the Prairie Provinces with apples at $4.50 a barrel.

Lumber at Cost.

"Coal and lumber have also been included in the enterprises of the Farmers' Association. We have a valuable timber limit in British Columbia, which will enable us to supply the farmer with lumber at cost.

Speaking of the natural resources of Canada, Mr. Crerar said that it was the duty of every citizen in Canada to combat the system that tends to destroy the natural resources of the country. Sir George Paish is reported to have said that during his recent visit to Canada the interest obligation of Canada to-day was $130,000,000 and it was safe to say that borrowed money was being used to liquidate old borrowed money.

"You have the possibilities of a splendid organization," said the speaker. Not along political lines, but along the lines that will make for a bigger and better citizenship.

A Dignified Calling.

"I do not think that there is anything that carries with it so much dignity as that of tilling the soil. A negative opinion is often expressed, but it only serves to reveal the ignorance of those who uphold that doctrine. The trouble is that the farmer fails in his responsibility to respect the vocation which he follows and, consequently cannot expect to invite the respect of others.

A verbal resolution, thanking the speakers and favouring a more extensive exchange of farm products between eastern and western Canada was adopted and brought to a conclusion one of the best attended meetings of its kind ever held in Peterborough.

It All Depends on the Liver

So important is the liver and so great is its influence on the other vital organs of the body that it may be said you have little to fear from the ordinary ills of life so long as the liver is in healthful working order. The digestive processes are so dependent on free action of the liver that any derangement of this organ soon brings trouble.

Biliousness and constipation follow, with headache and depressed spirits. Additional work is thrown on the kidneys and soon the whole eliminating system is deranged and the blood carries poisons through the body. Careful eating is a great help towards keeping the liver right, but when it does get wrong there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to restore the liver to healthful action.

With the secretion of bile by the liver, constipation and biliousness are cured, and the digestive and excretary systems are set in order. In a hundred the benefit obtained by a few doses of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills under these circumstances. A trial will convince you of their superior merit.

RELATION OF FARM PRODUCTION TO THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

Special to The Examiner:

BRANTFORD, Dec. 19.—"More food" as the solution of the high cost of living was submitted by Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., at the nominating convention for South Brant held in Brantford on Saturday afternoon when Joseph Hamm received the unanimous nomination for this constituency. Mr. Rowell said he realized the vital importance of the cost of living to the people of Ontario. Various methods of relief had been proposed in the Federal field such as the removal of food taxes and improved facilities of transportation, but these matters, lying as they did outside of the jurisdiction of the province, would not be discussed by him.

"Which we look at the facts, however," he said, "and realize that in Ontario to-day there are more consumers in the cities and fewer producers in the country than there were 10 years ago, one fundamental cause of thch igh cost of living is immediately disclosed. Not only has the rural population of Old Ontario declined by 100,000 in the last 10 years whereas the urban population has increased nearly half a million; but the actual production of good products has declined, also. In many cases there is less food being produced to-day than there was 13 years ago."

Mr. Rowell presented a series of figures in corroboration of his statement. He dealt largely with comparisons of acreage as being the safest and fairest grounds of comparison. In 1900, for example, there were 684,000 more acres devoted to the growing of wheat than there are to-day; in 1907 there were 200,000 acres more devoted to the production of oats than in 1913, 143,000 in the case of barley, and as for peas the figures to-day are 484,000 less than in 1900; the potato acreage is 18,000 less than in 1907, and the number of acres devoted to the production of turnips is 56,000 less than in 1900. Hay, on the other hand, has increased since 1900 by 900,000 acres, showing that large sections of the country, which used to be devoted to the growing of food products, is now simply producing hay. In many lines of live stock similar declines are apparent. There are 120,000 fewer milch cows to-day than in 1907, 178,000 fewer other cattle, 801,000 fewer sheep and lambs than in 1900, and 382,000 fewer swine than in 1907.

"The lesson from these figures," declared Mr. Rowell, "is plain. We must have a greater production of food products in the province. We read in Gulliver's travels the opinion 'whoever could make two ears of corn or two blades of grass to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before would deserve better of mankind and do more essential service to his country than the whole race of politicians put together.' If the man who can double the production of food is such a public benefactor as he undoubtedly is, a politician cannot do better than bend his efforts to help the farmer grow two ears of corn or two blades of grass where only one grew before. This is the ideal and objective the Liberal party of Ontario offers to the people."

Mr. Rowell said he had frequently heard President Creelman, of the Ontario Agricultural College, say that we could easily double our agricultural productiou if the best methods of agriculture were put into practice on every farm.

President Creeman's suggestions were: Careful selection of best variety and quality of seeds; suitable and adequate drainage; the use of proper fertilizers; the due rotation of crops; and the careful selection of feeding and breeding of live stock. To these there should be added, a sufficient supply of farm labour.

"An increased production of food products by these methods," declared Mr. Rowell, "would not only help the farmers of the province by giving them more produce to sell, but would be an inestimable boon to the city people who would have more food, and, therefore, cheaper food."

Mr. Rowell pointed out that Germany with not one-half the area of Ontario was producing 95 per cent. of the food products required by her 66,000,000 of people.

Mr. Rowell gave great praise to the work being done by the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. "This institution, however," he said, "is only touching a fragment of the farm life of the province. The problem is, how to distribute expert knowledge on agriculture and make it available to every farmer. The present system is like having an university without public and high schools; we should have more agricultural colleges. In Alberta there are three, and they are going to establish three or four more; the small province of New Brunswick has two, and in European countries there are agricultural colleges by the tens and by the scores."

Mr. Rowell acknowledged the fact that some special agricultural work was being done in the public continuation and high schools of the province now, but claimed that the Department was not really grappling with the problem. The Minister of Agriculture did not have the constructive ability necessary to remodel the whole system, and the Minister of Education who should co-operate in the work showed no sympathetic comprehension of the difficulties.

It was Mr. Rowell's opinion that between the Department of Education and the teachers and trustees of the schools there should be sympathy and confidence. At present the actual condition was one of irritation caused by much useless red tape by the centralizing tendency of the Department and by the autocratic domineering rule which was crushing out individual initiative.

Mr. Rowell pointed out the value which would accrue from the opening up of new agricultural districts in New Ontario and the consequent increase in production, and advocated an aggressive policy for this development.

Mr. Hamm, the nominee, in his speech, declared that he had never taken any active part in a political organization, but was going into this fight because the present issues, particularly the temperance issue, made the impending conflict not so much one between parties as a battle for principles and polities, and one which he was anxious to enter to fight for the abolition of the bar. Up to the present Mr. Hamm has always been known as either an Independent or an Independent Conservative. This was said by Liberals present to be the best Liberal Convention held in Brantford in the last 20 years.

Mr. Rowell referred to the fact that this was the first Liberal nomination for the next General Election. "To this extent," he declared, "therefore, the fight is now on, and the campaign is opened."

In the evening Mr. Rowell addressed another large meeting at which he discussed problems particularly relating to the workingmen.

Escaped From Wreck.

LORETTE, Man., Dec. 22. — The C.N.R. train from Duluth and Fort William was derailed near here yesterday and five coaches and a baggage and dining-car overturned into the ditch. The wreckage caught fire but the two hundred passengers escaped through windows, scratched and bruised, and helped extinguish the flames. A relief train from Winnipeg returned there last night with the passengers. A broken rail caused the accident. Three day coaches and all the baggage belonging to the passengers were destroyed by the fire before outside brigades had subdued the blaze.

A TYPICAL CASE

A Lesson for Fur Buyers and Others to Buy at Home

In spite of the high-cost-of-living prices that to-day prevail in all places of business, the average storekeeper may be said to be a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. One of the sternest troubles he has to contend against is the mail-order competition; and this is greatly accentuated in a season like this when the weather conditions have been so much against business. If one wants to know how this mail-order business is eating into some of our local storekeepers' business, get al ine on some of the fur or dry goods stores, and you will hear stories that have a lot of truth in them. First, there is the lure of long distance shopping; then there is the lure of the supposed bargain. If it were not for the ravages of the catalogue house, this matter of outside buying would soon cease. Why will a customer make an outright foolish purchase from a mail-order house that he or she would not think of making from a local merchant?

A Case in Point.

In instance, a very intelligent well-dressed lady, dropped into Barrie's fur store a short time ago, and, according to the salesman, the following conversation occurred:

"I'd like to see some Marmot."

"What piece would you like to see?"

"I want to see some neckpieces."

The salesman showed her several pieces in different grades, one of which the lady liked very much, and said:

"I bought a set in Toronto some time ago, but the neckpiece—is not good—at least, I don't like it, and I wanted to get another to take the place of it."

"All right," said the salesman, "we will be glad to sell you; and if this piece suits you the price will be——" naming a figure only slightly in advance of the Toronto specimen, but a much larger, finer and more luxurious article of fur.

The lady returned the Toronto article after considerable trouble and anxiety. Closed the matter with the house, but said she had learned a lesson to spend her money at home.

Case after case have been cited where our citizens have rued sending their money out of town for goods which they could have bought for less money in our own stores and in better qualities.

One of the big mail-order houses of Chicago cleared $8,822,610 last year. The likelihood is that some of its employees were paid as much as from $3 to $5 per week. Most of the money made by this firm came from the pockets of confiding people hundreds of miles away, who did not care to spend their money at home.

When a couple are newly married, they feel as if they could devour each other. After the lapse of a year or so, they regret that they did not follow their first inclination.

Municipal Candidates Must Travel With The Elector

New Statutes Do Away With Hiring of Vehicles to Take Rate-payers to Polls at Expense of the Candidates, Unless the Candidate Personally Rides With the Voter to the Polls.

Municipal candidates in the coming City elections will be in contravention of the Municipal Act of 1913, if they hire a horse, team, carriage, cab, vehicle, boat or vessel to transport voters to the polls—unless, perchance they keep on riding in the said carriage, cab, vehicle, boat or vessel. Leaving boats and vessels out of the reckoning, as a frolicsome impossibility, there being no navigable water available in Peterborough in January, it means that liverymen, cab owners, etc., will not reap much of a harvest on January 5. The only way out is for a candidate to hire a vehicle and keep on riding in it every time it calls for a voter.

The clauses in question are as follows:

1. A candidate, who himself or by any other person on his behalf and every other person who:

(a) Hires or promises to pay or pays for a conveyance to carry a voter to or near or from or on the way to and from a polling place; or

(b) Pay the travelling or other expenses of a voter in going to or returning from a polling place and every person who for a valuable consideration provides or furnishes a conveyance, knowing that it is to be used to carry a voter other than the hirer to, or near or from or on the way to or from a polling place shall be guilty of a corrupt practice and shall incur a penalty of $100, and if a voter shall be disqualified from voting at the election; but this sub-section shall not apply to the carrying of voters to the poll in a conveyance used by the candidate personally on polling day.

2. Every person who provides or furnishes transportation free of charge or at a diminished rate to a voter to or near, or from, or on the way to or from a polling place, and whether passes or tickets or the like are or are not supplied, shall be guilty of a corrupt practice and shall incur a penalty of $100, and, if a voter, shall be disqualified from voting at the election.

3. "Conveyance," for the purposes of this section, shall include a horse, team, carriage, cab, vehicle, boat or vessel, 8 Edw. VII, c. 3, 171.

COBALT AND COBALT LAKE, WHICH IS TO BE DRAINED IN SEARCH FOR SILVER.—Ever since Cobalt was discovered as a silver camp, an idea has prevailed that the bottom of this muddy pond was literally lined with silver. Various methods have been employed to get at it, but without success, and there is a proposal before the Ontario Government now to drain the lake. Three or four operating companies are vitally interested in the project.

ELOPED WITH PRINTER'S WIFE

After Much Pressure the Runaway Wife Accompanied Number One Husband Back to Barrie

A Barrie printer arrived in Lindsay on Friday to claim his wife, whose affections had been alienated by a certain young Lindsay man who for many years has been engaged here in the horse business. It must have been love at first sight when the Barrie woman cast her eyes upon the round, plump form of the Lindsay Appolo as they had only been acquainted a few days when the elopement took place. During this time her husband was in Galt, providing a home for this rantipole adventuress who essayed a honeymoon trip with her newly-acquired love.

On arriving in Town the couple took up their quarters with a friend in the South Ward, where they lived as man and wife until the arrival of husband No. 1. After much persuasion on his part she accompanied him home, leaving own on the 6.23 train last evening.—Lindsay Warder.

THE ACID TEST OF THE CHRISTMAS GIFT

At this time the thoughts of the majority of human beings are centered on the Day not so far off that has been submerged 'neath a load of gifts. It is the unusual person that does not add to his list of ones that are remembered each year a few more, until the spirit of the season is swamped under the incoming bills: Good sense is shelved, pretence reigns and the merry Christmas idea dies of startion. We have commercialized a sacred thought and ought to be ashamed of it.

Suppose, just for a few minutes of your valuable time, that you take youself by the hand and walk into the cruel but truthful light of analysis. Are you sincere in your giving and receiving? Do you say to yourself when you are apportioning the amount of money that you are going to spend, "I must give her something nice —about five dollars' worth—because she always give me a fine present?" And do you scratch a name because last year there was nothing coming from the friend who had up to that time exchanged gifts with you? "Exchanged gifts!" Why, the very thought of exchange robs a gift of its sweetness, its real worth. Yet how often do we desecrate the idea of gifts and Christmas by thinking of the exchange, the value received, the balance sheet!

I know a man who has rebelled against the present-day attitude of Christmas by scratching all his friends' names. In their stead, he has written the names of all who are known to him in a semibusiness way; the elevator man, the poor little woman who scrubs his office doors, the impudent messenger boy, the newsie at the entrance of his office building, the laundress, the grocer's boy who occasionally delivers a bundle of eats for a spread in his bachelor rooms—all are on his list. I am not. Moreover, I was informed that I need never hope to be, unless some day I shall take to scrubbing floors. You will see how each one of the few that I have mentioned cannot think of giving presents to the one who has successfully worked out his idea. There is no thought of exchange in his mind; he really gives part of his heart with the gifts, and the joy of giving it wonderfully fine in its effete on the ones who receive worn off or eaten through, and to a sincere, honest soul the gift in its mockery is soon seen. It is worth nothing. If you have made yourself and on him. The acid test can be applied to his gifts; they will stand it.

Within your knowledge there is the woman who will deliberately drag out her shirtwaist box or the bottom bureau drawer, and from packages stowed away from other years she will take out gifts and re-mark them! Think of this kind of giving! Better none at all than a vicarious spirit that can never ring true. You know of the faux pas of one woman who forgot to look thoroughly in the box, and when the delighted recipient took out the present the card of the first giver fell to the ground. I am inclined to think that an ideal fell to the ground.

There are perfectly ridiculous women who try to make an impression on their friends by giving expensive presents. Strangely enough, these women do not forget themselves by going into debt to buy gifts for the family. Their extravagance seems to be confined to the ones who could very well afford to do without presents that are reeking with money. The poor washerwoman in the back street is probably forgotten. This kind of gift will not suffer the acid test in safety. The pretence is soon unworthy of the name of a Christmas giver, stop it. The square shoulders and clear eyes of self-respect that will be yours will attest to the fact that the gift without the heart is bare indeed.

You have heard the not unusual buyer say in a tired and irritated voice, "Oh, let's give Aunt Annie anything. Get her a handkerchief." That is a fine gift, isn't it? The best wishes for a happy Yuletide are about as valuable as the thought that is took to think of a handkerchief while passing the counter.

When you receive a gift on Christmas day in the morning do not turn it over to look for the price mark: by all means, do not let the cost of it enter into your appreciation of it; do not try to exchange the present just to see how much was paid for it, as a head of a department in one of our large stores has told me is the customary thing. Do not judge a gift by the box in which it comes; sometimes the donor knows you better than you think and changes the outer case to deceive you. May you never throw a gift to the winds because it is cheap. If you cannot read the thought behind the gift, then this season is not for you. I hope that every one who rates a gift in the terms of dollars and cents will some day have the good grace to be ashamed of this scornworthy attitude.

In these few days that precede Christmas are you thinking of the poor who are not going to have any Christmas? Do you stop before a window filled with toys and when, a cold, dirty wistful little face is pressed against the pane, do you remember that you have to catch a train? For shame. Have you ever seen a hospital free ward on Christmas day? There is a tree, to be sure; there are some smiles on the faces of the poor, but there is always room for a bigger smile and for more of them. Take that bunch of roses that Jack sent you and give one to each poor invalid in a ward; do not give it in a superior way. Even a single rose must stand the acid test of the gift.

If you can put a little of your heart in a gift, there need be no fear on your part that it will not come out triumphant. To the least of us will the heart ever appeal. It has been said, "Whatever I have given I still possess." You cannot take away the heart from the giver, even though he has put it in his gift.

Remember that "every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

Are your presents standing the acid test.

THE FISH CASE ONCE AGAIN

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—Is it possible that in Christian Canada five young men who have nobly tried to fight fortune and gain an honest living have been stopped by the police on behalf of the storekeepers of this city and ordered to procure a license at $40 each. I think all honour is due to the men who have so nobly put their shoulders to the wheel in an endeavour to keep out of debt. It may be rightly argued that the storekeepers are entitled to some protection, but is there not some consideration due to the working man at a time like this, men who give their best working power to the country, and when misfortune overtakes them in the shape of depression of trade, are all means of earning an independent livelihood to be closed against them, are they to beg, steal, or get into debt? If such is the case no wonder the Ministerial Association recommend more policemen. It may be a case of back to the land to work for their board, to enable the poor farmer to sell his eggs at 50 cents a dozen. I am,

Thumbscrews.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 22. — That Huerta must relinquish the Presidency of Mexico before New Year's day, to avert a financial crash, was the decision arrived at by the business men of this City, yesterday, in a secret meeting. A committee was appointed to interview Hurta to-day and lay the proposition before him.

Former Local Man Called To Boston Church

Examiner Special:

BOSTON, Dec. 22.— Rev. William Herbert Dewart, formerly of Peterborough, has been called to fill the historic pulpit of the old North Church, of which Bishop William Lawrence has been rector since October, 1908. It was from the steeple of this famous church that lanterns were hung on April 18, 1775, notifying Paul Revere of the British march to Concord and Lexington. Bishop Lawrence had agreed to act as rector only until the right man could be found for the place, and the wardens of the church have now announced that Rev. Mr. Dewart is, in their opinion, the best suited for the rather unusual position, of any of the distinguished men who have been under consideration.

Rev. Mr. Dewart was born at Norwood, Ont., July 19, 1863, and is a son of Rev. James H. Dewart, who preached at Peterborough and other Ontario towns.

Looters Are Courtmartialled

Special Wire to The Examiner:

CHIHAUHUA, Mexico, Dec. 22.—Any one who hereafter loots or molests the property of foreigners or Mexicans will be executed. General Francisca Villa issued this order today as showing his intention to maintain a strict military discipline. As an example he executed a band of rebels who had been found guilty by a Court Martial of sacking the home of wealthy Mexicans. Six rebels were marched before the firing squad. The stolen goods were returned to the owners.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 22.—Hon. Dr. Pyne, who also lives at the Hotel Manhattan, and is attending Sir James Whitney, could not be located by your representative here this morning. The impression prevails here that Sir James Whitney's condition is not at all serious, although twenty would-be interviewers, mostly newspaper men, were denied admittance to Sir James' rooms to-day.

TURNBULL'S

PASSENGERS, FREIGHT AND XMAS MAIL

Are Keeping the Railway, Express Companies, Post Office and Customs Authorities Busy

NO FREIGHT CONGESTION

The Christmas rush has taken hold of the railway and express companies, and the Postal and Custom's authorities.

On Saturday a large number of extra coaches had been added to the regular complement of the passenger trains of both the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk railways. And even at that the extra accommodation was not sufficient for the number of passengers going to and from, or passing through this city.

On Friday last the amount of freight that was handled by the G. T. R. here was larger than it has been for some time, and train after train of cars laden with Christmas freight came to or passed through the city. As yet there is no congestion on either line.

The post office is beginning to come under the influence of the rush. While all the English mail has gone out, a veritable deluge of parcels is being handled in the local office, coming from the three old countries of Great Britain. The postmen's load has already increased, and extra help has to be secured for them to handle the delivery of them all from now till Christmas.

MONKEY WITH DRUG HABIT

PARIS, Dec. 22.—Dr. Marcel Briand showed an interesting case last night at a meeting of the Clinical Society of Mental Medicines—a monkey suffering from a drug habit.

The monkey was the pet of a woman cocaine taker and the extraordinary feature of the case is that the monkey acquired the habit spontaneously and not by imitation of his mistress. The animal searches ceaselessly for the drug, and snuffs it up with his nose. It appears to experience the sensations and all the hallucinations of sight and touch of human beings addicted to the habit.

PROFESSIONAL FUNERAL GOERS

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 22.—It is estimated that there are five hundred women in this City who are professional funeral goers.

These women haunt cemeteries and watch funeral processions and crowd up to grave sides gazing morbidly at casket and mourners. The park commissioners have decided to start a movement to keep these women out of the cemeteries on the ground that they have made themselves public pests."

Gifts For Children At The Shelter

The Examiner Will Take Charge of Donations Sent In

Citizens of Peterborough are asked not to forget the eleven little children at the Children's Aid Society Shelter whose Christmas will be a cheerless one unless the people of the city come to the rescue as they have done in past Yuletides. Gifts of toys, books, clothing, candies, etc., will be received by the Examiner and forwarded to the Children's Aid Society. Send your donations in at once.

A "JOKE" WHICH WAS FATAL

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—One of those "jokes" which fond friends play upon young bridal couples resulted in the death at Somerville, N.J., of George Stassett, a young man who was trying to help a bride and bridegroom escape the humorists.

Abraham Holcombe and Miss Mary Inez Compton, were wedded at Pluckemin, near Somerville. Their friends, planning to kidnap the couple, put water in the gasoline of their automobile. Stassett, who sympathised with them, offered to drive them to Somerville in his machine.

The delay caused by the tampering with the first motor car made it necessary for Stassett's car to drive at a fairly high rate of speed in order to get the Hodcombes to the town so they might take a train for New York.

Rounding a curve the car hit a heavy truck drawn by a pair of horses and upset. The driver was struck by the pole of the truck and injured internally so that he died in Somerset Hospital in Somerville. The bride and bridegroom were cut and bruised, but not seriously. They were taken back to the bride's home.

Robert O. Bogret, a friend who occupied the front seat of the machine with Stassett, sustains a fractured rib when the car overturned. He said the collision happened because, in the darkness, Stassett thought the other vehicle was proceeding in the same direction he was.

DIED WHILE SAYING PRAYERS

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BRAMPTON, ONT., Dec. 22.—James Lyons, aged 41, of Terra Cotta, died very suddenly while praying beside his bed on Friday night. His body was not discovered until Sunday evening, when his brother visited his home when he didn't see him around. Lyons was unmarried and lived alone. The body was brought to the home of his father here for burial.

FIRST TEA IN ENGLAND.

The earliest record of tea being mentioned by an Englishman was probably that contained in a letter from Mr. Wickham, an agent of the East India company, on June 27, 1615, to another officer of the company, resident at Macao, in the south of China, asking him for "a pot of the best sort of chaw." It was not until the middle of that century that the English began to use tea; they received their supplies from Java until 1686, when they were driven out by the Dutch, says the bulletin of the Imperial institute. At first the price in England ranged from 6 to 10 pounds per pound. In the Mercurius Politicus of September, 1658, occurs an advertisement of the "China Drink called by the Chinese, Teha, by other nations Tay, alias Tee," being sold in London. Thomas Garway, the first English tea dealer, in 1659 or 1660, offered it at prices ranging from 16 shillings to 50 shillings per pound. Not until 1677 is there a record of the East India Company having taken any steps for its importation.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

A well-known poet and benedict is accredited with a bon mot. A lady the other day said to him:

"Oh, Mr ——, I have just seen your wife for the first time since your marriage. But I had supposed that she was a taller woman. She seems shorter than when I met her."

"Certainly," replied the poet, solemnly. "She has married and settled down, you know."

BASEBALL

There is no doubt but that the Canadian League will take in Erie, Pa., when the meeting to decide upon the make-up of the circuit is held next month. In spite of reports to the contrary, Erie fans are quite ready for Canadian League ball, and are ready to receive a Canadian Leaggue team with open arms. At the last meeting of the League, when George H. O'Neill of London, purchased the Guelph Club from Owner W. A. Mahoney, he said: "I can do two things with the franchise. I can sell it to a party of Guelph fans for $3,000, or I can take it to Erie, where a stock company is being suggested, and secure $5,000-worth of stock in the Erie Company in return for the franchise. This latter production looks good to me, and I intend to run over to Erie inside of a few weeks."

Mr. O'Neil has been in Erie; in fact, just returned from there yesterday, and the success of his visit is best told in the following dispatch from London:

London, Dec. 18.—George O'Neill, director of the London Baseball club, and owner of the Guelph Canadian League franchise, returned from a trip to Buffalo and Erie, Pa., where he dealt with matters pertaining to baseball of interest to Canadian League fans and promoters.

As far as the Canadian League having to wait until January 1st before they can go ahead in the matter of taking in the Erie territory, it will not be necessary stated Director O'Neill, as the men interested in baseball in the American city are not making the slightest effort to reconstruct the old league which "blew up" before the end of last season.

Mr. O'Neil was a welcome visitor, taking everything into consideration, the Erie people are anxious to buy the Guelph club from him. If Erie has a baseball club in 1914 it will be under a Canadian League franchise, and from what Mr. O'Neill says, the League should not hesitate in taking them in, as the City affords a beautiful baseball park, easy of access, and as a ball town is and has been better than any of the cities now holding franchises in the Canadian League.

Considering the fact that he has two cities anxious to buy his holdings, Mr. O'Neill is open to do business with the highest bidder, but it is expected that the holders of other franchises will have some say just which proposition they favour. Guelph, it is said, has raised a certain amount to purchase the franchise from the present owner, while the Erie people stand ready to make th purchase should the other clubs in the circuit favour the idea of admitting them to the Canadian League.

The exact complexion of the 1914 Canadian League will, however, not be known until after an early meeting of the league directors in January, and then probably the removal of the Berlin Club will also be completed since the owners there have been angling with probable purchasers of the franchise.

At the January meeting a schedule committee will be appointed and the League be put upon the fourth successful term, with perhaps two clubs removed from the circuit and two others added as was the instance in 1913 and then no mistake was made.

It was announced last night that George O'Neill, owner of the Guelph Baseball franchise, had disposed of half interest in his holdings to Edgar Rechniter, Manager of the Dominion Abattoir, of this City, for the sum of $1,500. This deal transpired before Owner O'Neill went to Buffalo, where he disposed of Outfielder Wright for the sum of $750, this amount going to both present owners.

It was thought at the time that the local baseball magnate presided of the Guelph club that he would have a white elephant on his hands, but from present indications will be seen that his confidence in Canadian League franchise was well founded.

The proposition of selling the Guelph franchise to the Erie people which seems popular among Canadian League circles since the new territory affords greater opportunities for the circuit, seems inevitable, as the offer of $5,000 for the franchise sems favourable to Erie, and this figure could hardly be expected from the Guelph business men who are making a bid to retain the Club in Guelph.

In fairness to all concerned, it would be well to point out that Mr. O'Neill does not claim that he can get $5,000 cash for the Guelph franchise. He means that he can get $5,000 in stock in the new company that would be formed in Erie to take over the Club. As Erie is one real ball ball town, Mr. O'Neill thinks that deal would be better than selling out to the Guelph Club. As he has already sold a player for $750, and a half interest in the club for $1500, after purchasing the club for $3,000, Mr. O'Neil has already made a pretty nice clean-up on the deal.

The news that Erie will likely come into the Canadian League circuit will mean much to those at present interested, as it will also mean the replacing of Niagara Falls for Berlin, and making one grand, strong circuit.

LEADERS IN BRITISH SOCCER DROP ONE POINT OR MORE

Extremes Meet in Southern When Topnotchers Go Down Before Tailenders--Blackburn Rovers Vanquished by Manchester United--Hamilton Clips Kilmarnock's By 6-0.

The unexpected happened, and Manchester United returned to Old Trafford with the scalps of the doughty Blackburn Rovers. Even the most enthusiastic "United" supporter would have been satisfied to tie the game with the "Rovers" at Blackburn Saturday, such a thing as capturing the two points was unthought of, but it was done, and by an odd goal at that.

Derby County gave Newcastle United a surprise at Derby, while Liverpool jumped on Sheffield United at Sheffield. It was a bad day for the Sheffield teams, as while the "United" were beaten at Sheffield, the "Wednesday" team were only able to get one point off the "Spurs" at Tottenham.

Notts Lose a Point.

Notts County, leaders of the Second Division, only managed to break even with Lincoln City at Lincoln, the game ending with the score sheet a blank. Four teams in this division who were playing away from home captured the two points from their opponents. The "Peacocks" continued to keep up their good work by downing Birmingham in the latter city, while Barnsley had to bow before Hull City, the score in both cases was 2 to 0. The "Wolves" ate up Bury at Bury, by 4 goals to 1. Fulham advanced one step further towards the top by beating Bristol City.

Swindon Town Defeated.

Cardiff, the tailenders of the Southern League, journeyed to Swindon Saturday to meet their rivals at the top of the league table. It looked an easy thing for Swindon, but the glorious uncertainty of soccer football showed itself, and the Cardiff team journeyed back home rejoicing, and with two more points to their credit. The "Palace" are now coming along strong, and although they only got a 1 to 0 decision over Gillingham on the famous enclosure Saturday, it means two more valuable points. Four tie games were played in this division, as well as the second, while two away-from-home teams won. Norwich city downed Coventry at Coventry, and the latter team dropped to the bottom of the table.

Celtic Still Lead.

Celtic were in danger at Celtic Park Saturday, where they were entertaining Motherwell, who held them to a goalless draw. Hearts are close on their heels in the running for Scottish League honours, and by beating Clyde Saturday are only one point behind. Hamilton Academicals took Kilmarnock into camp and whitewashed them 6 to 0, while Rangers beat Dundee in "Bonny Dundee." The following are to-day's league standing compiled up to date:

PLANNING FOR FINAL IN OFFICERS' LEAGUE

Peterboro' Will Figure in Officers' Inter-Provincial Indoor Baseball League

MONTREAL, Dec. 22. — Captain Gerard Muntz of the Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto, visited Montreal and had a meeting with the representatives of the Montreal Garrison, in connection with the Officers' Inter-Provincial Indoor Baseball League.

The winners of the Hamilton and Brantford League will play the winners of the St. Catharines and Guelph League, and the winners of these two Leagues will play the winners of the London and Walkerville League.

Simultaneously, the winners of the Kingston, Brockville, and Belleville League will play the winners of the Peterborough and Ottawa League, and the winners of these two leagues will play the winners of the Toronto Leagues.

The teams winning the two sections with the winning team of the Montreal League, in which there are ten teams playing at present, will play their final games in Toronto as soon after the various leagues have finished the schedules, which will decide the Inter-Provincial championship.

Colonel Burland, commanding the Third Victoria Rifles, who are presenting the championship cup, has already decided on the design, which will prove a handsome trophy. Each team in the schedule will subscribe $5, which will form a fund out of which will be purchased individual souvenirs for the players of the winning team and to defray expenses in connection with the final games.

Mercantile Hockey League

Important Meeting Held Last Saturday Adjourned Until Tuesday, December 23

A meeting of the above League was held at 8 p.m. on Saturday last at the offices of "The Review," Hunter Street, there being a full attendance of officers and delegates Owing to a difficulty as regards the Rink, it was found necessary to reduce the number of teams from eight to six.

After an animated discussion a vote was taken by which preference was given to four teams who were in last year's League and these, by a coincidence, happened to be the same as those who were the first to join the League this year with the exception of the Lockworks team, which fell out before the second meeting, their place being at once filled by the Plumbers' team, which aggregation was in last year's league. A draw was taken for two out of the four teams which had recently applied for admission, the result being that the Test Room (C. G. E.) and Bankers were successful.

As some more important matters were brought forward the meeting was adjourned until Tuesday (tomorrow) night, at 8 o'clock, at the Review offices, at which all officers and members of the Executive and delegates are requested to bee present.

The League as re-formed, consists of the following teams:

Bankers.
C. and P.
Examiner.
Plumbers.
Test Department.
Tool Department.

A motion was put down for discussion on Tuesday to rescind the article in the Constitution barring O. H. A. players of the present year from playing.

THE SEASON'S GREETINGS FROM CHAPDELAINE

In a Christmas card to the sporting editor of The Examiner, "Chappy" Chapdelaine, the utility player of the Peterborough Baseball Club, requests The Examiner to express his best Christmas wishes to all the Peterborough baseball fans. Chappy is wintering at his home in New Bedford, Mass.

Hockey--That's All

A big squad of hockey players worked out at the canal on Saturday. There were players of all sizes, ages and grades, and a lively practice game was played. Denison, Kennealiy, Flowers, Kelly, and Gerow, were among the Intermediate players out, while Phelan, Barrie, Long and Regan represented the Juniors. Jerry Coughlin, who is home from Ingersoll for Christmas was out for a workout, as were Wilfred Stratton, Harold Matthews and a number of the other boys home from college.

Fred Denison has been invited to take in the trip of the Ottawa College team to the United States, and will go if he gets the necessary permission from the O.H.A. Peterborough will be well represented as Harold Morrow and Leo Derocher will also accompany the Collegians.

There will be the usual workout at Brock St. Rink to-night at 7 o'clock, and a full attendance is requested. All junior players are asked to be on hand as it is likely that a captain will be elected at to-night's workout.

Pete Campbell starred for the Varsity senior team in a game against the Argonauts on Saturday, leading in the scoring.

IF IN DOUBT---GIVE FURS

DOES any gentleman know of anything, in the whole realm of woman's fancy, that equals rich Furs? We've no use for the cheap and tawdry kind, any more than you want imitation diamonds. Our whole purpose here is to have a store so good and acceptable, that the best people will patronize it without a question.

This is exclusively a Fur Store, anyone buying good Furs can be sure of good values. We're Furriers by trade and reputation. We know the business as we know the alphabet. The people we have around us are all experts, or they wouldnt be here.

That's why this is the best Christmas store. Not second best, but best!

Reliable FURS at reliable price Reductions

THERE are no exaggerated values here to make the bar gains seem greater—just plain facts and figures, nothing more. A policy that has gone hand in hand with the department since it has been created—one that is responsible for its present popularity and responsible to no small extent for the feeling among fur buyers that it is indiscreet to make Furs purchases that are not backed by BARRIE'S guarantee and reputation.

THE GREATEST HAPPINESS

Comes To Ourselves When We Make Others Happy With Our Gifts

THE value of a gift consists, not in costliness or variety, but in the feelings of affection, or regard, or sympathy, or honour, which it is supposed to carry. It is time that both giver and receiver realised this. Too often the spirit of Christmas is utterly sacrificed in the contest between the desire to spend and the duty of refraining. For a gift to be worth the giving, no sacrifice of duty must be entered into it. A tiny flower given in love and simplicity is better than a rare and costly gem procured with worry and doubt. When you give something to wear, you exhibit good sense, good taste and good judgement.

George Powell's "Manuella" Had A Good Summer In The Racing Game

Last year when C. H. Boyes, of Kingston, brought over from the States the brown pacing mare Manuella, 2:07 1-4 he secured one of the best pacers owned and raced in Eastern Ontario in recent years. Mr. Boyes raced the mare a number of times early in the past season, with the loss of but one race which was a postponed event, and last July on the day that the entries for the Montreal meeting closed he sold her to the veteran Belleville trainer, Geo. Powell. Mr. Powell rushed entries to Montreal and started the mare there in the 2.10 pace and free-for-all. She won the 2.10 event in straight heats, stepping her three miles in the fast time of 2.09 1-4, 2.09 3-4 and 2.10 1-4 and proved herself one of the most capable pacers owned in Ontario. In fact, Hal B. Jr., 2.02 1-4 looked like the only province owned one that had anything on her. Two days after her fast race she was started back in the free-for-all, which proved the fastest race ever decided over the Delorimier track, but was not so good as in her previous start. She lacked the necessary fast racing to key her up for the pace she was obliged to set in select company, but in spite of this handicap she was third and not very far back when Hal. B. Jr. won the second heat in 2.05 1-4, a new track record, and, I believe, the fastest second heat ever paced in Canada in a race over a half-mile track.

Manuella was a good race mare when owned across the border and there was no doubt more than one owner of a half-mile track free-for-aller was glad to see her go to Canada. While she came to this country with a mile track record of 2.07 1-4 and a half-mile track record of 2.10, she gradually improved and as Mr. Boyes put it, she could 2.10 over any good half-mile track. Mr. Powell, her present owner, is one of Ontario's pioneer trainers who has had a long and successful career with the harness horse. He has raced many good pacers and should, in the future, give the free-for-all horse a lot of trouble with Manuella.

In addition to Manuella, Mr. Powell had in his stable this season, the pacing mare, Clara C. 2.24 1-4. Clara commenced the season green and made the rounds at the fall fair meetings for a little education, getting her label in the 2.25 class at Oshawa where she defeated a pretty good field of horses. In her race at Belleville, a half mile heat event, she stepped one half in 1.07 1-2, and all fall acted like one that will bear watching in the slow classes next season. In six starts she won five races and was once second. A brief summary of Manuella's races this season follows:

Picton, May 24—Free-for-all, 3-1-2-1-3 and second to Adrian Pointed. Time 2.23 1-4, 2.17, 2.23, 2.17, 2.21 1-4.

Kingston, June 3 — Free-for-all, 1-1-1. Time 2.14 1-4, 2.17 1-4, 2.20 1-2.

Monteral, July 21—2.10 pace, purse $400, 1-1-1. Time 2.09 1-4, 2.09 3-4, 2.10 1-4 and Free-for-all 3-3-4-4-4 and fourth to Pickles. Hal B. Jr. and Mansfield. Time 2.09 1-4, 2.05 1-4, 2.05 1-2, 2.11 1-4, 2.09 1-4.

Belleville, Sept. 1. — Free-for-all, 1-1-1, no time reported.

Oshawa, Sept. 10—Free-for-all, 2-2 1-1-1. Time 2.14 1-4, 2.14 3-4, 2.15, 2.17 1-4, 2.15.

Peterborough, Sept. 15—Free-for-all, 1-1-1 Time 2.16, 2.13, 2.13 1-2.

Lindsay, Sept. 20—Free-for-all, 1-1-1. Time 2.16 3-4, 2.15 1-4, 2.15 1-4.

CHAMPIONSHIPS AND HOW THEY MAY BE WON

Pay Attention to Juniors is Ralph Ripley's Advice

The following by Ralph Ripley in the Hamilton Spectator, was written in connection with Rugby, but you could substitute hockey or any other sport, and the article would apply with equal force:

What is the reason of the success of a champion team? There are several points.

1. A good executive that will handle the business affairs of the club and leave the playing end of the game entirely in the hands of the coach and captain.

2. A coach given absolute control of the players on the field.

3. A captain who will get out of his players in the game what the coach has taught them in practice.

4. A number of players, anxious, willing, determined and loyal.

How are we going to get all that? By starting at the bottom, as you do in any line, with young players; hold them together, have football talks by the older players, study the game, study your mistakes on the field, in practice and in the game. When the executive is elected do not elect a man because he played or did not play, not because he is your favourite, but because he is absolutely the best man available. Elect your captain because he is a real leader.

As to you who play — live so that when you start to train you have a foundation to start on, a body and mind ready to do something worth while; do not play to be a better player than the others, or to be mentioned in the despatches, but play the game to be of the greatest value to your team, your club and your own manhood.

To the clubs and unions let me add a word. Your strength lies in the strength of your junior and intermediate teams, and your senior team is but the matured result of your attention to the juniors.

ANNUAL MEETING OF BALL CLUB

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club will be held to-night at 8:15 o'clock. All those interested in baseball are invited to attend.

GOLF IS THE LATEST EARLY WINTER SPORT

Golf has become a winter sport in Peterborough. On Saturday afternoon a crowd of young people were skating up and down the canal in view of the links where a number of enthusiasts were making the rounds of the "gawf" course. Nearly every afternoon during the present month golfers have been enjoying the old game, and at present it might be expected that Christmas will provide better golfing than sleighing.

INVESTIGATION BY THE O. H. A. ON SATURDAY

There is nothig in the rumouir that he will be Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

SMILE THAT CAME OFF.

"Look pleasant," said the photographer. The sitter raised his eyes and gave a sickening smirk. "Your head just a little more to the left, please," suggested the voice from the black shroud. "No, don't move the eyes."

Like a man suffering from a stiff neck or an Eiffel Tower collar, the sitter tilted his head gingerly till it reached the desired angle, and he resembled a dying fish trying not to mind.

"That's very nice; very nice, indeed," said the photographer. "Stay just there while I make the exposure." He removed the cap as he spoke and counted out a minute and three-quarters. "Thank you," he observed. "You can get up. I'm afraid you have been sitting on your hat."

"My hat!" roared the sitter, angrily, regarding the flattened felt. "Why the dickens didn't you tell me I was sitting on my hat?"

"My dear sir," protested the photographer, blandily, "that would have spoiled your expression."

The woman who goes through her husbands pockets regularly is bound to find something some time that will cause her to wish she hadn't.

JUDGE IS EXEMPT

Income Tax Can't Be Levied on Federal Officer, Says Court

TEST CASE GIVEN TRIAL

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—Judge McGibbon of Brampton has rendered a decision in favor of the plaintiff in the action brought by Judge Morson against the City of Toronto, to recover taxes paid by him under protest on his income received by him from the Dominion Government as a judge of the County Court of York. The judgment is of considerable importance to Dominion Government officials in Ontario at least, and will likely be followed all over Canada. Lengthy written arguments on all aspects of the question were submitted by R. A. Reid, counsel for Judge Morson, and by William Johnston and B. W. Essery, counsel for the City of Toronto.

Judge McGibbon holds that no authority can be found in the British North America Act authorizing the imposition of an income tax on Dominion Government officials by, or through municipalities under the authority of provincial legislation, and that under a Federal system of government such as obtains in Canada, one Government cannot tax another, nor tax the means and instrumentalities used by each, such as officials and employes engaged in maintaining and carrying on its powers and authority and the various departments of government, and executing and administering the law and other affairs of state.

He also holds that the Ontario Assessment Act does not authorize the imposition of any such tax on Federal officers, but that, on the contrary, the act impliedly exempts them from such tax, and does not apply to Canadian Government officials at all. He says the weight of judicial decision and authority is all against the contentions of the defendant, and the Privy Council decision relied upon by the City of Toronto is not applicable to the Canadian constitution.

When interviewed last night, City Solicitor Johnston said he had not yet received official notification of the judgment. He stated that it would be impossible for the city to appeal since the amount in question was less than $100. Until the text of the judgment was in his hands, Mr. Johnston stated that he would not be prepared to state what he would recommend the city to do as to the general proposition involved.

Christmas Tree Caused His Death.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 23.—A Christmas tree, which Michael Mahorcic of Steelton was carrying over his shoulders, prevented him from seeing a train as he was crossing the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks yesterday and he was struck and instantly killed. The accident occurred near his home. Mahercic was 56 years of age and left a family.

Fire Interrupts Air Line.

COBALT, Dec. 23. — The valve house of the Northern Ontario Power Co. was destroyed by fire Sunday night, and half of the Cobalt camp had to revert to steam plants yesterday morning. The loss is estimated at only $1,000, but interruption of the service is more serious, although the damage will be repaired by to-night.

Hit by Bucket; Man Killed.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—Michael Reher, an employe of the Ogden Construction Co., was struck on the head by a bucket full of cement and instantly killed in a 65-foot sewer which the company are building at Pacific avenue and Bloor streets yesterday morning.

IF IN DOUBT---GIVE FURS

DOES any gentleman know of anything, in the whole realm of woman's fancy, that equals rich Furs? We've no use for the cheap and tawdry kind, any more than you want imitation diamonds. Our whole purpose here is to have a store so good and acceptable, that the best people will patronize it without a question.

This is exclusively a Fur Store, anyone buying good Furs can be sure of good values. We're Furriers by trade and reputation. We know the business as we know the alphabet. The people we have around us are all experts, or they wouldnt be here.

That's why this is the best Christmas store. Not second best, but best!

Reliable FURS at reliable price Reductions

THERE are no exaggerated values here to make the bar gains seem greater—just plain facts and figures, nothing more. A policy that has gone hand in hand with the department since it has been created—one that is responsible for its present popularity and responsible to no small extent for the feeling among fur buyers that it is indiscreet to make Furs purchases that are not backed by BARRIE'S guarantee and reputation.

ARRESTS PROMISED

Detectives Have Definite Clue in Jokinen Mystery

INQUEST RESUMES DEC. 29

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—Coroner Crawford opened an inquest last night into the death of Anna Jokinen, the Finnish girl, who was found after an absence of over two weeks, beside a stook of corn on Forest Hill road Sunday afternoon. After the jury had viewed the remains and the evidence of Evard Jokinen, the man who identified the body as that of the girl in question, had been taken, the inquest was adjourned until Monday, Dec. 29.

Evard Jokinen, who roomed at the same house as Anna Jokinen, whom he had known in Finland since she was about six years of age, stated that he had last seen the girl alive at the rooming house, 46 Widmer street, on the evening of Dec. 4. She had left there in company with two other Finnish girls, Martha Blumquist and Kertu Arppe, and had gone to the Finnish Hall on West Adelaide street. The next evening, when he returned from work, Mrs. Flimk, the landlady, notified him that Anna was lost and that thus far they had been unable to locate her. The witness knew of no reason why the girl should run away, as she was quite happy, liked the place where she was working and seemed full of life. He had known the family of the girl for many years and knew of no eccentricities connected with it.

Although there is nothing definite as yet for publication, detectives assigned to the Jokinen case intimated last evening that they were working along definite lines, and unhesitatingly stated that the parties, if any, who are responsible for the death of the unfortunate girl will be rounded up before the resumption of the inquest.

"The public will readily understand that it would be, to say the least, foolish to disclose the results of yesterday's investigations," stated Provincial Detective William Greer last evening. "We are working along very promising clues, and there is little doubt that we will have matters cleared up before the next adjournment of the inquest."

Detective Greer is assigned on the case for the province, and Detective Wallace of the local force, for the city.

Mr. Greer stated last evening that the theory that the girl had lived for any length of time in the corn stook where she was found, had been pretty well exploded. There is now little doubt in the minds of the police that the girl was murdered.

HOME FOR HOLIDAY.

British New-comers Crowded Steamers Bound for Britain.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—Never before have so many recently arrived Britishers returned to the old country to spend Christmas. Steamships have been loaded with them and every available accommodation has been utilized. The reason given by the Immigration Department is that they have plenty of money in their pockets, prospects in Canada this winter are not so good as usual, and they can have a pleasant holiday with the old folks.

"We are glad to see them go," said an immigration official ambiguously.

"Why? Because," he observed smiling, "they will be back here in a month or two and they will bring lots of their friends and relatives with them. They are the best class of people we get. We are glad to see them go back and bring more of their kind to Canada. Wait and see."

FIREBUGS CAUGHT.

Two Members of the "Arson Squad" Are Arraigned in Court.

CHELTENHAM, Dec. 23. — "Miss Red" and "Miss Pink," two members of a militant suffragette "arson squad," who had eluded the police on many occasions, were brought up at the police court here yesterday, on a charge of setting fire to Aldrome Lawn, a large mansion on the outskirts of this city.

The two women, who have been rechristened for police court purposes, as they had refused to reveal their names, were seen in the neighborhood of the burned building, and when arrested their stockings were found to be soaked with kerosene which had overflowed from the cans they had emptied on the woodwork of the mansion. They appeared in the prisoners' enclosure barefooted.

The accused were remanded.

Rumors of Suffragette Split.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Rumors were in circulation yesterday that relations were strained between Miss Sylvia Pankhurst and Miss Christabel Pankhurst, the two daughters of the militant leader, in consequence of Miss Sylvia's determination to concentrate her campaign in the east end of London and in efforts to cooperate with the members of the Labor party. Miss Christabel disapproves of this scheme and is said to be withholding funds.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, left London very quietly Sunday for Paris on the way to Switzerland to recuperate.

The Ecuador Government is making extensive preparations to retake the town of Esmeraldas from the rebels, who captured the place on Dec. 15.

As a result of the protest of Kingston citizens that the streets were not properly patrolled, the police commissioners added new men to the force.

William Lees of Trout Mills, near North Bay, 17 years old, was drowned in Trout Lake. Every effort was made to rescue him, but he sank in sixty feet of water.

Fire destroyed the Scotch line cheese and butter factory near Perth yesterday, causing a loss of $5,000, with $1,000 insurance; 350 pounds of butter were burned.

Seventy thousand dollars was the amount of the loss that the Breithaupt Leather Co. of Berlin, sustained at the tannery fire yesterday. It was the largest and most serious fire that has visited Berlin for years.

SHE GAINED 30 LBS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact a generally invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and that I was dying. By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 30 pounds in weight."

Poor-Boxes His Speciality.

BUFFALO, Dec. 23. — Leonard Wintgens, aged 23, of Springfield, Ont., was arrested here shortly before noon yesterday on a charge of burglary in the first degree.

Wintgens, who confessed to having robbed poor-boxes in various churches throughout New York State of sums ranging from two to four dollars, was arrested by Patrolman Jordan while about to board the bumpers on a passenger train bound for Erie.

Wittgens claims he robbed churches in Albany, Rochester, Hastings and Brooklyn.

General Reprimanded.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23. — President Wilson yesterday afternoon issued a general reprimand to officers of the army and navy responsible for the program, at the recent Carabao dinner, where a burlesque of political speeches was put on.

WILL IS MISSING

Cardinal Rampolla's Testament Cannot Be Found

PRIVATE PAPERS GONE, TOO

MILAN, Dec. 23.—The Chronidle's Milan correspondent says that consternation has been caused at the Vatican, not only by the mysterious disappearance of the late Cardinal Rampolla's will, but also by the abstraction of diplomatic documents of more extreme importance. Since the late cardinal left the state apartments at the Papal palace at the outset of the present pontificate, a number of confidential papers have found their way into the possession of persons outside the Curial circle.

Not long before his death Cardinal Rampolla was amazed at seeing a famous letter addressed to Cardinal Galimerti published textually in a volume of lay memoirs dealing with the political affairs of the late Pope. As only an old will of Rampolla's, drawn up twenty-six years ago, has been found, disposing of the Cardinal's personal fortune of 228,000 among Pope Leo XIII., various cardinals, members of his own family, and domestic servants, nearly all of whom long since dead.

While Cardinal Rampolla evidently attached no further value to this will, which came to light among a heap of discarded odds and ends, he carefully left in his personal writing desk a small key with a label affixed, on which was stated in the cardinal's handwriting that the key was that of a black box stored inside a wardrobe in his bedroom and containing his last will. Since then his villa has been ransacked in vain for the will.

Special Prosecutor Asked.

MONTREAL, Dec. 23. — Premier Gouin, Attorney-General of the province, has been requested by the Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, to appoint a crown prosecutor to conduct the cases against the six men under arrest at Joliette in connection with the counterfeiting of $10 United States gold certificates.

Bennett Burleigh Retires.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Bennett Burleigh, the famous war correspondent of The London Telegraph, is retiring. In the American Civil War he was once condemned to death, but he points out nowadays that the sentence was never executed. During the same period he was held a prisoner for some time in Toronto jail.

Mr. Burleigh is a familiar figure at the Risley July meeting and is well known to many Canadians.

Two Boys Drowned.

ARNPRIOR, Ont., Dec. 23.—While skating on Cat's Lake, opposite the town yesterday afternoon, John Barnes, aged 19, son of E. J. Barnes, liveryman, and "Dabbie" Kerr, aged 11, son of J. L. Kerr, broke through the ice and were drowned. Several others broke through as well, but were rescued by their companions. The bodies of the two who were drowned have not been recovered.

Krafchenko Again Remanded.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 23.—Jack Krafchenko appeared before Provincial Magistrate Bonnycastle yesterday morning charged with the murder of manager Arnold of the Bank of Montreal, at Plum Coulee, Man., and the theft of $4,749 from that institution. He was remanded for a week without pleading. Krafchenko has been held since his arrest on a charge of supplying a revolver illegally.

GENUINE OPTIMIST.

"Optimists are right, provided they are not unreasoning and excessive," said a fusion leader at a fusion luncheon in New York.

"The optimism of our opponents," he went on, "reminds me of Smith. A druggist said to Smith one night at the lodge:

"'There's a movement on foot to make drugs cheaper.'

"'Good!' said Smith. 'Good! That will bring sickness within the reach of all!'"

"That Affair Next Door"

—By Anna Katharine Green

XXXVII.

"Two Weeks!"

But before she was well in, her countenance changed.

"No," said she, "I want to think first. Give me time to think. I dare not say a word without thinking."

"Truth needs no consideration. If you wish to denounce this man——"

Her look said she did.

"Then now is the time."

She gave him a sharp glance; the first she had bestowed upon him since leaving Miss Althorpe's.

"You are no doctor," she declared. "Are you a police-officer?"

"I am a detective."

"Oh!" and she hesitated for a moment, shrinking from him with very natural distrust and aversion. "I have been in the toils then without knowing it; no wonder I am caught. But I am no criminal, sir; and if you are the one most in authority here, I beg the privilege of a few words with you before I am put in confinement."

"I will take you before the Superintendent," said Mr. Gryce. "But do you wish to go alone? Shall not Mr. Van Burnam accompany you?"

"Mr. Van Burnam?"

"Is it not he you wish to denounce?"

"I do not wish to denounce any one to-day."

"What do you wish?" asked Mr. Gryce.

"Let me see the man who has power to hold me here or let me go, and I will tell him."

"Very well," said Mr. Gryce, and led her into the presence of the Superintendent.

She was at this moment quite a different person from what she had been in the carriage. All that was girlish in her aspect or appealing in her bearing had faded away, evidently forever, and left in its place something at once so desperate and so deadly, that she seemed not only a woman, but one of a very determined and dangerous nature. Her manner, however, was quiet and it was only in her eye that one could see how near she was to frenzy.

She spoke before the Superintendent could address her.

"Sir," said she, "I have been brought here on account of a fearful crime I was unhappy enough to witness. I myself am innocent of that crime, but, so far as I know, there is no other person living save the guilty man who committed it, who can tell you how or why or by whom it was done. One man has been arrested for it and another has not. If you will give two weeks to complete my freedom, I will point out to you which is the veritable man of blood, and may Heaven have mercy on his soul."

"She is mad," signified the Superintendent in byplay to Mr. Gryce.

But the latter shook his head.

"I know," she continued without a hint of the timidity which seemed natural to her under other circumstances, "that this must seem a presumptuous request from one like me, but it is only by granting it that you will ever be able to lay your hand on the murderer of Mrs. Van Burnam. For I will never speak if I cannot speak in my own way and at my own time. The agonies I have suffered must have some compensation. Otherwise I should die of horror and my grief."

"And how do you hope to gain compensation by this delay?" expostulated the Superintendent. "Would you not meet with more satisfaction in denouncing him here and now before he can pass another night in fancied security?"

But she only repeated: "I have said two weeks, and two weeks I must have. Two weeks in which to come and go as I please. Two weeks!" And no argument they could advance succeeded in eliciting from her any other response or in altering in any way her air of quiet determination with its underlying suggestion of frenzy.

Acknowledging their mutual defeat by a look, the Superintendent and detective drew off to one side, and something like the following conversation took place between them.

"You think she's sane?"

"I do."

"And will remain so two weeks?"

"If humoured."

"You are sure she is implicated in this crime?"

"She was a witness to it."

"And that she speaks the truth when she declares that she is the only person who can point out the criminal?"

"Yes; that is, she is the only one who will do it. The attitude taken by the Van Burnams, especially by Howard just now in the presence of this girl, shows how little we have to expect from them."

"Yet you think they know as much as she does about it?"

"I do not know what to think. For once I am baffled, Superintendent. Every passion which this woman possesses was roused by her unexpected meeting with Howard Van Burnam, and yet their indifference when confronted, as well as her present action, seems to argue a lack of connection between them which overthrows at once the theory of his guilt. Was it the sight of Franklin, then, which really affected her? and was her apparent indifference at meeting him only an evidence of her self-control? It seems an impossible conclusion to draw, and indeed there are nothing but hitches and improbable features in this case. Nothing fits; nothing jibes. I get just so far in it and then I run up against a wall. Either there is a superhuman power of publicity in the persons who contrived this murder or we are on the wrong track altogether."

"In other words, you have tried every means known to you to get at the truth of this matter, and failed".

"I have sir; sorry as I may be to acknowledge it."

"Then we must accept her terms. She can be shadowed?"

"Every moment."

"Very well, then. Extreme cases must be met by extreme measures. We will let her have her swing and see what comes of it. Revenge is a great weapon in the hands of a determined woman, and from her look I think she will make the most of it."

And returning to where the young girl stood, the Superintendent asked her whether she felt sure the murderer would not escape in the time that must elapse before his apprehension.

Instantly her cheek, which had looked as if it could never show colour again, flushed a deep and painful scarlet, and she cried vehemently:

"If any hint of what is here passing should reach him I would be powerless to prevent his flight. Swear, then, that my very existence shall be kept a secret between you two, or I will do nothing towards his apprehension,—no, not even to save the innocent."

"We will not swear; but we will promise," returned the Superintendent. "And now, when may we expect to hear from you again?"

"Two weeks from to-night as the clock strikes eight. Be wherever I may chance to be at that hour, and see on whose arm I lay my hand. It will be that of the man who killed Mrs. Van Burnam."

XXXVIII...

A White Satin Gown.

The events just related did not come to my knowledge for some days after they occurred, but I have recorded them at this time that I might in some way prepare you for an interview which shortly after took place between myself and Mr. Gryce.

I had not seen him since our rather unsatisfactory parting in front of Miss Althorpe's house, and the suspense which I had endured in the interim made my greeting unnecessarily warm. But he took it all very naturally.

"You are glad to see me," said he; "been wondering what has become of Miss Oliver. Well, she is in good hands; with Mrs. Desberger, in short; a woman whom I believe you know."

"With Mrs. Desberger?" I was surprised. "Why, I have been looking every day in the papers for an account of her arrest."

"No doubt," he answered. "But we police are slow; we are not ready to arrest her yet. Meanwhile you can do us a favour. She wants to see you; are you willing to visit her?"

My answer contained but little of the curiosity and eagerness I really felt.

"I am always at your command. Do you wish me to go now?"

OH! YOU HAVE SUCH BEAUTIFUL HAIR!

What a pleasant thing to have said to you! And why shouldn't it be? You who envy others their lovely hair, and are ashamed of the dull, lifeless, stringy appearance of your own—use Harmony Hair Beautifier, and let others envy you.

This delightful liquid seems to polish and brighten the hair, giving it that burnished, lustrous look you have so often wished it might have, adding to its softness, making it easier to put up and "stay put"—making it more attractive and beautiful in every way. It overcomes the unpleasant, oily smell of your hair, leaving a dainty, rich rose perfume that will delight you and those around you. Very easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing. Contains no oil; will not change the color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Can't harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness—just a sweet cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Red Water.

Apropos of the "red water" seen in and about salt lakes Mr. F. Whitteron writes that in all the samples examined by him (at Geelong, Victoria, Australia) the color was wholly due to a curious little organism, either oval or round, and equipped with two small flagella or lashlike extensions. When examined under a microscope the bodies of these minute specks of living matter are seen to be intensely pigmented with a red coloring matter. When the brine becomes saturated the oval form changes to a circular shape. When such a brine begins to crystallize the resulting salt has a reddish tinge, and Mr. Whitteron suggests that each organism may be the nucleus about which a crystal forms.—New York Post.

How It Impressed Her.

A young woman from the interior saw the Atlantic for the first time recently at Cape May. As she stood on the windy beach, gazing dreamily out over the vast blue expanse of tumbling water, her escort said to her:

"So this is the first time you've ever seen the sea, eh?"

"Yes, the very first time," she answered.

"And what do you think of it?" he asked.

"Ah," she said, with an ecstatic smile, "it smells just like oysters!"—Exchange.

Important Question.

"George dear," began a bride while on the way to the station for the honeymoon, "I want you to answer me just one question, and then I shall feel sure of you."

"What is it, darling?"

"If you knew that I loved you as much as you love me, would you love me as much as I love you?"—London Answers.

Wrong End First.

"Willie," said the infant's mother, agitated by the sudden appearance of a rich relative, "Willie dear, kiss your Uncle John and then go and wash your face at once."—London Telegraph.

A HOOD WRAP.

Protection From Cold For the Woman Who Does Her Own Work.

It isn't because you're growing older and less strong, Mrs. Small Village, that you so readily take colds in winter. It's because times innumerable each day you rush from a hot kitchen out of doors. There isn't time to wrap up before starting on an errand to the barn, the corn house or poultry yard, yet at each one of these places you stay longer than you meant to, and you stand in drafts, the quickest of cold causers.

What you need is a hood wrap to hang from a nail beside the kitchen door, where it may conveniently be picked up and put on as you leave the house. The hood wrap is merely a one yard wide by two yards long strip of woolen material and may be evolved from something that's in every house—an old woolen shawl, an army blanket or even a clean horse blanket. Along the center of one edge of this strip should be attached the band of a loose hood, cut like a huge circle from whatever worsted material is available and shirred at the edge over a flat elastic band—in fact, a copy of Red Riding Hood's headgear. It is a good plan to line the hood wrap with the remnants of an oilskin or rubberized silk coat, so that it may be turned wrong side outward for use during a shower of rain or snow.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

No Horses For English Army.

The disappearance of the 'bus and cab horse from the streets of London owing to the revolution in traffic caused by the motor has placed the War Department in a somewhat curious predicament. Formerly the source from which territorial horses were obtained for training was principally from the omnibus proprietor, cab owner and job master, but garages have now taken the place of stables, and the War Office is faced with the predicament that on mobilisation it would be impossible to horse the mounted troops in the County of London without resorting to impressment. Either, therefore, the territorials must purchase sufficient animals to enable them to do their training, or hire them from contractors at a price which will enable the latter to keep their stables well filled.

Waifs Who Became Famous.

The list of waifs who have become famous is a long one. It includes Sir Henry Stanley, Queen Catherine the Good, Rosa Bonheur, Rachel, Leonardo da Vinci and dates back as far as Moses. All these were homeless children — children who if left to their fate would undoubtedly have drifted into evil ways. Instead they have lived to add glory to their names and have contributed to the knowledge of the world at large through the fruits of their genius.

Side Light on History.

Socrates was about to quaff the hemlock.

"This," he said, "is the cup that neither cheers nor inebriates."

Making a sort of wry face, just the same, he hastened to bring the incident to a close.—Chicago Tribune.

Memory in Old Age.

Ways of the memory in later life exercised the famous Dr. Jowett of Oxford when he reached it, but he found consolation. "At fifty-five you fail to remember things—words, pictures, persons—after six months or a year's interval. Yet the circle of objects which you recognize is ever becoming wider, and this power of recognition is a great gift if cultivated. There is the greatest value in 'forgotten knowledge.' Instead of the stores of memory oppressing you, with a little trouble you can recall all that is useful or necessary." And to Lady Wemyss, recovering from illness, he wrote: "Like you, I read a book through and do not remember a word of it. I think, however, that the reading of the book has an effect, and if I read it again I understand it better. I believe that as we lose our powers of memory we may increase the power of reminiscence—that is, of recalling what we want in small quantities for a short time."

Did the Romans Smoke?

"Why is it that smoking never crept into Roman literature?" I have asked. To which a correspondent answers that it has crept. It is mentioned by Pliny (N. H. xxvi. 6-16). He records the use of coltsfoot for smoking and recommends smoking the dried roots and leaves of this plant as a remedy for obstinate colds and coughs. From this the botanical name of the coltsfoot (tussilago), which means "cough easer," has been derived. British boys who have neither coughs nor colds still smoke coltsfoot surreptitiously and find that it makes them satisfactorily sick.—London Spectator.

A well-known violinist is the father of two lovely and intelligent children. The other day he overheard a conversation between the two in which they were trying to recall the first names of all the great opera singers. "What is Caruso's first name?" he heard the younger ask. "Don't you know?" replied the other in a disgusted tone. "Why, it's Robinson, of course!"

LAKE CAPTAIN DEAD.

Solomon Sylvester Spent His Life in Marine Affairs.

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—Capt. Solomon Sylvester, aged 77 years, died at his residence, 390 Manning avenue, yesterday.

Capt. Sylvester was a thorough marine man, having been connected with the great lakes all his life. He was born in the Township of Scarboro, on June 16, 1837, his father being at that time the well-known farmer, Samuel Sylvester.

On different crafts he worked his way up until 1857 he became master and took command of the schooner Atlantic. He owned and sailed different vessels until 1868, at which time he came off the water and inaugurated a general wharfage and storage business, in partnership with his brother David and James Hickman. The firm name was later changed to Sylvester Brothers, the two brothers continuing in business until a few years ago.

Express Car Burned.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Dec. 22.—While it is impossible to determine the exact loss, an estimate of $75,000 is placed on the damage done to a heavily laden express car, in an eastbound train over the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, which mysteriously caught fire while passing through East Lynn Saturday, driving the messenger, Charles Billings of Woonsocket, R. I., to the outside of the car, where he clung to chains, unable to notify the engineer, and nearly ready to collapse when the train reached here. Practically all the merchandise in the car was damaged.

CARELESS WITH GOLD.

Any Old Thing Serves the Klondikers For Holding Nuggets.

Persons who are accustomed to observe the extreme care with which bankers handle gold would be astonished by the lax methods of the men who risk their lives for the precious metal in sparsely settled regions where it is mined.

In the log cabins in which Klondikers live it has to take its chance along with boots, cooking utensils and provisions, waiting to be transported by the most expeditious route. Any receptacle, it seems, is good enough to hold gold. Old tobacco cans and fruit and vegetable cans stand full of nuggets on the shelves, and sacks of gold dust are flung upon the floor.

On one occasion a little pack train of three mules brought to Dawson City $120,000 worth of gold in common sacks, over which the mule driver, acting on his own responsibility, fastened a bit of sailcloth, lest a mule falling on a rock or against a branch should accidentally rip open a sack and spill the contents. The whole lot was thrown with other goods into the packer's office and left there until the following morning.

At another time $40,000 worth was sent down on one horse. The packer in charge did not know who had given it to him and there was no sign of ownership attached. It was identified by the fact that within the larger sack of dust was a small sack of nuggets.

The bags are not sealed, but merely tied with a leather thong or a bit of twine.—Chicago Record-Herald.

RAINMAKING FALLACIES.

Nature's Processes Too Gigantic to Be Imitated by Man.

Warm air is like a sponge. It will suck up a lot of moisture and carry it without spilling any. But if warm air, well loaded with moisture, is suddenly cooled the sponge is squeezed and the moisture falls out as rain.

Many years ago some hopeful gentlemen went to one of our arid regions and exploded a lot of dynamite on the theory that the concussion would mix the strata of warm air near the earth with the cooler strata above and so cause the necessary precipitation of moisture. There happened to be light showers about the time of the experiments, which encouraged the experimenters, but didn't convince anybody else.

The fact is that nature's rainmaking machine is too gigantic to be affected by the puny efforts of humans—at least by any methods so far discovered.

Nature pumps the moisture laden air up into the cold regions of the upper atmosphere with a wheel a thousand miles in diameter. When this tremendous wheel of air is revolving normally it hoists millions of tons of water vapor to an elevation where it can no longer be carried in solution and so falls in rain.

When the wheel is off adjustment it is as futile to bombard the sky with dynamite as it would be to fire popgun corks at the side of the latest Dreadnought.—Kansas City Star.

Choosing the Easier Way.

"I thought you were going to invest your money in stocks?"

"I did think of it."

"Have you changed your mind?"

"Yes. I went into a broker's place the other day for the purpose of watching the market a little while. Have you ever been in a broker's office?"

"Yes."

"Then you know the layout. There is a big blackboard upon one of the walls. At each side of the room there are tickers. Facing the blackboard are several rows of chairs, which are occupied by men who have bought or sold. They sit there, nervously chewing their cigars and watching the quotations as they are written on the blackboard."

"What has that to do with your decision not to invest?"

"After watching these watchers for awhile and studying their expressions I decided that it would be easier to go on working for the money I'm going to need."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Early Fox Hunters.

Although fox hunting only came into popularity at a comparatively recent date, it appears to have existed fairly early. William Twici, who was Edward II.'s chief huntsman, mentions the fox as a beast of the chase, though only of an inferior kind. And there is an engraving of the fourteenth century showing three huntsmen and one dog unearthing a fox. It is said that Lord Arundel kept a pack of foxhounds as early as 1539, but it is probable that other things [illegible]

MUST REFORM SCHOOLS.

Lord Haldane Says Britain's Greatest Need Is Army of Peace.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Lord Haldane continues to press upon the Government and the country the need for real reform in England's education system. It is understood that the Government has some intention of attempting the heroic task, but, for the moment the problem of education is kept in the background by questions of less importance to the national prosperity.

In speaking on the subject at a gathering of students at the Mansion House, Lord Haldane said he was well aware of the vast strides which had been made in British national education during the last quarter of a century, but he was also well aware that still more startling strides had been made in other countries.

What the country needed was an army of peace, to defend it from the invasion of the highly skilled and highly trained foreigners.

Farmer Kills Himself.

CORNWALL, Dec. 22.—Fred. Myers, a native of Messina, committed suicide by hanging himself in a cow barn at his farm at Antwerp, following a murderous attack on his wife and a man named Daniel Gilligan, who had been asked by Mrs. Myers to stay in the house that night to protect the Myers family, which consists of Mrs. Myers and three small children. Myers had been acting strangely for a few weeks. He was a prosperous farmer, about 42 years of age.

WORCESTER, Mass., Dec. 22.—Nearly $100,000 worth of holiday goods burned yesterday in a fire which swept through the seven-storey annex to the department store of the C. P. Sherer Co. The loss on the building is estimated at $50,000.

The main store, which is on the corner of Front and Commercial streets, was damaged by smoke and water.

Starting the Day Right

Do you begin the day with a "grouch"? Are you tired in the mornings? Do you fail to benefit by the restorative influence of sleep, which should make good the energy and vitality consumed by the day's work?

Then you are rapidly becoming bankrupt so far as health is concerned. You should look to your habits of eating, make sure that you get lots of fresh air in your sleeping apartments, and restore wasted vitality by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure does not induce sleep by any drugging effect, but when you have been using it for a few days and get the nervous system into condition you find yourself resting and sleeping naturally and healthfully. By keeping up this restorative treatment you will be able to make good the waste and fill the exhausted nervous system with new vigour and energy. This means thorough cure of such symptoms as headache, sleeplessness, indigestion and tired, listless feelings.

Captain Washed Overboard.

HALIFAX, Dec. 22.—The Nova Scotia schooner, John Parker, from Barbados, arrived here with her flag at half-mast yesterday, for the loss of her captain, James Richards, Labave, who was swept overboard and drowned on the passage. On Dec. 11 Captain Richards was taking his reckoning when a heavy sea broke over the ship, carrying the captain overboard. The captain's son was at the wheel at the time, and shouted a warning to his father, but it came too late.

Looped Loop in Whirlwind.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—A French aviator named Rost was caught in a whirlwind at a height of over 14,000 feet and looped the loop, not once, but 20 times. An official of the French Aero Club, who was watching the flight says Rost was attempting to beat the world's height record. After tumbling down and turning this extraordinary series of somersaults, Rost's machine regained a normal position, and the pilot was able to bring it safely to earth.

Rescued From a Cistern.

GUELPH, Dec. 22.—Joe Hewer, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hewer, Armstrong's Mills, is still a pretty sick boy as the result of a fall into a cistern Saturday. Mrs. Hewer had gone to the cistern to draw a pail of water, and the little fellow came running after her and tumbled in. Marshall Day, hearing the cry of the mother, rushed to the cistern and soon had the lad out, but he was unconscious.

Huge Flood of Letters.

Mirabeau as an Orator.

No one, not even Talleyrand, could approach Mirabeau as a speaker, and, curiously enough, this violent, emotional man was, as orator, perfectly self possessed:

"During the debate on the disturbances at Marseilles the Right interrupted his speech with cries of slander. 'Liar, scoundrel, assassin.' He stopped for a moment and looked at the excited members who were bespattering him with their vile words: 'I am waiting, gentlemen,' he said, 'for these amenities to die down.' Then he went on with his speech at the point where he had broken off."

His face, pitted with smallpox, was ugly, says the author of "Mirabeau," but his very ugliness, transformed by the play of his countenance, was marvelously turned into a source of power. When he shook his "terrible boar's head" he was terrifying and no man dared to interrupt him.

URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones; in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Morse's Kidney-Liver Pills.

TOMB OF JONAH.

Moslems Look Upon It as Sacred and Guard It From Intrusion.

The site of Nineveh is almost perfectly level, but adjoining the western wall are two huge mounds that conceal the palaces of the greatest kings of Nineveh. On the lower or southern mound stand a mosque and a village of considerable size, says a correspondent of the Christian Herald.

The village is named Nebi Yunus, or the Prophet Jonah, for the mosque contains the tomb in which Jonah is said to have been buried. The age of the tomb is uncertain, but it was probably built long after the Hebrew prophet's time. However, the place is now sacred, so sacred that pilgrims from afar visit it.

"I rode up the steep, narrow streets of the village to the mosque," writes the Herald's correspondent, "dismounted and entered the yard. A crowd of excited Arabs quickly surrounded me. I explained to a priest that I had come to see the grave of Jonah, and with a motion of the hand I made him understand that I should reward him. Removing my shoes, I followed the priest through a dark passageway.

"Then he pointed to a wall and said the tomb was just beyond. I wished to enter the prayer room, from which the tomb itself might be seen, but the place was considered far too sacred for my profane feet. The few Christians who have been permitted to see the tomb may only look through a small window into a dark chamber, in which a cloth covered mound is barely discernible. It is said that no Moslem will enter the inner shrine."

Able Assistant.

The small son of a clergyman who was noted for his tiresome sermons overheard two friends of his father saying how dry they were and how hard it was to keep awake during them. The following Sunday while the minister was preaching he was astounded to see his son throwing pebbles at the congregation from the gallery. The clergyman frowned angrily at him, when the boy piped out in a clear treble voice:

"It's all right, pop. You go on preaching. I'm keeping them awake."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Seven Wise Men.

The names and characteristic aphorisms of the seven wise men of ancient Greece are as follows: Solon of Athens, "Nothing in excess;" Thales of Miletus, "Suretyship brings ruin;" Pittacus of Mitylene, "Know thine opportunity;" Bias of Priene in Caria, "Too many workers spoil the work;" Chilon of Sparta, "Know thyself;" Cleobulus of Rhodes, "Moderation is the chief good," and Periander of Corinth, "Forethought in all things."

VERDICT OF THE AUDIENCE.

Ordeal Which Budding Actors In Normandy Must Face.

It is not without fear that an actor makes his debut in the capital of Normandy. A debut in the French provinces is by no means an easy ordeal to pass through. An actor has a right to choose three different parts, says Mme. Rhea, which must be played inside of a month.

The first and second debuts have no significance; he may be received coldly, critically or enthusiastically—it has no meaning; the third one decides his fate. That night after the play the manager, very solemn in his dress suit, appears before the audience and says: "Monsieur or Mlle. So-and-so has made his or her debut. The management wishes to know the verdict of the public."

Then he produces a placard on which is printed in large letters the word "Accepted." If the actor pleases the audience applauds; if not, it hisses until the manager produces another placard with the word "Refused." Then the applause starts again, with out regard for the feelings of the poor broken hearted girl or boy who has been waiting in the wings for the verdict of that inhuman jury called the public.—Argonaut.

Fatality of Whooping Cough

Many parents think lightly of whooping cough, and treat it as a necessary evil, not giving the child who has it any special attention.

The seriousness of whooping cough was emphasized by the Medical Health Officer in Toronto a few months ago, when he reported 14 deaths during the month from whooping cough, and only ten from scarlet fever, typhoid fever and measles combined.

So many people write to us about the relief and cure of whooping cough by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine that we can recommend it with the greatest confidence.

It loosens the cough, aids expectoration, and by its soothing influence prevents the terrible paroxysms of coughing which are so distressing to witness, and which wear away the strength of the child. By using this treatment the disease is held in check, and cured in a few weeks, instead of months. Look for the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., on the bottle you buy. There are many imitations.

WIT OF A MORO UMPIRE.

He Had Learned Our Language Fast and Knew How to Use It.

Captain John E. Morris of the Sixth infantry was at one time, some years ago, stationed with his company in some inaccessible Moro town. Morris thought that if the Moros of his district could become interested in some sporting stunt outside of head hunting the United States insurance companies' mortality tables could readily be readjusted so far as soldiers were concerned, so he encouraged his men to teach the Moros baseball. When a man is playing baseball he is not chopping off heads, and Captain Morris appreciated this fact.

Two baseball teams were organized, a Moro team and a team from Morris' company, and one day the first game of the series was to be pulled off. The question of the umpire was the great one of the moment, and after much discussion a native Moro was selected to pass upon the fine points of the game.

In Filipino "umpire" is properly expressed as "makifula," and when Captain Morris arrived on the scene of the proposed ball game the Moro who was to be umpire approached him.

"Makifula, me," remarked the Moro.

Captain Morris looked at the native umpire without in the slightest understanding what he was driving at. "I'm glad you are a 'makifula,'" he remarked, "but please inform me what the word means."

"Means makifula of Americano," replied the Moro. "Me learn American language fast."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Counting a Herring-Catch.

The fact that the record catch of herrings was 320 crans, is proof positive that they were captured on the east coast of Scotland. On the west of Scotland herrings are counted, not measured. A "maze" of herrings is five long hundreds, and a long hundred is 123. At Yarmouth and Grimsby they are counted by the "warp," which is four, and thirty-three of these make a long hundred. Ten hundreds make a "thousand," and ten "thousand" a "last." Therefore, when is a hundred not a hundred?—London Standard.

Plea For Patriotism.

"You should be patriotic and contribute your valuable services to your country without thought of pecuniary reward."

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 80 cars, comprising 1450 cattle, 92 calves, 1120 hogs and 466 sheep and lambs.

Butchers.

Good steers and heifers, $7 to $7.90; medium, $6.50 to $7; common, $5 to $6; good butcher cows, $6 to $6.75; medium, $5.25 to $5.50; canners, $3.50 to $4.25; good bulls, $6 to $6.75; medium, $5.25 to $5.75; common, $4.50 to $5.

Milkers and Springers.

There were few of these on the market. The demand is good, the right kind bringing in the neighborhood of $90. Poorer types range from $50 up.

Veal Calves.

Calves of good quality are scarce. Medium kinds brought $10 per cwt., and good animals would bring a considerably higher figure.

Sheep and Lambs.

Prices of these were firm. Ewes averaged about $6 per cwt.; culls and rams, $3.50 to $4.50, and lambs, $6.50 to $8.50.

Hogs.

Hogs were quoted lower, at $8.60, fed and watered, and $8.25 f.o.b.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 22.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, offerings this morning were 1500 cattle, 1150 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 400 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle today, prices being well maintained at the advances noted a week ago. A feature of the receipts was the number of northwest range cattle on the market, the quality of which was generally good, and they met with a good demand.

The supply of sheep and lambs was somewhat larger than it has been lately, but in spite of this fact the tone of the market was very firm. Choice milk fed calves were rather scarce, while the enquiry was good.

There was no further change in the market for hogs, prices being firm.

HAD A PERFECT ALIBI.

And Plenty of Witnesses Stood Ready to Testify to It.

A lawyer in Portland, Ore., was assigned to defend a Chinaman accused of murder. He had a talk with the official interpreter, who in turn had talked with the man in jail, and that earnest person assured the lawyer that the prisoner was innocent; that at the time of the crime he had been miles away in a railroad camp. Later they went to the jail to have a talk with the prisoner.

The official interpreter held a long conversation, the lawyer giving him the questions. It seemed all straight and regular. The interpreter insisted that the prisoner had a perfect alibi.

It was some weeks before the case was called, and shortly before that time the lawyer wanted another talk with the accused man. The official interpreter had disappeared, and so he secured for his interpreter this time a Chinaman who had been his cook and who talked fairly good English. They went to the jail.

"Tell him," he instructed the interpreter, "that I want him to relate to me again the exact circumstances, all he knows about this, the whole truth and particularly where he was that night."

The two Chinese jabbered together for fifteen minutes. Then the interpreter turned and said, "He say after he shoot the man he lun down Mollison street an' thlow pistol in McGuire's fish yard."

"Hold on!" yelled the lawyer. "That can't be true. Ask him again. According to the other story he was miles away and didn't shoot the man at all."

There was another long conversation between the interpreter and the prisoner. Then the interpreter said: "Oh, yes; he shoot the man. He say he shoot him an' lun down Mollison street an' thlow pistol into McGuire's fish yard."

"But," insisted the lawyer, "I was told he was not in the city at all that night, but miles away in a railroad camp."

The interpreter smiled blandly. "Oh, yes," he assented cheerfully, "he have plenty witnesses to plove that."—Saturday Evening Post.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE SAVES WORRY, SAVE MONEY. SAVES THE HAIR

If you want to free your head of dandruff and stop falling hair, you must sooner or later resort to Newbro's Herpicide.

By using Herpicide first you save yourself worry, which is desirable, you save money, which is a consideration, and you save your hair, which is the most important of all.

Why not profit by the experience of Mrs. S. A. Lee of 110 South 4th Street, Richmond, Va., who writes:

"Four years' residence in India ruined my hair until it was but two inches long and very thin. I tried everything in Europe and America without benefit until I was induced to use Herpicide. My hair is now long, soft and silky and natural colour, while before it was quite grey. My friends never tire of admiring my hair."

Mrs. Lee's story is a typical history of hair troubles. After everything else fails Newbro's Herpicide brings relief. It would be just as effective if used first.

Newbro's Herpicide makes the accumulation of dandruff impossible, and prevents falling hair. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly. No matter what the claim of others Herpicide is the only "genuine original dandruff germ destroyer."

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

The Trifle

By HARRY IRVING GREENE

Copyright, 1913

THERE was a time when Wallington had generally been conceded to be a brand new genius in the financial world—a marvelous being who could change stones into bread and serpents into fowl; then all at once he found himself in the throes of bankruptcy.

He had exhausted his resources and was for the time being hopelessly insolvent. Day by day his little handful of remaining change vanished in steadily diminishing ratio as his meals became cheaper and further apart, until finally he had but a dime left. This coin he resolved to save for some last and most desperate extremity, and he even determined to fast for days before parting with it. And fast for days he did, while oft times the days came much too fast.

When Christmas eve came he had not tasted food for three days. He felt that he could endure it no longer, that the last and most desperate extremity had arrived and that now he must spend his dime. He was plunged deep in meditation when he felt someone touch his arm and turned about.

Beside him there stood a gaunt man with cavernous cheeks, feverish, wildish eyes, and a stomach that curved the wrong way. The apparition addressed him in a croaking voice.

"For God's sake, stranger, buy me something to eat. I am penniless and upon the verge of committing crime. I have worn out my shoes looking for work, and while I have a job promised me it will be a week before it is open. And meanwhile I am starving, friend, starving. In the name of Christianity spare me enough for a meal out of your plenty."

Wallington stared into the evening dusk as he fingered his last and smoothly worn dime. He knew well enough what this other man was suffering, for had he not been in the same stage twenty-four hours before! And to give a man a dime in such a case was so grossly inadequate. Yet what could he do? He turned about. Close before him was a restaurant where he had spent hundreds of dollars in his palmy days and whose proprietor he knew well. Yet he owed a bill there for his last big after theater dinner party of many months ago, and he had never had the courage even in his semi-starvation to go in and ask for more credit. Yet now it must be done, for here was a human being starving upon the streets. Wallington shuddered. It was plainly his duty to fill this man's stomach, and for the last time he would exert those powers of persuasion which once upon a time few men had been able to resist. He took the stranger by the arm, "Come with me," he commanded.

They entered the restaurant and Wallington walked straight up to the proprietor. "Bob," said he, "I owe you a pretty stiff bill, but I am going to go to work in a week and then I will begin paying you off. Now I want you to do me a last favor. I owe you about forty dollars, and a couple of dollars more won't make much difference to you: It is Christmas eve and my friend over there is starving. Now I want you to fill him up to the chin on good, solid food and charge it to me. I will not ask you for any favor again if you will do this last thing." The proprietor looked at his old patron thoughtfully.

"All right," he announced at length. "Being's its Christmas eve I'll take a chance on you even if you are down and out. Tell your friend to order what he wants." So Wallington and the stranger sat down together and Wallington watched his companion fill himself with good things until at last with his stomach again curved the right way, the droop gone from his shoulders and the feverish light vanished from his eyes, the gorged one arose.

"My friend," said the stranger. "I could not have endured it another day—but of course you have never known what it is to go two days without food. And when tonight you go home and sit down to your table to your feast, remember that there is an outcast fellow being upon the streets who is blessing every mouthful that you eat. Good-by, Christian."

Wallington held out his hand. "Good-by, stranger, and good luck to you. It was a mere trifle. Happy to have been able to give you a lift." Then he went up to Frenchy's hash house and had his dime's worth of coffee and sausage.

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly. Money Refunded If It Fails.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

STAGE JEWELRY

Not Expensive Although It Makes a Regal Showing

While it is quite true that many actresses wear real jewels when upon the stage, much of the glittering stuff which looks so imposing across the footlights is a sham. Royal crowns may be purchased anywhere from $7.50 to $15.00. For the latter amount something very gorgeous indeed can be obtained—all encrusted with precious stones.

Queens' tiaras come cheaper, and for $2.50 one can get a very decent sample. The gems are of colored glass—emeralds, rubies, topazes, sapphires, etc.—except the diamonds which are of plain cut-glass. They cost about 75c a dozen for the cheapest, though the finest ones, such as are appropriate for a monarch, come as high as $1.00 each. What makes them so expensive is not the gems, but the settings, which are made by skilled jewellers.

However, many gems are sold loose for attaching to robes and other garments worn on the stage. They are also set in girdles, bracelets, necklaces, daggers, and swords. A magnificent dagger encrusted with diamonds and rubies as big as pigeons eggs costs only $12.50. If it were real diamonds instead of imitation it would be worth at least $200,000. Diamond bracelets of the most superb description fetch only $5.00 a pair, while a diamond necklace is worth one-third more. Knightly and other orders are quoted at from $15.00 to $18.00, some of them being very elaborate.

What Progressive Farmers say about Good Roads

THE following reproduced testimonials have been selected at random from many hundreds, and show conclusively the consensus of opinion among farmers who have good roads over which to haul their produce, and one who hasn't.

A Washington Farmer's Indorsement.

Mr. Frank Sarvus, addressing the good roads meeting at Salem, Washington, gave an enthusiastic testimony in favor of good roads—

"I am a wheat grower. I haul my produce to the railroad over which I travel the greater part of the year. Before we got a gravel road I used to get stuck in the mud every winter. Sometimes I could not get my grain to market for weeks at a time. I could not haul still in the spring. I could scarce haul a load of hay from my farm to the railroad. One year I hauled 2,000 pounds of wheat 2½ miles to the railroad and used only a single horse. I could haul 2,000 pounds of wheat and oats, and 2,400 pounds of potatoes, cabbage, which is one of my principal crops, to market with a single horse. I find on my return trip from the railroad I can haul a load of 4,000 pounds of coal, wood or lumber. I have fertilized my farm without the horses having ceased

The surest evidence of a Satisfied, Progressive Farmer.

Mr. Joe Clark, who lives on an improved road, makes the following statement—

"I live four miles from the city, and two miles from the school. This has been the worst winter that I have ever seen, but there hasn't been a single day that my children haven't walked to school and not a single day have they come home with wet feet—and to think, they walked down the middle of the road. Not one of them has been sick with a cold even, while heretofore my doctor bills have been more than my road tax. Talk to me about paying taxes to build roads. I am willing to pay taxes on my peck of fox hounds, my bird dogs, my chickens, my horses, and if necessary, my wife and children, if they will use it in extending roads like this all over the county. I would rather have my house and ten acres of land on this road like it is now than have my whole farm on the old road like it was before improvement."

Mr. Edward N. Hines,
Board of County Road Commissioners,
Wayne County, Detroit, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Our concrete roads are the ahead of the expectations of the majority of us farmers. Where we used to be two days marketing fifty bushels of produce, we now market twice as much in one day, and can go to the city any time we want to. We do not have to wait till the roads are good as we can go. Also, our horses and wagons will last twice as long.

Hoping you will keep right on building these roads, and that the county will stand back of this movement, I remain,

Yours truly,

(Sgd.) Geo. W. Burt.

Redford, Wayne County, Mich.

Enthusiastic Testimony from Lauderdale County, Mississippi.

Mr. J. S. Meadows, who lives on a Road that has lately been improved in Lauderdale County, Mississippi, writes the accompanying statement—

"I have never made an improvement for which I received such immediate returns. The road in front of my farm was formerly a sandy road. The sand would blow and drift in the winter time, and I frequently had to shovel it out of the ditches in order to get through. Now the road is always hard and I can haul as much as I please. I am willing to pay $5 for every dollar that I have ever spent on the road."

From an advocate of Good Roads who lives on a bad one—

Mr. Charley Odom, who is a farmer and merchant on the Beulah road in Lauderdale County, Mississippi, which has not been improved, plainly evidences his dissatisfaction with the road conditions with which he has to deal. Mr. Odom says—

"There hasn't been a time since the first of December that I have been able to get anything hauled to my place from Meridian, just four miles, for less than 25 cents per hundred. In the majority of instances it has cost me as high as 50 cents and a good many times it has been impossible to get it at any price. The people in my community have actually had to go without oil for their lamps for a week at a time because they couldn't get it. If these conditions are not a heavier tax on the people than paying for the construction of roads then I am a bad judge and a bad mathematician."

This evidence is given because these farmers, as well as every other person who has had an opportunity to use good roads, have found them eminently satisfactory in every respect, from the view points of both utility and economy.

Once built, a concrete road is permanent. It is safe, clean, passable at all times, free of ruts and holes, requires practically no upkeep, and is cheaper in the matter of dollars and cents at the end of ten, fifteen or twenty years than any other method of road construction.

The fullest information about concrete roads will be sent you upon request. Simply ask for Good Roads literature, or send the coupon to LAND BOUGHT UP.

Government Has Acquired Waterfront Property at Quebec.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—An important step has been taken by the Dominion Government in the purchase of three miles of waterfront at Quebec, which will be held in the general interest of the people of Canada. The cost of the property was a quarter of a million dollars.

Included in the three miles of property acquired is the whole of the Allan Steamship Co.'s waterfront. The purchase of the waterfront is a part of the scheme to develop the harbor of Quebec towards accommodating the growing traffic of the port.

This special purchase, it is stated, is only one of a number of similar purchases which will be made from time to time at harbors throughout the Dominion, the purpose of the Government being to encourage and develop ocean and inland water navigation.

One of the Ministers yesterday, in discussing the policy of the Government, said although he did not care to have his name quoted, "Transportation of all kinds it is our purpose to encourage. Good roads, good railways, good vessels everywhere—these are the big things to-day."

LONG BANK HOLIDAY.

Mexican Banks Will Stay Closed Until Jan. 1st.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 23.—By a Presidential decree issued yesterday afternoon every day, including to-day, until the end of the present year, is made a legal holiday in order to check the run on the banks here, particularly that on the Bank of London and Mexico.

On the promulgation of this decree the Bank of London and Mexico opened its doors but refrained from paying deposits.

Provisional President Huerta in the decree says he deems such action necessary in order to protect the banks until public confidence is more nearly restored. The banks, by this decree, are absolved from meeting any obligations until Jan. 1. It applies to all banking houses, whether a bank of issue or not.

With the exception of the Bank of London and Mexico and the Central Bank, none has yet taken advantage of the decree, and business at the other institutions is being conducted as usual. Crowds gathered about the doors of the two banks mentioned but there was no disorder. Both banks are being guarded by a strong force of police.

Latest Move in Thaw Case.

CONCORD, N.H., Dec. 23.—Certified copies of all records of the Matteawan Insane Hospital, relating to Harry Thaw since his commitment to that institution, have been requested of Wm. T. Jerome, special deputy attorney-general of New York, in the legal battle to secure Thaw's return to the New York jurisdiction. The request was made yesterday by the commission appointed by the Federal Court to determine whether Thaw's mental condition would make his release on bail a menace to public safety.

New Use For Wireless.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 23. — New use for the wireless equipment of Lackawanna trains had been found yesterday. An ambulance was waiting at the station when the flyer from New York pulled in here, a wireless message sent from the speeding train having informed hospital authorities of the illness of a passenger.

DON'T DOPE WITH ALCOHOLIC "TONICS"

This is honest advice for you who are run down and sick—don't dope with alcoholic "tonics." We're backing this advice with our personal guarantee of satisfaction to you, or your money back.

There are a lot of so-called "tonics" on the market that do not depend for their short-lived popularity on any real merit they possess, but upon the fact that the alcohol in most of them and the dangerous or habit-forming drugs in some of them give a few moments' exhilaration and liveliness after a dose is taken. After a while, even this effect ceases to take place, and the unfortunate patient, worse off than before, turns for relief to something else.

Don't dope yourself with such stuff. Take real medicine that will do you real good. Just will supply to your system the strengthening, disease-relieving and disease-resisting ingredients it needs. Take Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion, and get well and keep well. It is a real blood and nerve-food medicine. It contains no alcohol nor any other dangerous or habit-forming drugs, but is made entirely from ingredients needed to build up the strength and health of the ailing.

You who are weak and run-down, and you who are apparently well now, but are liable to suffer from various cold weather ailments, use Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion to get and keep well and strong. For the tired-out, run-down, nervous, emaciated or debilitated—the convalescing—growing children—aged people—it is a sensible aid to renewed strength, better spirits, glowing health.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion—king of the celebrated Rexall Remedies—is for freedom from sickness of you and your family. Pleasant-tasting—unlike the cod liver oil preparations—you'll be as enthusiastic about it as we are when you have noted its strengthening, invigorating, building-up, disease-preventing effects. If it does not help you, your money will be given back to you without argument. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of more than 7,000 leading drug stores in the United States, Canada and Great Britain.

WOMAN IN SECRET ROOM.

Lawyer Had Harbored Her In Office For Three Years.

MONTICELLO, N.Y., Dec. 23.—The death of Melvin H. Couch, a prominent lawyer and former district attorney of Sullivan county, revealed yesterday that unknown to his family and friends and to his clients, a woman had lived for three years in a secret room connecting with his law office. Couch was found lying dead on his office lounge.

Death was due to rupture of a blood vessel near the heart. In the next room crouched a frightened woman who admitted she had seen him die, but insisted she was not responsible for his death. She said she was Adelaide M. Brance of Goshen, N.Y., and that the secret room had been her only home during the three years.

Couch was 65 years of age. The woman is 40. Her hair has begun to turn grey. She was poorly dressed and the room where she lived was sparsely furnished with an old cook stove, a table, an iron bed and two chairs. She said she had lived there voluntarily and had never gone out in the daytime. At rare intervals she went for a walk at night.

The woman was held on a technical charge, but the coroner's verdict as to the cause of Couch's death supported her assertion that she was not responsible.

Sells Fox Ranch For $250,000.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., Dec. 23.—The Tuplin fox deal, which has been under negotiation for some time, was closed yesterday.

James Tuplin of Black Bank, Prince county, has sold out his property, including fox ranch, farm residence and oyster area, to a syndicate of Boston, Toronto and Island capitalists for a quarter of a million dollars. The ranch contains twelve pairs of island black foxes and the farm includes land which will be devoted to cranberry culture. The woodland will furnish the branches used for collecting spat on the oyster beds.

FIRE TAKES 20 LIVES.

Business District of Georgetown, British Guiana, Is Devastated.

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, Dec. 23.—A large section of the business quarter of Georgetown, which is known also as Demarara, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Twenty persons were killed and many injured. Scores were rendered homeless. A vast amount of sugar for exportation was burned, and a warehouse and many other buildings were destroyed.

Georgetown is the capital of British Guiana. Its population numbers 55,000, of whom 6,000 are whites.

No Scarcity of Labor.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 23. — A report reached the city yesterday morning that in Winnipeg, where soup kitchens have been established, advertisement is made that there is plenty of work in St. Catharines on the Welland ship canal.

Similar advertisement is being made in London, Eng., to the effect that a second Panama Canal is being built here and that 12,000 men are wanted.

While men are being placed at work daily, there will be no occasion for any great influx of laborers for a few months. Several who have arrived in anticipation of employment have found that they came too soon.

Must Maintain Standard.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Arthur Myers, ex-Minister of Finance in New Zealand, speaking here yesterday, discussed the question of Asiatic immigration.

They were determined the standard of living should not be lowered by Asiatics. The time had come when New Zealand should have her own navy and in time of war that navy would be placed under the control of the British Admiralty. The dominions whose shores were washed by the Pacific should unite to police the Pacific Ocean and so relieve the Mother Country of the duty of safeguarding trade routes in those waters.

EMBARGO MODIFIED.

U. S. Will Admit Potatoes Under Certain Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23. — Secretary Houston yesterday issued an order continuing the quarantine put temporarily into effect Sept. 20 last, forbidding potato importations from the British Isles, Canada, and all continental Europe. This action was modified, however, by a second order, under which the quarantine may be raised, under proper regulation and inspection, for foreign countries or districts which can show that they are free from potato wart and powdery scab, the two diseases which the Department of Agriculture aims to keep out of the country. The first order becomes effective Dec. 24, but will admit until Jan. 15 next potatoes covered by consular invoices issued on or before Wednesday next. The second becomes effective Jan. 15 next.

Representatives of various countries affected appeared at hearings recently held at the department and protested against the quarantine.

In the case of certain provinces in Canada, and certain countries and districts of Europe, the officials here believe the absolute prohibition can be lifted in time to allow the movement of the present year's crop, under regulation and inspection, which, under the Secretary's order, is similar to that for nursery stock.

CURRENCY BILL ACCEPTED.

Representatives Agree to Amendments—Now For Signature.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23. — The House passed the conference report on the administration currency bill at 10.45 o'clock last night by a vote of 298 to 60, and sent the report to the Senate, which had waited in session to receive it before the adjournment for the night.

Prolonged and uproarious cheers from the Democrats greeted the announcement of the vote by Speaker Clark and many members of the House hastened over to the Senate to see the report received there. Earlier in the evening the Senate had agreed to vote not later than 2.30 o'clock this afternoon, and the leaders regarded it as certain that the completed bill would be in the hands of President Wilson for his signature before to-night.

Fresh Eruptions In New Hebrides.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Fresh eruptions have caused further destruction of life among the natives of the Island of Ambrim in the New Hebridien group, according to a report received yesterday from the French Ministry of Marine from the captain of the French gunboat Kersainton, on his arrival at Noumea, New Caledonia.

Dip Point, on the western coast of the island, has been buried beneath a heavy fall of cinders and many of the inhabitants are missing. Two local steamers rescued 1,300 natives. No Europeans or Americans have been injured or killed.

Gold King's Condition Critical.

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 23. — Sir Lionel Phillips, the leading gold mine operator of South Africa, who was shot Dec. 11 by an assassin, is in a dangerous condition. The bullet was extracted from his right lung yesterday. It proved a long and difficult operation, under which it was feared he might succumb. The operation was successful, but the patient is suffering intense pain and is in a weakened condition.

No Definite Stand Likely.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 23.—Although Postmaster-General Burleson in his annual report favored the principle of Government ownership of telegraph and telephone lines, President Wilson has not taken a position on the question and has not yet made up his mind. It is not believed that the administration will take any definite position on the subject now.

TO THE RATEPAYERS OF CENTRE WARD:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

There are certain matters about which one may not promise—but decently try.

Take the block, north Brock and east Aylmer Streets. For fifty years it has been an eye-sore—never built on, practically shunned. Within a block of the centre of the City. Now why?

Because of the creek.

The rights of improvement on and along the creek remain with the property owners—not to the City. Hence the effort to improve may be a mutual one. The City should get the right, deepen the bed, wall along each side, fill in behind. Then it can be built across and practically blotted out. Bring in a revenue from taxes which is not now the case to any extent.

I propose, if elected, to see what can be done. It may not come about at first try, but a little pushing may presently carry it through. I will provide the push.

And in the meantime, if you approve, you might say so by your vote in my favour.

Yours Respectfully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

At the urgent request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914. Being born and lived my whole life in Peterborough, and a whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the city.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure.

I will do my utmost to keep down the ever-increasing rate of taxation, consistent with the needs of the growing municipality.

I may say that I am in favour of municipal ownership, and in favour of having all city work done by our own people, instead of bringing in outsiders to do it. I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended. I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being chairman of that board for two years. I was also chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honour to elect me Mayor of our city, I will do my best to serve you to the very best of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1913

SOUTH END PARCEL OF LAND CUT INTO 120 LOTS

Twelve Acres Just North of the River and East of Park Street Have Been Thrown on the Market.

OPEN FOUR NEW STREETS

One hundred and twenty lots have been recently opened in the twelve acres bounded by Park Street on the west, the Otonabee river on the east, McKellar Street on the north, and the Holmes property on the east. McKellar Street extends west from the foot of Lock Street, the Street Railway terminal looping for a short istance on this road.

The property was purchased from Mr. Holmes by Mr. Percy Rutherford and Mr. Scott of McDonnel Street, and is the last parcel between Park and Lock Streets to be cut up for real estate purposes.

Each lot is 33 feet by 105 feet, with the frontage of a few of them running to 36 feet. Four new streets are to opened in connection with this development. Three of them, running north and south parallel to Park Street, are Montrose, Lillian and Chester, the latter forming the eastern boundary of the section and separating it from the property which Mr. Holmes has retained. Graham Street extends east and west and is near the river.

The 120 lots thus front on McKellar, Park, Montrose, Lillian, Chester and Graham Streets. Wide fourteen foot lanes have been provided, and with a depth of 105 feet the buildings which will be erected should not be cramped.

$1,000 Restriction.

A building restriction requiring a home costing at least $1,000 has been placed on the property with a view to shutting out shacks.

All the lots along Chester Street have been sold and one cellar has been aken out. The lot at the corner of Park and McKellar has also been marked off.

It is believed that the next step in the expansion of the Street Railway in the south end will be a loop from the George Street line west to the boundary to join the expected extension of the C.G.E. service. In that event, the car line would probably be laid along McKellar Street and south on Park, bringing the new lot in close touch with all parts of the City.

The deal by which the twelve acres were purchased involved $10,000.

The new streets are 66 feet in width, and it is planned to keep them free of telephone and electric poles by having the latter installed in the lanes.

WILL BE A WHITE XMAS AFTER ALL

It looks like a white Christmas after all.

Up to this morning, the weather man was undecided—in fact he rather was inclined to predict a green Yuletide.

Eleven o'clock to-day saw the scale turn in favour of the real old-fashioned kind. Frist came a few scattered flakes and then the beautiful fell in earnest. By noon the most enterprising snow plough contractors were already on their rounds, and a little later sleighs had made their appearance.

Hockeyists, skaters and curlers are hoping that the downfall will be followed to-night by a change to much colder weather. The weather man, however, promises nothing but the same temperature to-morrow.

MR. R. G. STURGEON IS MANAGER OF PLUMBERS.

Members of the Plumbers' hockey team held a meeting in the Examiner office last night and elected Mr. R. G. Sturgeon, manager for the season. Mr. W. Regan was appointed secretary-treasurer, and Mr. A. Reynolds captain. The boys will put up a strong argument in the Mercantile League. It is expected that Manager Sturgeon will call a meeting in a few days.

Little Folks in the Shelter Will Have a Joyless Christmas if People do not Respond

THE TIME IS SHORT

The Examiner has received a number of donations for the children in the Children's Aid Society Shelter, but more are needed before there will be enough to supply all the little ones. These eleven little people will be without the joys of the holiday season unless there is a liberal response to the appeal. The time is getting short. Better send your donations in to the Examiner office as soon as possible..

Toys, books, clothing, candies, anything in this line will be thankfully received.

LACK OF GARBAGE

To Ensure Operation of Incinerator at Normal Capacity

The City's new garbage incinerator is in daily operation under the supervisionof Mr. A. M. Helson. The latter has been appointed caretaker of the crematory until the end of the present year. About eight or nine loads of garbage is being consumed at the plant each day. This is said to be hardly sufficient to keep the plant operating at normal capacity.

The contractors guarantee that the incinerator will consume at least twenty tons of garbage daily. The clinker, which is a by-product of the incine rated garbage, is being used to level up the ground surrounding the plant.

Sanitary Inspector Spence states that many of the individual garbage collectors are dumping refuse on the old dumping areas instead of taking it to the incinerator. The latter course is preferred by the authorities, as it facilitates the operation of the plant.

SENTENCED TO A MONTH IN JAIL FOR ASSAULT

Otonabee Man Drank Liquor That Was Purchased For His Dying Mother

FACING ANOTHER CHARGE

William Huggins of Otonabee was sentenced to a month in jail by Magistrate Dumble this morning, for assaulting his wife. The assault took place on Sunday last, Dec. 21, and, according to Mrs. Huggins' story in the witness box, Huggins was very drunk on that day. She had gone over to see his mother that afternoon, as she was very low. She went with her son, George Montgomery. When she returned home her husband was angry at her leaving the house when she was not in a fit condition to do so. He kicked her in the side and used terribly foul and abusive language to her. Mrs. Huggins fled from the house and her son protected her from her husband.

Th liquor that Huggins drank was bought for his dying mother, whose only nourishment it was.

"That is as bad as taking the coppers off a dead man's eyes," said the Magistrate.

Her little daughter corroborated her mother's evidence. The father said that he could not remember anything that occurred last Sunday afternoon. On this charge Huggins was given a month in jail.

Huggins was also charged with being drunk on Sunday last, while on the black list. To this he pleaded guilty and was fined $10 with the alternative of another thirty days in jail. He did not have the money, but was given ten days in which to raise it. Should he not pay it he will spend the next two months in the county gaol.

William Lavery was fined $5 and costs for being drunk and disorderly in a public place.

Elmer Riddell was fined $2 and costs for being drunk and disorderly in a public place. He pleaded guilty to the charge.

ARTISTIC CURTAIN FOR OPERA HOUSE

Splendid Painting of the Chariot Race From Ben Hur, Executed by Local Firm

The large number who attended the presentation of the Marks Bros., in the Grand Opera House last night, saw for the first time the splendid new scene that has been painted on the large asbestos curtain. Replacing the old one, representing a summer day in the country, the new scene depicts the chariot race from Ben Hur. Executed by the scenic department of J. J. Turner & Sons, proprietors of the Opera House, the new painting is a real work of art. Every detail from the accurate representation of the Roman chariot, to the expression on the faces of the racing horses is brought out in a manner that makes the picture an interesting study. And this in spite of the fact that the heavy fireproof asbestos curtain is a difficult thing on which to accomplish artistic results. Owing to the popular scene depicted and the accuracy of the representation the new painting is bound to be admired by the patrons of the Grand Opera House.

Toronto's White Slavery Murder Mystery, Anni Yokinen—the pretty intelligent, and well-educated Finnish girl, a domestic from Annesley Hall, Victoria College, who disappeared after saying good night to a lady friend on December 4th, and who was found in a dying condition, more than two weeks later, in a corn stook on the farm of John Dew, on the outskirts of the City. She was carried into the Dew homestead, where she passed away before she was able to tell anything of her strange disappearance. Five City detectives and a host of other sleuths hired by private societies and individuals interested in the strange case are working on it. The theory is that the girl was carried away by white slavers, forcibly, as she walked along the street, and was left to die in the farmer's corn stook.

WILL THE NEW LIGHTS COST $6000 A YEAR?

Mr. R. F. MacGregor in an Open Letter to Ald. Johnston Asks for Some Information About New System

WHAT WILL BE THE END?

Alderman Johnston, Chairman of Power Committee.

Sir,—I, in common with many of our ratepayers, would like to know what it is going to cost to light our down-town section. From the best information I can get each light will cost $60 per light per annum, which includes cost of installation, power to light the lights, interest on sinking fund spread over a period of years and maintenance and repairs.

You have installed 100 lights in our down-town section, which at $60 a year will cost the ratepayers $6000 a year. Under our old system I find that there were only nine lamps in this whole district which cost the ratepayers only $50 per lamp per year, which amounts to an annual charge of only $450 a year, as against $6000 a year under the system you have installed.

If the rest of our City is only moderately lit I would like to know what our total bill for street lighting is going to be. The ratepayers are completely in the dark. If only one mile of our streets cost $6000 per year to light, what are the remaining 65 miles of our streets going to cost?

Yours etc.,

R. F. MacGregor.

WILL HAVE TO FACE EIGHT CHARGES OF THEFT

Two Local Young Men Will be Accused of Entering That Number of Local Stores and Taking Goods and Money

TRIAL ON FRIDAY

Max McClellan and Ernest Jamieson, the two young men who were charged in police court on Friday last with taking $100 worth of jewellery from R. C. Braund's store, and a sum of money from N. Routley's store, will face six other charges of theft and shop breaking when they come before the magistrate next Friday.

In every case they will be accused of entering local grocery stores and stealing goods and money therefrom. Lillico's, Gobeen's and Bradshaw's are three of the stores which, it is said, the young men will be charged with burglarizing. These have all been entered recently.

Both of the accused pleaded guilty to the charges preferred against them last Friday.

CIVIC ITEMS AND A FEW OTHERS

A correspondent to-day complains in one paragraph of too many lights and in the next says "the people are entirely in the dark."

The snow had the street car service in trouble by two o'clock.

The curlers mean business and will get away to a good start. How about another cup or shield this winter?

It was reported on the streets to-day that turkeys were down to 16 cents a pound in Toronto resulting from heavy receipts.

The snow market climbed twenty points during the noon hour. Even money now that the sleigh bells ring on Christmas.

Empty stockings hung from a mantel or from the foot of a bed are, sure enough, symbols of the innocence and truthfulness of children.

Those who have calendars to give away are in a position to know the "get something for nothing" spirit.

Mr. Geo. Ball says prospects look bright for that commission vacancy.

Children are essential to Christmas. Homes without them may be decorated, but they are like well set stages without the actors.

The snow man is putting a blanket on the fine sheet of ice that was forming on the Little Lake.

The A.Y.P.A. of All Saints Church are sending out forty-five baskets of good cheer.

A trading stamp magnate died the other day, worth ten million dollars, every cent of which he made from gullible merchants, and they in turn got their profits, if any, from their customers. The people pay the bills after all, and imagine they are getting value received, while the promoter gets all the real money.

THE SENATE MAY CONDUCT ENQUIRY

Independent of the Commission Appointed the Upper Chamber Will Investigate High Cost of Living.

TO SUMMON WITNESSES

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—From present indications the High Cost of Living Commission will not get down to work until after the holidays. "We will first collaborate the information we already have at Ottawa," said Mr. John McDougall, and after that we will decide what further scope the enquiry will take.

"It is almost certain that the Senate will undertake a thorough enquiry into the whole question independent of the Commission already appointed. The Senate has the same power to summon witnesses in an inquiry as has the Commons, and since the present parliament was opened has already commenced two inquiries bearing upon the cost of living.

NO LIGHT ON MYSTERY

It is Said Examination Shows Finnish Girl Had Not Been Subjected to Any Violence

A NATURAL DEATH

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—Almost perished with cold, in a demented condition, and forced from starvation to eat raw corn gathered together in the fields, it is believed that Anna Yokinen, the young Finnish girl, came to her death as the result of natural causes. The post-mortem examination, while it has not been made public, is said to have decided the fact that the girl had not been subjected to any violence or physically harmed.

It seems almost incredible to believe that the young woman could have wandered about Toronto's outskirts for nearly 21 days, unseen by any residents in that neighbourhood; but this appears to be the only solution of the mystery.

MR. HARTLEY'S CAMPAIGN IS OPENED

An enthusiastic and well attended meeting at the Labour Hall last night marked the opening of Mr. J. J. Hartley's campaign for the Mayoralty. Mr. C. F. Browne presided, and Mr. Chas. Hammacott was appointed to act as Secretary.

In introducing the candidate, the chairman emphasized the fact that Mr. Hartley was the working man's candidate, and had been endorsed by the Trades and Labour Council. The candidate's report on his reception in the various establishments which had been visited, was most favourable.

Several of those present addressed the meeting on his behalf, and committees were appointed to work in the different wards.

Mr. Hartley's committee rooms are now open on George St., below the Labour Hall.

DR. M' CLARK IS TO SPEAK

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—Dr. Michael Clark, the member for Red Deer, Alta., arrived in Ottawa this morning on his way to Pictou, where he will conduct a series of meetings during the week between Christmas and New Year's Day, in constituencies of E. M. Macdonald and J. H. Sinclair of Gusboro.

The first meeting will be held at New Glasgow on Monday night. "I have been much impressed by a statement made by Mr. Hirsh, of the London Economist," said Dr. Clark this morning. "He stated that the present financial stringency throughout the world is due to the tremendous armament construction. I am more than inclined to agree with him, and I fail to see where the borrowing by Canada of thirty-five million dollars to build warships would help the situation in any degree."

Beautiful Present From China

Perhaps the finest example of Chinese workmanship in needlework that his ever been seen in this city, is the property of Mr. H. G. Walker, 774 George street. The article is a Chinese panel, hand embroidered on silk, the colouring, design, and art of which defies any attempt at description. The tints of the panel are particularly exquisite, and are so delicately blended that the beautiful effect accomplished can oly be realized by seeing it.

The panel is a Christmas present from the Rev. C. J. P. Joliffe, of Luchow, China, an old school chum of Mr. Walker's. It has perhaps travelled as far to reach its present owner as any Christmas present.

The New C.P.R. Bridge

The work of reconstructing the new C.P.R. bridge across the Otonabee river is practically completed. A few men have been retained to make the final adjustments to the structure. A temporary span has been placed in the middle of the bridge. This will be superseded by a swing span sometime next year.

100 BASKETS SENT OUT BY THE LADIES

King's Daughters Have Completed the Bulk of Their Pre-Holiday Session.

MADE UP BASKETS THIS MORNING

One hundred baskets of good cheer have been prepared by the King's Daughters and were distributed today. Mrs. Hazen-Ritchie and Mrs. R. W. Travers stated that the original number to be cared for was one hundred and twenty, but the ladies of St. Paul's Church took twenty of them. The King's Daughters have been assisted by Mr. F. W. Miller, and their own knowledge of city conditions preclude giving to the unworthy.

Citizens have been very generous this year, individual gifts of money running as high as $20, and offerings of fruit, candies and similar articles being numerous.

The making up of the baskets demanded experience, and a knowledge of conditions. With three or four children in a family candies and toys were added for the little ones. It was interesting to watch the "lady bountifuls. Baskets for those in straightened circumstances began with all the necessities such as meat, potatoes, sugar, tea, etc., and there were added oranges, dates, apples et cetera.

Some baskets were sent to those who were convalescent, weakly or possibly lonely. In its entirety it was a work of thoughtfulness and love, and many individuals will surely be made happier by the good cheer dispensed under the direction of the ladies. The Big Brothers sent toys for the children.

System Has Cost $20,000

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Everybody is delighted with the quality and working of the new lights on George and side streets, and I should like, and I think many others would, too, to know what they have and will cost for operation. The aldermen have given us a splendid light on the streets and I wish to know whether it is cheaper or dearer, as well as a great deal better than the old lights.

Taxpayer.

The approximate cost of installing the Hydro Electric street lighting system is placed at $20,000. Steps have been taken to secure figures for publication concerning the operation and maintenance of the system.

REV. W. C. RIDDIFORD IN LONDON

Rev. W. C. Riddiford of the Berton Street Baptist Church, London, preached an eloquent sermon on the theme of "What is Christ?" He dwelt on the sacredness of the world's greatest birth, and he concluded with the words "Unto you is born this day in the City of David, a Saviour, a Christ and a Lord." Special music by the choir was given. In the morning the anthem was "The Birthday of the King," and at the evening service "There Were Shepherds Abiding."

TUESDAY, DEC. 23, 1913

HOW IS IT?

Market quotations show that hogs in Toronto and Montreal are $9.00 and $9.50 respectively, and at Buffalo, $7.80; that cattle are $8.25 in Toronto, $9.60 in Montreal and $8.65 in Buffalo. The same disparity obtains in lambs. Why is it that with higher prices in Canada than in the United States, there is such a drainage of Canadian cattle and other stock to the United States as we are told there is? One would think that the highest market would be patronised. Can it be that the manipulation of dealers is responsible, that the home market it intentionally kept higher? If too much stock were thrown upon the home market, prices would drop, and the Canadian consumer get the benefit, and the dealers be correspondingly hit? By accepting a slightly lower price in a foreign market, the home market price is kept up and the high standard of home prices maintained. There seems to be some reason for these conditions. What is it?

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

There seems to be no doubt that Christmas gift-giving is degenerating — developing into a game of rivalry to a large degree. Originally it meant an expression of good will. But mere expression of good will, is vain, without effective implementation. "Be ye warmed and filled," is a good prayer or injunction, but during these warming and filling is more to the point. If a gift is given merely to express some fancied obligation or to get a gift in return, the spirit is lost. Our good will can only be effectively expressed in the true Christmas spirit by giving something that counts, something with a meaning and effect in keeping with the great Gift of his Son that meant far more than abstract good will—meant the greatest good that mortal or even divine mind can conceive. With the prevailing destitution which is heart saddening as we inquire and discover its extent, our best Christmas gifts will be something to lighten the burden. If a tenth part of the means spent in costly gifts of useless articles to those who do not need them, were spent in the way of the true Christmas spirit, an infinite deal of happiness would be spread among the dark homes of the town. If the money sent out of town to purchase Christmas gifts were spent in the town it would be left here to increase the relief of destitution it would make possible. Good will means fair play, and it is only fair play to those business men by whose mutual help we all live and prosper, to patronize those who patronize us. Though this may be regarded as a material view of Christmas, yet it has a good warrant. The preliminary, the first acts of the Lord of Christmas, was to do bodily good, to feed the hungry, heal the sick. If we could all take the lesson to heart — and we all could if we would — Christmas in Peterborough this season would gain a new meaning, and its blessed significance would be realised as it has never been realised before.

WHAT CHRISTMAS SUGGESTS.

Christmas and Christianity are equivalent terms; the beginning of the one is the beginning of the other. We could not have Christianity without Christmas, and the meaning of Christmas is Christianity in its highest and noblest manifestation. Peace on earth and good will towards men, is the slogan of Christmas and, so far as the spirit they represent is made effective in the propagation of Christianity, so far will the object of Christmas be realized. Christianity is not a symbol; it is an entity, something real. We symbolize Christmas by its observance in the form of gift-giving, which, though that is its foundation meaning, falls far short of its real significance, and is only a simulacrum of the duty it imposes. Material gifts, material kindness, are only the first step. The Lord of Christmas taught this by practice, but it was only a medium of impressing the real meaning of his mission—the saying, the moral regeneration of man. The great Christmas gift was the gift of a new moral nature to man and all the ineffable benefits to the world such a gift involves.

A class journal, the "Travellers' standard of our home-born population to show the foreign-born population of five great cities—London, Berlin, Paris, Chicago and New York. The average of foreign-born to the native in the three first cities is 4 per cent. The average percentage of foreign-born in the two United States cities is 38 per cent. A similar ratio exists through the country and this applies pro rata to Canada. Our population contains an increasingly large proportion of foreign-born, many of them from countries where the moral standard is far lower than in this country, and the problem is avoidance or removal of the danger of lowering the Standard," has an article illustrated tion, and a lowering of the standard of our Christian civilization. The only way to solve this problem is to bring the foreign-born under the influence of Christianity—to bring them into effective contact with its teachings and ministration. We can do that by missionary propagandism, of the heroic character of that represented by the first missionaries of Christianity, the personally chosen Apostles. There is nothing so truly, so really in keeping with the true spirit and significance of Christmas, as Gospel propagation, and there is no form of gospel propagation more demanded in Canada than that represented by home missions. We can bestow no greater gift upon the foreign-born and our own isolated citizenship than the gift of the Gospel and the religious privileges it implies.

BORDEN UNDER BONDS TO THE BIG "INTEREST"

Mr. Borden and His Cabinet Colleagues Have No Time for the Farmer or Consumer

That the Borden Government is bound hand and foot to the high protection interests was clearly demonstrated on December 18th, when the Premier and almost all his ministers were faced first by a representative delegation from the Ontario Grange and the Western Grain Growers' Associations and then by an apparently self-appointed deputation of fruit growers, canners and cattle breeders, headed by Senator E. D. Smith, the fruit grower and canner of Winona, Ont. The first delegation demanded free food, free cement, free agricultural implements, an increase of the British preference to fifty per cent. with ultimate free trade with the Mother Country, and a general lowering of duties in the interests of the farmer and consumer. The deputation of fruit growers, canners, and cattle breeders, demanded that what suited them should not be changed, and that therefore the tariff be kept at its present high level or increased so as to further enrich themselves at the cost of the consumer.

It was not, however, in their arguments that the main interest lay, so much as in their reception by the Government. For a time the Premier and his minister listened to the low tariff arguments of the agricultural representatives. Then the Ministers became impatient as the facts were driven home. First Hon. Mr. Hazen remembered an engagement for lunch and hurried out. A few minutes later he was followed by Messrs. Pelletier and Crothers, the latter suddenly remembering that he was "Minister of Play". Then Hon. Martin Burrell, the Minister of Agriculture from British Columbia, who should have been particularly interested in the debate, discovered a remarkable appetite and hurried out. For an hour longr Mr. Borden and the remnant of the Cabinet listened to the arguments of the agricultural representatives in favour of free trade and wider markets with ill-concealed distaste.

A change however, came over the spirit of their dreams after lunch. Then appeared the self-constituted deputies for the fruit growers, cattle breeders and canners, all of them anxious for high and higher tariff. For this seance the Ministers all returned, and the afternoon was spent by the Cabinet digesting good lunches and listening to arguments exactly along the lines that their masters, "the interests," approved.

To add a final touch of realism to the scene, came an unrehearsed meeting. As the Western low tariff delegation left the Prime Minister they encountered in the corridor, Sir William Mackenzie, President of the Canadian Northern, hurrying down for a private interview with Mr Borden. Some of the delegates wondered whether Sir William was going to report on what Mackenzie and Mann had done with the $15,000,000 they got from the Government last session, or whether he was paving the way for a further onslaught on the treasury.

The representatives of the Ontario and Western farmers presented practically the same demand they made in 1910. Their needs were all along the lines of the Liberal policy of free food and wider markets. They did not get the sympathetic reception they received from the Liberals and the events of the day showed conclusively that the interests of farmers and consumers must be subordinated to the demands of "the interests"

The arguments of the high protection delegation which followed were significant. The fruit growers objected to any reduction in duty, because if the tariff were reduced prices would go down and they would lose the Western market. The cattle breeders of thoroughbred stock objected to reduction in tariff because that might interfere with their market. Since they could could import their thoroughbred stock free of duty thay naturally wanted everything they sold protected as much as possible.

The canners' end was repregented by Hon. E. D. Smith who last year was elevated to the Senate by Mr. Borden. Being connected with the Dominion Canners, which every grocery dealer and most of the consumers in Canada know to be about the most complete combine in the Dominion, Senator Smith naturally argued for the high tariff which would stop any competition that might imperil their stranglehold on the Canadian public. Senator Smith defended the canners' combine and argued they were not making much profit. Unfortunately for his arguments the next day the annual statement of the Dominion Canners was published which said: "It is understood that the Dominion Canners for the year which will end the 31st of this month, will show a fair surplus over all charges and dividends"

Premier Borden and his Ministers have no time for the needs of the farmer and the ordinary consumer. They have ample leisure to hear Mackenzie and Mann, the Canners, and other protected interests in favour of high tariff. When the next election comes on the Tory election chest will be full of money taken out of the taxes on the Canadian consumers' meal table.

Daniel Johnston of Forrest, ex-president of his local Conservative Association, took a prominent part with the high protection delegation. About the same time he put in his own application as fruit commissioner to succeed the late Alex. McNeil. It is now announced that he will probably land the job.

Do you believe that money has germs on it?"

"It may have."

"What in the world shall we do?"

"Don't worry: it would take a mighty active germ to hop from the money to you during the short time that you keep what you get."

NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS

An Old Time Favourite as Evergreen as a Lusty Young Cedar Tree and as Seasonable as Ice and Snow, Skating and Sleighing on Dec. 25th

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse;
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there;
The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugar-plums danced through their heads,
And mamma in her kerchief, and I in my cap,
When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter,
I sprang from my bed and see what was the matter.
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.
The moon, on the breast of the new fallen snow,
Gave a lustre of mid-day to objects below;
When what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a cute little sleigh, and eight tiny reindeer,
With a little old driver, so lively and quick
I knew in a moment it mus b St. Nick.
More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled, and shouted, and call'd them by name:
"Now Dasher! now Dancer! now Prancer! now Vixen!
On Comet! on Cupid! on Dunder and Blitzen!
To the top of the porch, to the top of the wall!
Now dash away, dash away, dash away all!"
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle, mount up to the sky,
So, up to the housetops the coursers they flew,
With the sleigh full of toys, and St. Nicholas, too,
And then in a twinkling I heard on the roof,
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof.
As I drew in my head, and was turning around,
Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.
He was dressed all in fur from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of toys he had flung on his back
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack,
His eyes how they twinkled, his dimples how merry!
His cheeks like the roses, his nose like a cherry,
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard on his chin was as white as the snow.
The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke, it encircled his head like a wreath.
He had a broad face and a little round belly
That shook, when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly.
He was chubby and plump—a right jolly old elf—
And I laughed, when I saw him, in spite of myself.
A wink of his eye, and a twist of his head,
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread.
He spake not a word, but went straight to his work,
And filled all the stockings; then turned with a jerk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose.
He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down of a thistle;
But I heard him exclaim, ere he drove out of sight,
"Happy Christmas to all, and to all a good-night!"

OBSERVATORY MAY GO WEST

Possibility That Biggest Telescope Will Not Be Located at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—The huge telescope which the government ordered some months ago may not be located at the Dominion Observatory at Ottawa. Tests are being conducted in British Columbia and at several points in the Northwest provinces with a view of discovering the point where, throughout the year, there is the greatest predominance of clear sky, which is an essential condition to carrying out astronomical observations. It is quite possible, therefore, that the Capital may lose the new observatory.

The telescope, for which $90,000 was appropriated, is to be of the reflector type, six feet in diameter and will be the largest in the world. The contract was awarded last autumn to two American firms. It will not be delivered until 1915.

THE CULMINATION OF THE YEAR

By RUTH CAMERON

Day after to-morrow is Christmas, the culmination of a year.

For when you stop to think of it, you will find that the whole year works up to Christmas.

On the printed calendar January 1st is the beginning of one year and the end of another, but in the calendar of our hearts the year measures from one Christmas to another.

Scarcely has one Christmas passed before the world begins to prepare for the next. If you were going to get out a book for Christmas sale you might think September would be early enouyh to publish it, but as a matter of fact if the Christmas book is to be sold at wholesale it ought to be out in February, for it is then that the wholesale salesmen start out on the road with their books for the next Christmas.

Surely there is nothing that suggests Christmas less than the breathless heat of a July or August day. It seems almost impossible that there ever was such a thing as Christmas or ever will be again. And yet never a summer day passes but that hundreds and thousands of women all over the country are busy with their needles "making something for Christmas."

It is the middle of September before we are all home from our summer vacations. We have a week or two to settle down in, and two or three weeks to get our fall clothes into shape, and then if we do not mean to be last-minute shoppers, it is high time to begin our Christmas shopping. I have often seen Christmas bargains advertised in October, and by November the Christmas rush has actually begun.

At about this period we discard ordinary time reckoning and date everything before or after Christmas. "When are you going South?" "Oh, some time after Christmas." "Are you going to buy a new suit this year?" "Not till after Christmas." "When is your sister coming home?" "A couple of weeks before Christmas." So the reckoning goes.

Thanksgiving, the typical American festival, which in the old Puritan days far outstripped Christmas, is beginning now merely a little side eddy in the powerful current that rushes us toward Christmas. "No, I shan't try to get home Thanksgiving," says the traveller or the student, "it's too near Christmas." If Thanksgiving warns more attention it will certainly have to get itself moved into some other part of the year.

Of course Christmas is the culmination of the year in a financial way. People spend in a reckless fashion they never dream of at any other time. The amount of money that changes hands in preparation for Christmas must be simply enormous. Reckoning $2 a person (and I do not think that is large, for while there are a great many people who do not spend as much, there are millions who spend a great deal more) that would mean that in the United States $180,000,000 is spent on Christmas. One wonders what the merchants would do without this tremendous impetus to trade. And what would be done with the money that was not spent in this way. One cannot help wondering also—at the risk of being thought a kill joy moralist—if poverty in the United States could not be almost abolished by the proper use of $180,000,000 a year.

But I didn't intend to moralize when I began. So I'll drop that subject and just remind you once more, in case you have forgotten: Day after tomorrow is Christmas, the culmination of the year.

HAVE SECURED POSSESSION

Harvester Company Will Make Peterborough a Distributing Centre

Evidences of the Christmas rush of freight is to be found at the new C. P. R. freight sheds. On one side of the building cars are disgorging their contents, while on the other side it is being removed by men and teams. The new building contains more than double the space of the old building, which was vacated one week ago. The office staff have taken up their quarters in the new office adjoining the freight department. The staff comprises eleven employees.

The International Harvester Company have secured possession of the old freight sheds at the C. P. R. station, and will convert it into an implement warehouse. It will constitute a distributing centre for the Company, who have a large trade in the district.

GARBAGE WILL NOT BE COLLECTED

On Christmas or New Year's Day

Sanitary Inspector Spence states that there will be no collection of garbage either on Christmas or New Year's Day. The collectors will make the Thursday's collections on the Wednesday previous. Complaints have been received concerning the removal of receptacles by the collectors. This is due to the fact that the material is frozen to the cans, and cannot be removed without the use of dynamite. Householders are advised to wrap the garbage in paper before placing it in the cans.

We wish everyone a Merry Christmas and many Prosperous and Happy New Years.
We remain,
Respectfully yours,
J. J. TURNER & SONS

A. for Montgomery, who has held for some years the rank of Captain Adjutant of the 6ist Regiment, has been appointed Lieut.-Col. commanding. HARRY LINDLEY DIED IN VIRGINIA

Old-time Actor Was Well Known in Peterborough — Played at Bradburn Opera House.

"DAVID HARUM" WAS HIS LAST SHOW HERE

Harry Lindley, an actor of the old school, has shuffled off the stage of life. He was well known in Peterborough years ago and made his last appearance in this city in "David Harum" at the Brock Street Rink.

Citizens who were young in the seventies will recall Lindley and his shows at the old Bradburn Opera House. The following from the Toronto Telegram relates to his latest years:

"News has just reached the city of the death in Virginia on December 16, of Harry Lindley, an old-time favourite comedian of Toronto playgoers back in the early seventies. He was of the old school of all-round actors, and could take any part assigned him. Patrons of the Royal Lyceum, and later of the Grand Opera House, will not soon forget the quips and jests of the old-time character actor who has just passed.

"He had of late years travelled with stock and burlesque shows, and at the time of his death was accompanied by his two daughters. Mrs. Lindley was not with him, she being in Chester, Pennsylvania, playing stock.

"Two years ago Lindley paid his last visit to Toronto, and looked up a number of his old friends. He used to lament the change in taste from the old-time clean comedy to the risque stuff put on in the burlesque shows of to-day."

INDUCTION OF REV. DR. MARSH

Enthusiastically Received by Parishoners to His New Charge

The induction of Rev. Dr. Marsh took place in Fairbairn Church on Wednesday of last week, the weather being very favourable. Both congregations were well represented which made full church. Rev. Percy, of Harriston, gave a very able address. Rev. Cooper, of Mt. Forest, performed the induction services. Rev. Currie of Bethel and East Normandy, addressed the minister and Rev. Kendell, of Dromore, Inter Moderator, addressed the people in a very able manner and showed them that a minister himself could do very little but with the cooperation of the people and the grace of God could accomplished great things. Rev. Dr. Marsh spoke very briefly on account of having a very severe cold.

The fowl supper was a grand success as everybody seemed to go home well pleased with what they got and heard. The programme was varied. Rev. Dr. Kendell acted as chairman in place of Rev. Dr. Marsh. Dromore choir gave some very choice selections. Mr. Ramage and Miss Mary also assisted with the singing in the afternoon. The Eakett Orchestra was in good trim and gave some very fine selections. Addresses were given by Revs. Cooper, Currie, Kendell and Marsh, which were very good. Also readings by Miss Essie Swanston whom any congregation should be proud of. The proceeds amounted to about $90.

More Than 250 Different Magazines Are Sold Here

Presses of the United States and Canada Kept Busy Turning Them Out—Many Devoted to Women's Interest.

OF RECENT GROWTH

The reading public may be surprised to learn that two hundred and fifty different magazines and periodicals are sold in Peterborough stores.

The estimate given is probably below the actual figures, for the printing presses in the English-speaking world have become very specific during recent years. But even two hundred and fifty is a staggering number and indicates the futility of trying to keep pace with the trend in all the fields covered by these publications.

Of the more prominent issues there are one hundred and fifty magazines that may be called leaders. All the bookstores carry the majority of these periodicals. Some of them are printed in Canada, but the presses of the United States and England produce most of them.

The growth of magazine publishing and reading would in itself form the basis of an interesting article. It suffices to state in these lines that in so far as this City is concerned the greatest development has materialized during the past fifteen or twenty years. As an illustration, a young man recently counted twelve periodicals which he has read regularly during the past three or four years.

Most of them are devoted to fiction, with a few making pretensions to seriousness with occasional articles on various subjects of some depth.

This case is probably an exception, but it is undoubtedly true that the average young man reads three monthly magazines and a weekly or two, apart altogether from daily newspapers.

Magazines for Women.

Nor are women to be excluded. Bookstore proprietors will tell you that within the past few years there has been a marvellous increase in the number of publications devoted to women's interest. Not so long ago the Delineator had the field practically to itself. This is a fact, at any rate in regard to wide circulation. Fashions, patterns and kindred subjects were mainly touched upon. Then some far-seeing or venturesome individual broke into the field with new ideas, found a ready response and look at the results. There are dozens of women's magazines built upon similar specifications, with the principal variation found in the cover designs.

English Publications

Magazines published in England have a wide vogue in Canada. They naturally followed the thousands of Old Countrymen who have come to this country during the past decade. Not that they were previously absent from Canadian bookstands. But the circulation leaped rapidly with heavy imigration, and a host of new periodicals found their way into west bound ocean mail bags for the first time. The number of English periodicals now sold in Canada is well up in three figures. At that the best magazines are not on sale in the stores, probably for the reasons that they are not returnable and would not meet the popular demand. The English Review, Fortunately, Contemporary, 19th Century, and others of a similar nature, are not sold in Peterborough. They sell at fifty cents each and the price may account for their absence from the big bookstalls in Toronto and Montreal.

A Wide Variety.

Some of the magazines have a wide sale with the fiction type leading. The slush and risque stuff found in the stories is responsible for the big circulation, but the tinsel of tawdriness soon wears through, hence the hope for a more general cleavage to higher ideals on the part of editors of best sellers.

Most Canadian magazines are safe reading for any household and in many respects they deserve a preference.

Mr. Nelson Graham, Charlotte Street, carries probably the largest number of periodicals in the City, and when he estimated the total in the neighbourhood of 250 he believed he was quoting a low figure.

A close observer says that one reason the world is so busy is because half the women are working to reduce their hip measurement, while the other half are working to increase it.

All Union Barber Shops will remain open until Elven o'clock to-morrow night and be closed all day Christmas.

PACKAGES FROM THE OLD COUNTRY BREAK RECORDS

Wearing Apparel is Prominent, and Utility is Characteristic of this Year's Gifts

PLUM PUDDINGS AND CAKES ARE INCLUDED

"More parcels than ever," said Mr. Robt. Hall, Collector of Customs, to an Examiner reporter to-day in reply to an inquiry regarding the number of the gifts upon which a duty must be paid.

"They are mostly from the Old Country and it is noticeable that the great bulk of goods are of a useful character. Woollen goods, shawls and dress goods, plum puddings, and fruit cakes, are numerous, with wearing apparel probably constituting the bulk of the articles."

Utility is therefore characteristic of the presents which Old Country people are forwarding to their loved ones in the vicinity of Peterborough.

The mails and customs speak messages of love at this season. There is a wealth of human interest wrapped up in the countless letters and packages.

CANDIDATES FOR THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

In the excitement over the contests for the Mayoralty, Public Utilities Commission and Council, the ratepayers should not forget that they will be called upon to elect representatives to another very important body—the Board of Education. Five members of the Board will have to face the electorate this year: Mr. John Crane, W. H. Hill, Dr. J. E. Middleton, Lt.-Col. Miller and Dr. Burnham. The members of the Board who remain in office another year are Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, J. J. Turner, Jr.; V. Eastwood, L. M. Hayes and Dr. Morrison. It is likely that the retiring members will be in the field again this year. The only new candidate mentioned so far has been Mr. J. H. Smith.

HID MONEY IN THE STOVE

Examiner Special:

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Dec. 23. When Edward Servois, of Youngstown, N.Y., just across the river from Niagara-on-the-Lake, left home for Lewiston yesterday, fearful of highway robbers he hid three hundred dollars in bills in the oven of the kitchen stove. His wife returning unexpectedly started to cook some biscuits for supper, and when Servois returned all he could rescue from the burning of his three hundred was fifteen one-dollar bills.

Mention This Fact to the Unemployed of the City and They Will Fold Their Tent and Steal Away Like an Arab in the Night---A North Monaghan Farmer's View of the Situation--A Recent Addition to Peterboro's Population

On Monday there arrived in Peterborough a family of five comprising husband, wife and four children. The bread-winner of the family is no stranger to this city, having resided here prior to his return to England a few weeks ago. He was formerly employed in the Canadian General Electric Company's works and was regarded as a capable and efficient worker. In all probability he will return to his old position with the firm.

Ominous forebodings are abroad concerning the hard times that are said to be approaching. But there is evidently no indication of stage fright in the man who undertakes to bring his wife and family to a country where hard times are said to exist, together with the prospects of six months' Canadian winter, not to mention the near approach of Christmas. This man must certainly have good reasons for believing that this country will provide him and his family with a living. A man of this calibre possesses more genuine optimism than many a single man who is without family encumbrances, actual or prospective.

Work on the Farm.

The latter, as soon as circumstances separate them from a job, take to the street and dissipate their little hard luck story, whenever they find a sympathetic ear. Just mention the fact that they can secure work on a farm, and they will fold their tent and steal away like an arab in the night. They throw up their hands in horror at the thought of communing with a Canadian farmer and engaging in the largest industry in the country. The labour problem is still a material one with the farmer. Agriculturalists who employ a man throughout the summer months can invariably find work sufficient to engage a man's attention for the entire year,

Men Wanted.

A prominent North Monaghan farmer dropped into the Examiner yesterday and incidentally remarked that he was in a position to employ a couple of men. He also stated that several of his neighbours were similarly situated. "Men," he said, "would rather starve on the streets or accept civic charity, than secure employment on a farm. That class of men," continued the North Monaghan farmer, "is usually representative of a class that is of little use to the farming community."

For in the words of the Rev. James Anthony, Agincourt, York County—The new rural life is intensely practical. It has no use for dreamers. Dreamers give the world nothing but empty dreams. Nature study must lead in the direction of better control of nature. The cultivated field is as interesting as the wilderness any day. The orchard requires attention as well as the unbroken forest. Poets must, if they would be heard, interpret life as it is to-day. The church must fit men to live in Ontario as well as in New Jerusalem. A man's worth to the commonwealth is considered to be in proportion to his power to serve. It is the teacher's high privilege to make all this clear to the boys and girls that are soon to make our laws.

There is a new rural life. The day has gone when anyone regards it as a reproach to live in the country. The telephone, the railway, rural free delivery, the newspaper and the library, together with the enterprise of country people who have had faith in the possibilities of rural life have had their influence in bringing to rural Ontario the best in the city and town without the corresponding disadvantages of urban existence. Not that those who believe in the country regard their work as done. No, for country people "the best is yet to be!" The struggle has just begun, and the leaders, in bringing about the end desired, must be the press, the pulpit, and the public school teacher.

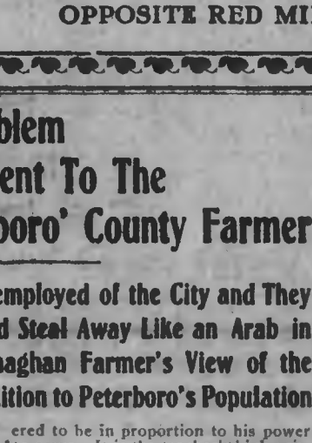
The New Rural Life.

There are perils to be faced. The first of these is the blinding power of the present material prosperity. There is the menacing blight of the cares of the world and the deceitfulness of riches. The days were in Ontario when a man regarded his farm as his home. Now he regards it as his mine. He was proud of his place as a freeman in the commonwealth. Now his pursuit is money. He was glad to take a part in the healthy activities of the neighbourhood. Now the bond of union that he regards as of supreme importance is the cash nexus. He was proud when his boy became a doctor, a lawyer, a farmer. His heart now swells when his child amasses money.

The spirit of the new rural life as it is interpreted by its highest prophets is a fine combination of reverence and free inquiry. There is a new sense of power. Electricity has made thec ountry a new place to work in. Pests are now understood, and the means of their conquest are in the farmer's hands. No man who knows his business talks of luck; he does not regard his lot as being imposed upon him. In other words, he has caught thes cientific spirit. This spirit has taught him his limitations and his dependence upon world forces and spiritual entities.

You can't tell. Genius sometimes wears clothes that fit.

To the Electors of the West Ward



LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having been requested by a large number of electors to allow myself for re-election as Alderman, I again respectfully tender your my services.

I have now represented you for four years, during which time I have made myself thoroughly conversant with the streets, sidewalks, sewers and other interests in the Wards.

By my services in the past, together with the past four years' experience, I ask you to judge my actions in the future, and confidently solicit your support and influence.

If elected, I again promise to conscientiously look after the interests of the Ward and the City in general, and to give all matters coming before your Council the necessary time and careful consideration, endeavouring to consider all questions in a fair and businesslike manner, consistent with economy and general progressiveness.

With the best wishes, I am,

Your Obedient Servant,

JOS. J. DUFFUS

The First Round Of The English Cup Competition

Last Year's Incidents---A Battle Royal is Promised When the Old Seasoned Cup Tie Fighters Meet--Old Country Soccer News of Interest

The First Round of the English Cup. Last Year's Incidents.

The draw for the first round of the English cup competition proper has been exceptionally lenient with first division clubs, inasmuch as only two games will take place where members of the charmed circle have been drawn together. The most notable instance where famous warriors clash is undoubtedly the meeting of Newcastle U. vs. Sheffield Wednesday at St. James' Park on the banks of the Tyne. That the meeting of these old and seasoned cup-tie fighters will result in a battle royal can at once be taken for granted, and special training will soon be the order of the day. In the first round last season the Wednesday were paired up with Grimsby Town, who they easily disposed of by five goals to one, and in the second, Chelsea 6-1, but were defeated in the third round by Bradford City 2-1. Newcastle reached the fourth round, when after a couple of draws they were finally disposed of by Sunderland 3-0.

The Rovers of Blackburn last season also received their quietus at the hands of their near neighbours, Burnley, in the fourth round of the competition. They began by slaughtering Northampton 7-2, while at the second hurdle they overcame those famous latter day cup fighters, Barnsley by 3-2. In the third round they met and conquered the biscuit men of Reading 2-1; but Burnley put them to sleep by the odd goal scored in the fourth. Middlesboro also were conquered by Burnley in the third round to the tune of 3-1, and seeing that the clubs concerned all made a good showing in last year's tourney, there's every indication of something out of the ordinary taking place regarding these two particular contests.

An Open Letter to "Fanny" Walden, of Tottenham Hotspur.

Dear Walden,—For some time your name is in every fellow's mouth—yes, and in that of a good many girls, too, for, be it known that the grand stand at Tottenham holds many of your feminine admirers. It is curious to note all this present popularity when, as a matter of fact, you were just as clever a footballer when you played for the Northampton club. Even then there were others that were preferred to you at outside right for the Southern league. In Northampton you were always a favourite with the crowd, but they did not go "mad" about you, as the London public seems to have done. I do not blame them altogether, for even I have at times fallen under your spell, and I have thrilled with pleasure as I have watched you dance round the men opposed to you. Nowadays, in the first league club, you are more in the limelight than ever, and there is just a danger of thee rowd trying to spoil. Personally I do not think they will succeed. You are a frank, engaging little chap, but it is difficult for anyone to resist the plaudits of the multitude week in week out without getting a bad attack of meglomania — otherwise known as swollen head. I trust you will accept the homage for what it is worth, for the public is a fickle mistress, and if once you lost your form and your fascination it would straightway forget you, or still worse, show its stupid resentment. I have seen so many popular heroes in my time relegated to the human scrap heap when their eye lost its lustre and their foot its cunning. My chief object in writing to you is to warn you in the friendliest way against becoming simply a low comedian for the amusement of the crowd trying to spoil. Personally er to condescend to become a mere popular entertainer. Besides, your legitimate tricks, your speed, your knowledge of the game will always be sufficient to call forth the admiration of the spectators. You will always find it "pay" to do just that which is necessary to beat an opponent, and I trust you will never try to tickle the ears of the groundlings by beating your opponent twice when once is enough. As you know, it is bad form to "show up" a brother professional. You will remember that the day may come when you may not have the necessary pace that enables you to produce your bag of tricks. Therefore, as you are strong be you also merciful.

You have been a great find for the Tottenham Hotspur club, and I trust your connection with it will be long and honourable. To me you represent a fine type of footballer—socially and artistically—and I should like to see many more like you playing the game. I have admired you on the cricket field, where your keenness and speed make you one of the best outfields of the day. I trust that you will have a long and prosperous career, and that while you continue to delight the crowd you will never forget the dignity of the game and of your profession.

Yours sincerely.

Registering the bringing over of a New Zealand forward named Boyne for Aston Villa, the London Express says:

"As true-born Britishers who are world-renowned for hospitality to all and sundry, and whose motto is 'Let 'em all come' we ought to feel just a slight tinge of satisfaction that the latest invader is of the "bulldog breed.' In expressing this satisfaction, however, I hope none will accuse me of jealousy towards the French goalkeeper signed on by the 'Spurs, the Italian Frezia (who wears Reading's colours), the Italian with the Dutch name of Can den Synden (who disports the colours of Clapton Orient), the Dane Middleboe, who, as mentioned before, delights the crowd at Stamford Bridge, or the German Schmidt who plays for Ilford."

President Tom Watson of the D. F. A. says: "I see that a professional team, chaperoned by W. Hilton, is scheduled to visit St. Louis during Christmas week. As this St. Louis club is not affiliated to the United States F. A. the fact of the Toronto pros. visiting them may affect the latter's application for affiliation to the D.F.A., and on that account I am sorry. The professionals not yet being affiliated are quite within their rights, but with the affiliation scheme pending it does not seem to me judicious.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PETERBOROUGH BALL CLUB

The Old Board of Directors Were Re-elected at Last Night's Meeting.

PROSPECTS FOR 1914

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club was held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers, with President W. H. Denham in the chair and a good attendance of shareholders. The financial statement for the past season was presented and was considered satisfactory, especially in view of the poor attendance at several of the Canadian League towns.

The election of directors was carried through, the majority of the old board being returned as follows: W. H. Denham, E. G. Patterson, W. H. Bradburn, E. Desautel, Jas. J. Lynch, C. G. Graham and Fred Trebilcock. Mr. Graham was eelcted to succeed Dr. Wightman, who asked that his name be omitted from the board owing to his connection with Riverside Park.

The prospects for next season were discussed and a frank view of the situation is that it is up to the citizens generally whether or not Peterborough is to have a Canadian League team. The burden of financing the team during the past two seasons has fallen largely on the shoulders of a comparatively few citizens, who have done their share, in fact far more than their share, in keeping the enterprise going. Many have not assisted in any way, noticeably a large number of the merchants to whom the entrance of Peterborough into organized baseball has undoubtedly been a direct benefit. It is felt that those who have not helped in the past should come forward. The ball team has been one of the best advertisements the City has had, the sport has been carried on in a clean manner. The close of the season of 1914 should see baseball a prominent fixture in Peterborough. It is simply up to the citizens, and the Examiner feels confident that there will be no difficulty in the spring in raising enough money to put the game on a good footing.

THE "EXAMINER" HOCKEY TEAM

Held a Meeting Last Night—Officers Elected

A meeting of the "Examiner" Hockey team was held last evening at the offices of The Examiner Company, Ltd. Mr. F. Russell, the manager of last year's team, presiding. The first business before the meeting was the election of manager for the team for the ensuing season. It was unanimously agreed that Mr. Frank Russell be asked to again act as manager, the proposal being carried by acclamation. The next proceeding was the election of captain of the team. Mr. Dan Griffitha, who so ably fulfilled the office of captain last year, resigned the position from private reasons. The chairman expressed a warm eulogy on Mr. Griffiths' past services, urging him, if possible, to reconsider his decision, which, however, proved to be final. A hearty vote of thanks for past services was accorded to the out-going captain, who in his reply stated that it was with much regret he was obliged to relinquish the captaincy, but he assured the members of the team of his good services as coach, and player at times, and of his warm interest in the welfare of the team.

Two names were then proposed to fill that vacancy, and on being ballotted for, Mr. A. Heard was successful, and he is now the captain of the "Examiner" team.

The colour of the uniform was then decided on, and various other matters of routine business discussed. The manager was also requested to fill the position of secretary-treasurer to the team, and the meeting was then dissolved.

Mercantile

Members of the officers and executive of this league are reminded of an important meeting to be held to-night at the offices of "The Review," Hunter street, at 8 o'clock sharp. A delegate from each of the six teams—viz., Bankers, C. & P., Examiner, Plumbers, Test and Tool Depts.—comprising the league is requested to be present.

NEW CLUBS WILL HELP THE LEAGUE

Ottawa Free Press: The certainty of the makeup of the Canadian League in 1914 still has the fans guessing. Erie has still one week from next Tuesday to find a berth in a circuit and, if there is nothing doing, the New Year will dawn in the Pennsylvania City with the Canadian League in possession of he territory. The Guelph franchise will be the one placed there, and it is more than likely if Erie comes in, Niagara Falls, N. Y., will absorb the Berlin franchise. Both Berlin and Guelph are too small for the league, never could and never can be anything other than a drag on the other cities and keep the organization from expanding.

Two big features to be entertained in taking in the American cities in the fact they will give the league a class B rating and Sunday baseball can be played in both centres. Add to this the fact they will draw more people in one day than Berlin or Guelph combined would in a month with a certain international team as all enjoy in Canada, it looks a cinch the league will not hesitate to branch out if the opportunity presents itself.

HOCKEY

All junior O.H.A. candidates are requested to meet at Brock Street rink on Christmas morning at 9 o'clock with their uniforms and outfit ready to go to the canal for practice.

Rugby Club Annual Dance

Splendid Affair Held in the Conservatory of Music Hall Last Night

The Rugby Club of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute held their fifth annual dance in the Conservatory of Music Hall last night. The large ball room was liberally decorated with flags and pennants.

Over one hundred couples were present at the dance, which was the most brilliant affair ever given by the P.C.I. Rugby Club, and certainly one of the most successful this season.

Music was supplied by the Opera House orchestra, which rendered the choicest two-steps and waltzes in a most acceptable manner. At midnight dainty refreshments were served by Mr. T. H. Hooper.

The committee of students who were in charge of the dance were: V. Eastwood, R. Stratton, F. L. Cann, F. Hooper and H. Rogers.

The patronesses were: Mrs. W. H. Bradburn, Mrs. B. Hall, Mrs. E. C. S. Huycke, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Mrs. Dickson Hall, Mrs. R. Gliddon, Mrs. V. Eastwood, Mrs. A. H. Stratton, Mrs. J. F. Harvey.

Harry Brant Is In Town

Popular Little Shortstop is Guest of Friends for the Holidays

Harry Brant, the peppery little shortstop of last year's Peterborough ball team, arrived in town last night from his home in Cleveland, O., and will spend the Christmas vacation the guest of local friends. Brant, who was drafted by the Chattanooga Club of the Southern Association, has already signed his 1914 contract and Peterborough fans will be glad to learn that his contract calls for a substantial increase over what he received here. It is likely that he will be tried out at third base, succeeding Kid Elbergeld, the former manager of the team. Harry McCormick, the new manager, of the Chattanooga Club, a few days ago sent Brant a neat Christmas box in the shape of a safety razor.

MEETING OF CURLING CLUB LAST NIGHT

The Curling Club held a meeting in the Charlotte Street Rink last night, and elected a dozen new members to the club. This was the purpose of the meeting.

After the general meeting the skips put their heads together to revise the rules for the inter-rinks competition this season. Their progress was so satisfactory that when the ice is ready for the stones, the annual games can commence at once under the revised regulations.

Music & Drama

ERNIE MARKS COMPANY.

The Ernie Marks Company opened a week's run at the Grand very auspiciously last evening with a capable presentation of the drama, "A Canadian Gentleman." The company is stronger than ever before, both in specialties and in histrionic ability, and their performance last night was in every way satisfactory. Miss Kitty Marks added to the laurels she has already won here by her finished work. The vaudeville between acts was unusually good, and the whole programme delightful. The company will be here for the entire week, with matinees on Thursday and Saturday.

The good old days when a man drove a horse with one arm and supported a dainty bit of calico with he other are only memories of middle-aged couples. The present generation imagines it is enjoying itself.

THE GREATEST HAPPINESS

Comes To Ourselves When We Make Others Happy With Our Gifts

THE value of a gift consists, not in costliness or variety, but in the feelings of affection, or regard, or sympathy, or honour, which it is supposed to carry. It is time that both giver and receiver realised this. Too often the spirit of Christmas is utterly sacrificed in the contest between the desire to spend and the duty of refraining. For a gift to be worth the giving, no sacrifice of duty must be entered into it. A tiny flower given in love and simplicity is better than a rare and costly gem procured with worry and doubt. When you give something to wear, you exhibit good sense, good taste and good judgement.

FATHER CHRISTMAS

Here comes old Father Christmas,
With sound of fife and drums;
With mistletoe about his brows,
So merrily he comes!
His arms are full of all good cheer,
His face with laughter glows,
He shines like any household fire
Amid the cruel snows.
He is the old folks' Christmas;
He warms their hearts like wine;
He thaws their winter into spring,
And makes their faces shine.
Hurrah for Father Christmas!
Ring all the merry bells!
And bring the grandsires all around
To hear the tale he tells.

RAILWAY MEN HOME FOR XMAS

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—In an effort to let everybody be at home for Christmas that can be spared the Grand Trunk have issued orders to cancel all way freight trains and cut off as many yard crews as can be spared.

Some men will eat a good meal at home, of their wives' cooking, and arise from the table without a word of praise for the patient little woman who did the cooking, yet when the same fellows get a burnt meal they cold slop called coffee at a restaurant they pay the bill cheerfully and tip the waiter (female) handsomely, and smiling at the time.

WOMAN JUMPS INTO THE RIVER

Special Wire to The Examiner:

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 23.—Standing like a piece of statuary in the ice the body of a well-dressed woman was found frozen stiff in the Mississippi River to-day. She had evidently jumped off the high bridge.

LIVED A DOUBLE LIFE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

MONTICELLO, N.Y., Dec. 23.—That she was educated in Oswego and Buffalo, N.Y., and has several relatives in Eastern and Western Ontario, is the statement this morning of the mysterious and good-looking woman whose fifteen years of partnership in the double life of Attorney Couch of this town was revealed by an inquest into his death yesterday. For the last three years she lived secretly with him in a private room off his office. Even his wife and daughter, who visited him nearly every day, had no suspicion of his duplicity. The mysterious woman candidly admits that the name she gives is false. She calls herself Miss Brance and first met Couch as a book agent.

HONOURS FOR ADAM BECK

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Dec. 23. — Rumour says that the name of the Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Board, will be included in the list of Birthday Honours at the New Year, after which the "Minister of Power" will be addressed as Sir Adam Beck.

A STRIKING STORY.

F. Irving Fletcher, at a Sphinx Club dinner in New York, told a striking advertising story:

"I once made a bet with a dry-goods dealer," said Mr. Fletcher, "that he couldn't spend in a year on advertising all he made in that year. The man took me up, and called in.

"But he lost his bet. Though his advertising bills grew bigger he lost. For the more he advertised, the more he sold, and in the end, after starting eight branch stores he gave in and paid me the money."

Mr. Fletcher paused, then added reflectively:

Any dealer, drygoods or otherwise who doesn't believe this story need only try it himself to be convinced.

"Shorty McCabe" says that the reason they have music at the swell dinners all over the land is to make a noise so that the other guests cannot hear the newly-rich eat their soup.

BILL IS NOW LAW

U. S. Currency Measure is Signed by President Wilson

MANY BANKERS ARE JOINING

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—In the presence of his Cabinet members, a number of Senators and representatives and others, President Wilson at 6.01 p.m. yesterday signed the Glass-Owen currency bill.

With a few strokes of the pen the President converted into law the measure to be known as the Federal Reserve Act, recognizing the nation's banking and currency system and furnishing in the words of the President "the machinery for free and elastic and uncontrolled credits, put at the disposal of the merchants and manufacturers of this country for the first time in fifty years."

An enthusiastic applause ran through the ceremony, not only as the President affixed his signature, but as he delivered an extemporaneous speech characterizing the desire of the administration to take common counsel with the business men of the country and the latter's efforts to meet the Government's advances as the "constitution of peace."

Banks Fall Into Line.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24. — Banks in several of the large cities yesterday telegraphed Secretary McAdoo their applications for memberships in the new Federal banking system. Two national banks in New York, the first from that city applied, and St. Louis, Cleveland, Denver, Seattle and Philadelphia, all came along with one or more applications. Three trust companies, one in St. Louis, one in Baltimore and one in Washington applied. The clearing-house associations of Kansas City, Mo., and Atlanta, Ga., expressed approval of the law and their intention to recommend to member banks the desirability of entering the new system.

Montenegro's Queen Ill.

ZURICH, Switzerland, Dec. 24.—Queen Milena of Montenegro, mother of Queen Helena of Italy, is understood to be dangerously ill in the capital of the little Balkan kingdom. Dr. A. Genhart of this city received an urgent summons yesterday to proceed to Cettinje to attend her Majesty. The Queen has been indisposed for several weeks, but Tuesday the symptoms became suddenly very serious.

Cruiser Off to Tampico.

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 24. — The French cruiser Conde sailed from here yesterday afternoon for Tampico, the commander having received an urgent call from that port.

Sir Christopher Cradock, in command of the British warships, and five of his officers, will leave to-day for Jalapa, on a pleasure trip.

WARNING ISSUED.

Headache Powders May Do Great Harm, Says Bulletin.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—A. McGill, chief analyst of the Inland Revenue Department, issued a warning yesterday against the indiscriminate use of headache powders.

"The drugs," he says, "to which the efficiency of most of these headache powders is due, are powerful heart depressants and are capable under certain conditions of producing fatal results, while under most conditions they must do harm. A little reflection should convince the consumer of these powders that he is taking great liberties with his health and life."

The bulletin points out that headaches are not in themselves a disease that can be treated by a "cure," but are symptoms of something wrong in the system.

Nearly all of the 171 samples analyzed contained acetanilide, or phenacetin, and are so marked under the regulations in regard to the patent medicine act. The amount of acetanilide present in most of the powders exceeds three grains, which is the limit of dosage prescribed by the British pharmacopoeia.

"No doubt," says the bulletin, "serious results would more frequently follow their use were it not that they contain other drugs, usually caffeine, which act as stimulants of the heart.

JULES CLARETIE DEAD.

He Was a Celebrated French Author and Dramatic Director.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—Jules Claretie, one of the French "immortales" and administrator of the Comedie Francaise, died yesterday, aged 73.

Jules Arsene Arnaud Claretie was born on Dec. 3, 1840, at Limoges, but lived the greater part of his life in Paris, where he was educated. He was a prolific writer of books and dramatic criticisms, and acted as war correspondent in 1866 with the Italian army fighting against the Austrian troops. He again took part in warlike operations during the Franco-German war of 1870-71, when for a period he was in command of a battalion of volunteers of the National Guard, and was present at nearly all the engagements in the vicinity of Paris. As an officer of the staff, he negotiated with the Germans the truce for the purpose of burying the dead after the battle of Buzenval. He afterwards stood unsuccessfully as a candidate for Parliament, and then gave up politics to resume his literary pursuits.

Five Thousand Dollar Fire.

ALVINSTON, Ont., Dec. 24.—About four o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the warehouse of Percy Wills, general merchant, and had made such headway that before it was noticed the main building, over which was the residence, was all ablaze. The family had to escape through a window in their night clothes.

The loss will probably be over $5,000, partly covered by insurance.

A Christmas Tree Eighty-Five Feet High.—This tree was erected by the City of New York in Madison Square. Each night between Xmas. and New Years hundreds of the best singers in the City, also many full Choirs gather around this tree and sing Xmas carols.

Stefansson's Ships Are Safe Says Official Report

EXPLORERS ARE ALL WELL

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—Dr. R. M. Anderson, chief anthropologist wit the Stefansson expedition, reported to Mr. Geo. J. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of Naval Affairs, yesterday that all the scientists and members of the crews of the Alaska and Mary Sachs, two of the explorer's vessels, are safe and well in winter quarters at Collinson Point, fifty miles from Flaxman Island, in the Arctic Circle. The report arrived by mail yesterday and states, contrary to recent despatches from Seattle, that neither of the two vessels is damaged to any extent. The Mary Sachs was, however, caught in the ice packs last September, but can be easily repaired.

Dr. Anderson reports last having seen the Karluk in an ice pack near Point Barrow on August 19. The mail received yesterday was despatched from Collinson Point on Oct. 13 by runner to Circle City, Alaska, and thence it was sent south by steamer.

Dr. Anderson, who was formerly chief anthropologist of the American Museum of Natural History, states that the charts prepared by E. D. K. Leffingwell, the American explorer, were of inestimable value. The Mary Sachs, with Kenneth Chapman, a geologist, in charge, and the Alaska, reached Collinson Point on Sept. 27, and decided to winter there.

KILLED IN PHILIPPINES.

C. B. Robinson, Canadian Botanist, Murdered by Natives.

MANILA, Dec. 24.—C. B. Robinson, a botanist in the Bureau of Science, Department of the Interior of the Philippine Islands, has been killed by natives of Amboyna Island, Malay Archipelago. He had undertaken an expedition for the study of flora of the island.

Charles Budd Robinson was the only son of C. B. Robinson, manager of the Western Union Telegraph office at Pictou, Nova Scotia, and who, having entered the telegraph service in 1856, was probably among the oldest working telegraphers in Canada.

C. B. Robinson, jr., graduated in arts at Dalhousie in the close of '92 and taught the science departments for several years in the academies at Kentville and Pictou. His bent as a naturalist was strong, and after having familiarized himself with the botany of Eastern Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, and the Lower St. Lawrence, he spent years at Cambridge University.

Schmidt a Paranoiac.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Alienists called by the defence testified yesterday at the trial of Hans Schmidt for the murder of Anna Aumuller that the prisoner is a paranoiac. Examination of alienists will be continued when the trial is resumed to-day.

Dr. Wm. A. White, of the U. S. Hospital for the Insane, Washington, D.C., said he was convinced the defendant's insanity was of the paranoiac type. Schmidt, he believed, had a perverted knowledge of the nature of his act, but looked upon it as a glorious sacrifice, which he had been commanded to make.

Dredge Lecoms Sinks.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 24.—Lifting an old anchor which tore a hole beneath its waterline, the dredge Lecoms of Scotland, belonging to the Norton Griffiths Co., sank in Courtenay Bay yesterday morning in six minutes. Captain Crowfoot and his crew of twenty-four men managed to get away safely in a boat.

LAWS IN CONFLICT.

Federal Bankruptcy Law Needed Says Hon. Mr. Doherty.

MONTREAL, Dec. 24.—A Federal bankruptcy act would be a desirable innovation in Canada, in the opinion expressed by Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, in a communication to the Builders' Exchange of Montreal, received yesterday. This opinion comes as a result of a resolution adopted by the exchange in November, which pointed out the hardships worked on the manufacturer or wholesaler who distributed goods over the whole Dominion. The present system is for each province to do its own legislation with regard to bankruptcy, and as a result the business man having connections throughout Canada is compelled to be acquainted with the provisions of many different acts.

Hon. Mr. Doherty promised to lay the matter before his colleagues, and added: "Personally, I am of the opinion that such a law, provided its provisions be carefully considered, and adapted to the needs of the country, would be highly desirable."

Two Eggs For a Ticket.

HARRISON, Ark., Dec. 24.—Eggs are becoming so scarce in the mountainous section of Arkansas that they are being used as a medium of exchange. Not only are they acceptable for payment at grocery stores and mercantile establishments, but they are taken at motion picture theatres. One egg admits a minor, and two eggs one adult. The proprietors of the theatres find a ready cash market for the eggs.

Berlin Official Undoes Pacification of Alsatians

NEWSPAPERS ARE INDIGNANT

BERLIN, Dec. 24.—Popular feeling over the Zabern affair which had pretty much died out, has been revived by what even the semi-official Cologne Gazette calls the "utterly incomprehensible" action of the Berlin Police President, Dr. Von Jagow, in publicly criticising the "illegality" of Lieut. Von Forstner's conviction and proclaiming the sanctity of "Sabre rule."

Dr. Von Jagow's letter to the Kreuz Zeitung signed in his private capacity of "Doctor of Jurisprudence" has provoked an outburst of indignation in Liberal, Radical and Democratic quarters almost as violent as that which was caused by the Zabern events themselves. Despatches report that Alsace-Lorraine feels outraged at Von Jagow's description of the provinces as "almost an enemy's country."

There is a general demand that he be sharply and promptly rebuked either by the Imperial Chancellor or his immediate superior, the Prussian Home Secretary, for "gross insubordination."

The general opinion voiced by Von Jagow's critics, whose name is already legion, is summarized by the Tageblatt, which says, "Von Jagow's action is simply incredible. He intervenes in Imperial affairs with nothing short of brutal ruthlessness. The Zabern episode was bad enough. Not only the Reichstag but also the Kaiser, and to a certain extent the Chancellor, did his utmost to wipe out the painful impression caused by sabre dictatorship in Alsace. Now the president of the Berlin police, an official charged with the preservation of law and order in the capital of the Empire, comes along and opens all wounds afresh, and at one stroke nullifies the attempts of conciliation which have been going on for a month. Von Jagow has thrown down the Imperial gauntlet to Alsace-Lorraine and an overwhelming majority of the Reichstag."

The Cologne Gazette says: "Von Jagow has violated the principle that criticism of legal proceedings should be withheld while sub judice. He has not only cast suspicion on the righteousness of the verdict by the court-martial, but has also done something designed to re-inflame the passions of Alsace-Lorraine. We must wait in the assurance that his superiors will express themselves in regard to his unnecessary action and order him to confine his words and deeds to his own jurisdiction, which goes far enough."

The president's friends assert that he only spoke in his "private capacity," thereby exercising the right of any citizen.

Inquiries in army circles indicate that the impression is general that when Lieut. Von Forstner's sentence is reviewed by the Military Court of Appeals and the Supreme Military Court of the Empire, his conviction is likely to be revoked.

MUST STOP SELLING GAS.

Brantford Company Gets Summary Order From Ottawa.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 24. — The Brantford Gas Co. has been ordered by the Dominion Government to discontinue the distribution of gas from the Tilbury fields for domestic purposes. This announcement was made yesterday afternoon when the police court proceedings of the local Board of Health against the company on a charge of maintaining a nuisance detrimental to the public health were continued.

When the court opened George Lynch-Staunton, K.C., of Hamilton, acting for the company, intimated that the company had been ordered by the Government to discontinue the distribution. For that reason, he said, it would be useless to offer any evidence in defence, as the company had no alternative but to shut off the supply.

Adopted Child Barred Out.

SARNIA, Dec. 24.—The adopted child of Mrs. Fay Sampler, of Algonac, Mich., is being held at Sarnia, the United States immigration officials having for the third time refused to allow the child to be taken into the States. The matter has been appealed by Mrs. Sampler's attorney to the department at Washington.

The child is the offspring of a girl Mrs. Sampler befriended, and is illegitimate. Sometime ago when Mrs. Sampler paid a visit to Sarnia she brought the little foundling with her. When she returned to Port Huron the immigration inspectors there refused to allow her to take in the child on the grounds of its illegitimacy.

Sir Lionel Phillips Better.

JOHANNESBURG, Union of South Africa, Dec. 24.—Sir Lionel Phillips, the South African mining magnate, passed a good night after Tuesday's operation, when a bullet was extracted from his right lung which had been pierced when he was shot on Dec. 11 by a Dutch storekeeper. His condition was said by the surgeon to be favorable.

U. S. Congressman Would Defer Canal Toll Discrimination.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—A joint resolution to conditionally suspend the operation of the provision of the Panama Canal Act granting free passage to American coastwise vessels, was introduced yesterday by Chairman Adamson of Georgia, on the House commerce committee.

The suspension would be subject to the following conditions: "At the time after the Panama Canal shall have been opened and successfully operated for two years, if, in the judgment of the President, the revenues derived from tolls of vessels other than those engaged in the coastwise trade of the United States, shall be sufficient to defray the cost of maintaining and operating the canal, and the expense of Government and sanitation of the canal zone, and all diplomatic questions touching the treating of vessels as to conditions or charges of traffic at the canal shall have been adjusted, then the President is authorized to issue an executive order declaring such suspended exemption of full force and effect."

The free toll provision now is under diplomatic protest.

Representative Adamson introduced the resolution on his own responsibility, and it will not go before Congress as an administration measure. It was said in high official circles, however, that the silence of the administration did not mean that the proposed step was disapproved.

Any declaration of policy on the subject of canal tolls has been avoided since President Wilson assumed office last March.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY
"My boy Frank seemed weak-chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Niagara, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

TUMOR IN THE STOMACH

Completely Removed When She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURY, ONT., April 4th, 1913.

"Some years ago, I was sick in bed, and thought I was going to die. I had a growth in my stomach, which the doctors said was a Tumor and they said that the only thing to do was to go to the hospital and have the tumor cut out. I dreaded an operation although both doctors said it was the only cure. I said I would die before being operated on.

At this time, my mother in Alvinston sent me some "Fruit-a-tives" and induced me to try them as she had heard of another woman who had been cured of a similar growth in the stomach by taking "Fruit-a-tives".

To please my mother, I began to take "Fruit-a-tives" with the happy result that they cured me. I have not been to see a doctor since and my health is first class.

I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" every time I get a chance and I will be glad to have you publish this letter as some other woman may now be a sufferer from the same trouble and "Fruit-a-tives" will cure her" MRS. A. McDONALD.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price By Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"Miss Oliver is impatient," he admitted. "Her fever is better, but she is in an excited condition of mind which makes her a little unreasonable. To be plain, she is not quite herself, and while we still hope something from her testimony, we are leaving her very much to her own devices, and do not cross her in anything. You will therefore listen to what she says, and, if possible, aid her in anything she may undertake, unless it points directly towards self-destruction. My opinion is that she will surprise you. But you are becoming accustomed to surprises, are you not?"

"Thanks to you, I am."

"Very well, then, I have but one more suggestion to make. You are working for the police now, madam, and nothing that you see or learn in connection with this girl is to be kept back from us. Am I understood?"

"Perfectly; but it is only proper for me to retort that I am not entirely pleased with the part you assign me. Could you not have left thus much to my good sense, and not put it into so many words?"

"Ah, madam, the case at present is too serious for risks of that kind. Mr. Van Burnam's reputation, to say nothing of his life, depends upon our knowledge of this girl's secret; surely you can stretch a point in a matter of so much moment?"

"I have already stretched several, and I can stretch one more, but I hope the girl won't look at me too often with those miserable appealing eyes of hers; they make me feel like a traitor."

"You will not be troubled by any appeal in them. The appeal has vanished; something harder and even more difficult to meet is to be found in them now: wrath, purpose, and a desire for vengeance. She is not the same woman, I assure you."

"Well," I sighed, "I am sorry; there is something about the girl that lays hold of me, and I hate to see such a change in her. Did she ask for me by name?"

"I believe so."

"I cannot understand her wanting me, but I will go; and I won't leave her either till she shows me she is tired of me. I am as anxious to see the end of this matter as you are." Then, with some vague idea that I had earned a right to some show of confidence on his part, I added insinuatingly: "I supposed you would feel the case settled when she almost fainted at the sight of the younger Mr. Van Burnam."

The old ambiguous smile I remembered so well came to modify his brusque rejoinder.

"If she had been a woman like you, I should; but she is a deep one, Miss Butterworth; too deep for the success of a little ruse like mine. Are you ready?"

I was not, but it did not take me long to be so, and before an hour had elapsed I was seated in Mrs. Desberger's parlour in Ninth Street. Miss Oliver was in, and ere long made her appearance. She was dressed in street costume.

I was prepared for a change in her, and yet the shock I felt when I first saw her face must have been apparent, for she immediately remarked:

"You find me quite well, Miss Butterworth. For this I am partially indebted to you. You were very good to nurse me so carefully. Will you be still kinder, and help me in a new matter which I fele quite incompetent to undertake alone?"

Her face was flushed, her manner nervous, but her eyes had an extraordinary look in them which affected me most painfully, notwithstanding the additional effect it gave to her beauty.

"Certainly," said I. "What can I do for you?"

"I wish to buy me a dress," was her unexpected reply. "A handsome dress. Do you object to showing me the best shops? I am a stranger in New York."

More astonished than I can express, but carefully concealing it in remembrance of the caution received from Mr. Gryce, I replied that I would be only too happy to accompany her on such an errand. Upon which she lost her nervousness and prepared at once to go out with me.

"I would have asked Mrs. Desberger," she observed while fitting on her gloves, "but her taste"—here she cast a significant look about the room—"is not quiet enough for me."

"I should think not!" I cried.

"I shall be a trouble to you," the girl went on, with a gleam in her eye that spoke of ther estless spirit within. "I have many things to buy, and they must all be rich and handsome."

"If you have money enough, there will be no trouble about that."

"Oh, I have money." She spoke like a millionaire's daughter. "Shall we go to Arnold's?"

As I always traded at Arnold's, I readily acquiesced, and we left the house. But not before she had tied a very thick veil over her face.

"If we meet any one, do not introduce me," she begged. "I cannot talk to people."

"You may rest easy," I assured her.

At the corner she stopped. "Is there any way of getting a carriage?" she asked.

"Do you want one?"

"Yes."

I signalled a hack.

"Now for the dress!" she cried.

We rode at once to Arnold's.

"What kind of a dress do you want?" I inquired as we entered the store.

"An evening one! a white satin, I think."

I could not help the exclamation which escaped me; but I covered it up as quickly as possible hya hurried remark in favour of white, and we proceeded at once to the silk counter.

"I will trust it all to you," she whispered in an od, choked tone as the clerk approached us. "Get what you would for your daughter—no, no! for Mr. Van Burnam's daughter, if he has one, and do not spare expense. I have fiveh undred dollars in my pocket."

Mr. Van Burnam's daughter! Well, well! A tragedy of some kind was portending! But I bought the dress.

"Now," said she, "lace, and whatever else I need to make it up suitably. And I must have slippers and gloves. You know what a young girl requires to make her look like a lady. I want to look so well that the most critical eye will detect no fault in my appearance. It can be done, can it not, Miss Butterworth? My face and figure will not spoil the effect, will they?"

"No," said I; "you have a good face and a beautiful figure. You ought to look well. Are you going to a ball, my dear?"

"I am going to a ball," she answered; but her tone was so strange the people passing us turned to look at her.

"Let us have everything send to the carriage, said she, and went with me from counter to counter with her ready purse in her hand, but not once lifting her veil to look at what was offered her, saying over and over as I sought to consult her in regard to some articles: "Buy the richest; I leave it all to you."

Had Mr. Gryce not told me she must be humored, I could never have gone through this ordeal. To see a girl thus expend her hoarded savings on such frivolities were absolutely painful to me, and more than once I was tempted to decline any further participation in such extravagance. But a thought of my obligations to Mr. Gryce restrained me, and I went on spending the poor girl's dollars with more pain to myself than if I had taken them out of my own pocket.

Having purchased all the articles we thought necessary, we were turning towards the door when Miss Oliver whispered:

"Wait for me in the carriage for just a few minutes. I have one more thing to buy, and I must do it alone."

"But——' I began.

"I will do it, and I will not be followed," she insisted, in a shrill tone that made me jump.

And seeing no other way of preventing a scene, I let her leave me, though it cost me an anxious fifteen minutes.

When she rejoined me, as she did at the expiration of that time, I eyed the bundle she held with decided curiosity. But I could make no guess at its contents.

"Now," she cried, as she reseated herself and closed the carriage door, "where shall I find a dressmaker able and willing to make up this satin in five days?"

I could not tell her. But after some little search we succeeded in finding a woman who engaged to make an elegant costume in the time given her, and we drove back to Ninth Street with a lasting memory in my mind of the cold and rigid form of Miss Oliver standing up in Madame's triangular parlour, submitting to the mechanical touches of the modiste with an outward composure, but with a brooding horror in her eyes that bespoke an inward torment.

XXXIX.

The Watchful Eye.

As I parted with Miss Oliver on Mrs. Desberger's stoop and did not visit her again in that house, I will introduce the report of a person better situated than myself to observe the girl during the next few days. That the person thus alluded to was a woman in the service of the police is evident, and as such may not meet with your approval, but her words are of interest, as witness:

"Friday p.m.

"Party went out to-day in company with an elderly female of respectable appearance. Said elderly female wears puffs, and moves with great precision. I say this in case her identification should prove necessary.

"I had been warned that Miss O. would probably go out, and as the man set to watch me front door was on duty, I occupied myself during her absence in making a neat little hole in the partitions between our two rooms, so that I should not be obliged to offend my next-door neighbour by too frequent visits to her apartment. This done, I awaited her return, which was delayed till it was almost dark. When she did come in, her arms were full of bundles. These she thrust into a bureau-drawer, with the exception of one, which she laid with great care under her pillow. I wondered what this one could be, but could get no inkling from its size or shape. Her manner when she took off her hat was fiercer than before, and a strange smile, which I had not previously observed on her lips, added force to her expression. But it paled after supper-time, and she had a restless night. I could hear her walk the floor long after I thought it prudent on my part to retire, and at intervals through the night I was disturbed by her moaning, which was not that of a sick person but of one very much afflicted in mind.

"Saturday.

"Party quiet. Sits most of the time with hands clasped on her knee before the fire. Given to quick starts as if suddenly awakened from an absorbing train of thought. A pitiful object, especially when seized by terror as she is at odd times. No walks, no visitors to-day. Once I heard her speak some words in a strange language, and onces he drew herself up before the mirror in an attitude of so much dignity I was surprised at the fine appearance she made. The fire of her eyes at this moment was remarkable. I should not be surprised at any move she might make.

"Yes, ma'am; they are beauties, ma'am," replied the dealer.

"How do you sell them?"

The Question.

What is the question of the hour?
The man of wealth says "labor's power,
The brewer thinks "the price of hops,"
The broker answers, "State of crops."
The housewife says, with no misgiving,
"The increase in the cost of living;"
"The tango," declare moralists;
But "Mexico," diplomatists;
"The currency," the bankers sigh;
"'Tis Panama," the English cry;
"The tariff," politicians roar.
But Europe mutters, "Balkan war."
These are the answers, short or long,
But every single one is wrong.
This is the question of the day:
Has the slit skirt come in to stay?

Queer Tricks of Memory.

In later life Emerson's memory played him some strange tricks. James Cabot, his biographer, says that he met him one day in the streets of Boston apparently at a loss for something and asked him where he was going. "To dine," said Emerson, "with an old and very dear friend. I know where she lives, but I hope you won't ask me her name." Then he went on to describe her as "the mother of the wife of the young man—the tall man—who speaks so well," and so on until Cabot guessed to whom he was referring. This failing led to a pathetic scene at Longfellow's funeral. After gazing long at the face of his lifelong friend as he lay in his coffin Emerson said to a bystander, "That gentleman was a sweet, beautiful soul, but I have entirely forgotten his name."

An Old Ruse.

The influence of women in Louis XV.'s day was all powerful. The men, in consequence, feared them. It became the fashion for women to dash about Paris in cabriolets, driving often somewhat rashly, and increased accidents were put down to this cause. Gabriel de Sartines, minister of police, dared not forbid any women to drive in Paris, so he caused an edict to be issued prohibiting their doing so until they were forty years old. "After this declaration," notes Mrs. Bearne in "A Court Painter and His Circle," "there was not a cabriolet to be seen driven by a woman."

Did as She Asked Him.

A teacher in a tenement district hurried from the school to find the mother of a pupil who had been taken ill.

"Can you show me where Mrs. Angelo Scandale lives?" she inquired of a cherub transplanted from the sunny south to a dark, sunless alley.

"Yes, teach', I show you," and a willing, sticky hand dragged her on with such speed as to make her stumble over an Italian dame seated on the threshold. After the teacher's breathless flight toward the clouds the little hand stopped tugging.

"There where Mees Scandale live," indicated the horizontal arm and finger, "but she downstair sitting on the step," finished the smiling lips.—New York Globe.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Extra Select Christmas

The Christmas box has been placed as usual upon the library table.

Miss Olcott's voice was suave, well pitched, admirably controlled, as became the voice of the principal of a fashionable private school whose pupils were, as "the little teacher" put it, not only select, but also extra select—the finest flower of the most "toploftical" caste of the most snobbish town in the United States.

"The young ladies, I trust, as in past years, will make their Christmas offering one that will reflect credit upon themselves and the school," continued the smooth, impressive voice. "Miss Willoughby will take charge of the box and make a record of the contributions. I think I need not assure you that the money will be turned over to some worthy charitable organization."

Having said her say, the head of the school glided gracefully and majestically from the room, leaving "the little teacher" looking with something like dismay at the rows of girlish heads bent over the desks of the study room.

Shades of Charles Dickens and Tiny Tim, what an invocation of the Christmas spirit!

Into the ornate box reposing upon the handsomely covered library table the young ladies would drop sums calculated to look well on a subscription list and to prove beyond doubt that the givers were recruited from the extra-select families. The money would be turned over to a charity machine, and of the glow that comes from giiving the only gift worth giving—a part of one's self—not a girl would have even an inkling.

Apparently all this was a custom of the school, for the girls accepted it without interest or comment; but the soul of Katharine Willoughby rose in revolt and the light of battle sparkled in her eyes.

She had come to her work fresh from college, brimming over with ambition, ideals, enthusiasm. Oh, the truths she would instill into those youthful minds, the worth-while things to which she would give them the key, the influence she would have upon the characters given into her hands for the moulding! There are many teachers who feel that way in the beginning. There are a few who feel that way until the end, but those few, if their lines happen to fall into a very fashionable and exclusive private school such as Miss Olcott's, escape speedily, in order to save their enthusiasm alive.

Katharine Willoughby had found no difficulty in achieving popularity. Any teacher who is young and pretty and human finds that embarrassingly easy in a girl's school, and Miss Willoughby was not only young and pretty and human, but she was also dowered most lavishly with that indescribable thing called "charm." The girls adored her from the first, and "the little teacher" was a title that described the attitude of the girls more accurately than the size of the teacher; but when it came to using her influence as she wanted to use it, "the little teacher's" troubles began.

They were so self-satisfied, those dear creatures, so sure of their own standards, so profoundly uninterested in the part of the world outside their own neatly fenced, flower-adorned residential park.

Here and there in the crowd "the little teacher" had found girls wholesomely unspoiled, despite their money and social position; alert, quick of sympathy, ready to follow the gleam; but these were the exceptions; and, having tilted valiantly but futilely against the inertia of the mass, Katharine Willoughby had found herself, for the first time in her buoyantly optimistic career, struggling with discouragement.

She admitted all this to herself as she watched her employer leave the study room, under full sail, and turned to the girls—admitted her defeat, and, in the same breath, shouted defiance to the extra selectness that had spiked her guns.

An extra-select Christmas! That was too much. Something must be done.

And the next day, after hypnotizing the head of the school into an uncomprehending but resigned sanction, she did it.

School was over for the day and the girls were waiting for "the little teacher" to dismiss them: but she did not ring the bell on her table, and her brown eyes looked into the faces before her with an odd expression in their depths, a disturbing something that was like a call to sleeping hearts, a something that pitied and yearned and urged.

Yet when she spoke she made no direct appeal.

"Christmas will be here in ten days, girls," she said quietly, "and I've been feeling rather sorry for you because giving is going to be so easy for you. It's pitiful, you know, not to be able to sacrifice something for love's sake on the birthday of the Christ who gave His life for love of us all; but I suppose very few of you ever gave a real Christmas gift or ever will. Even if one doesn't have to sacrifice in order to make it, a gift that holds loving thought and meets actual individual need is a real Christmas gift; but you aren't likely even to make that kind of a gift. That's why I've been having a heartache over you; and I want to tell you that I'm sorry for you, sorry for you because you don't know the joy of Christmas service. There's no Christmas cheer in dropping money into a box, or in giving what costs you nothing but money to people who do not need nor even want what you give."

There was surprise on all the girls' faces, a hint of resentment on some. Even "the little teacher" should not be allowed to pity the elect.

"There's a good deal that's pitiful round about Christmas time," the quiet voice went on. "I suppose it's here all the time, but maybe one's heart is softer and one notices the pitiful things more when all the world is trying to be gay.

"Now, I've been blue over you all week, because you wouldn't know the happiness of real giving, and last night I cried myself to sleep over some children who won't know either the real giving or the real getting, though some charitable organization may send a little food and fuel to the family, and that will make Christmas less dreadful for them."

"Maggie, the laundress here, told me about a Tracy family; and last night I went to see them. They live down on Borton Street. Probably you never heard of the street. The very poor live there. It's hideous, girls—dark and squalid and reeking with foul smells and swarming with miserable hungry-eyed folks.

"The Tracys have only one tenement room. It's clean, but a mother and four children live in it. The furniture has gone for food—all except the bed. The mother is lying on that. She's been ill for eight weeks, and she isn't going to get well. The father worked himself to death more than a year ago.

"Susie had taken care of her mother and of the other children during the eight weeks, since the mother stopped earning her six dollars a week. Susie is twelve—such a scraggly, hollow-eyed, blue-lipped, ugly little scrap of an old woman at 12, girls!

"The three other children are younger—Bobby's only a baby, a little two-year-old fellow with yellow curls. He'll have dimples if he weren't starving. There are ghosts of dimples in the thin little cheeks even now, and Susie has kept him clean. She's kept them all clean and patched, though they haven't much in the way of clothing left to patch.

"She's fed them, too—fed them enough to keep life in them at least, though I can't see how she's done it—but last night there was no food in the room, and no fire, and no bed covering except the blanket that was over the mother. Susie had the baby in her arms, trying to keep him warm and Rose and Mary, the twins—such pretty little blonde wisps of girls with pinched white faces and big solemn eyes, and mouths that curl up at the corners as if bound to smile in spite of fate—were snuggled up close to her.

"She was telling them a story to make them forget they were cold and hungry—a wonderful fairy story all out of her own head— The pluck of her, girls!

"The twins thought I was the Princess, right at first—and I wished I were, for the Princess in Susie's story had a wishing ring, and I never in my life wanted to make wishes so fast as I did right then.

"Of course, I got some food and coal and bedding for them, but I hadn't enough money to do much. I reported the case at once, but the charitable societies, though they're splendid, are slow, and the town is full of such poverty.

"And so, as I told you, I cried myself to sleep over Susie and Bobby and the twins.

"What sort of a Christmas do you think they'll have, girls?"

There was a quiver about her lips, a mist in her eyes, but her voice was as quiet as ever when she asked the question and left it floating in the air.

She had told her story.

Had they heard it?

The dismissal bell rang, the girls filed out of the room, and "the little teacher" leaned her head on her hand and prayed in her heart:

"Loving God, they are blind—but so young and so dear—and You can make the blind see."

Breakfast was just over at the school the next morning, when Mabel Cattrell—gay, pretty, frivolous, motherless Mabel Cattrell, made up of thistledown and moonshine, spoiled, lovable, vain, monumentally selfish—came bressing in at the front door, and seized the arm of "the little teacher," who happened to be passing through the hall.

"Father wants their address," she said breathlessly. "He's going to send a ton of coal and some potatoes to-day—and I'm perfectly crazy about the twins. I always did adore twins, only I don't know whether I like them best both pink or one pink and one blue. Anyway, I choose the twins. You'll remember, won't you, Miss Willoughby? I choose them first—and what do you think twins need most? I came early on purpose to find out. Father didn't know. He couldn't seem to think of a thing except coal and potatoes; but there's nothing a bit twinnish about coal and potatoes so far as I can see. Now, is there?"

"Well, coal will warm the twins and potatoes will feed them," said "the little teacher," with a twinkle in her eye.

"Oh, yes, I know that; but when they've got coal and potatoes what's the matter with their having pink frocks?"

"Not pink in Borton Street," protested Miss Willoughby.

"It'll do Borton Street heaps of good, and I know the twins'll love pink."

"But underclothes," suggested "the little teacher."

"Oh, yes, of course, lots of underclothes; but underclothes aren't Christmasy, and those twins of mine aren't just going to be made comfortable. They're going to have a Christmas. I want to get—"

The front door opened and Mabel's chosen chum interrupted the conversation in the hall.

"Why, Mabel Cattrell!" she gasped in surprise. "You here at half-past eight! I didn't suppose you were ever up so early as that. I came early because I had something important to talk about with Miss Willoughby. You see, Miss Willoughby, I went home and talked to mother, and I'm just dotty over those cunning, big-eyed twins and—"

"I've got the twins! Hooray!" exulted Mabel; but "the little teacher" softened the blow.

"They need so much," she said gently. "No one girl can do it all, but if you would plan for them together—"

"Miss Willoughby!" called a voice from the doorway, "I didn't sleep a wink. I'm mad about those darling hungry twins and—"

"Mercy! We'll have to be a syndicate," groaned the original claimant of the Tracy twins; "but it will be great fun to make out the lists and shop and everything together. Come on, girls. Let's get at it right away."

The trio hurried into the schoolroom and "the little teacher" followed more slowly, but was stopped before she reached the door by Gertrude Wendell—fat, phlegmatic, indolent, chocolate-eating Gertrude Wendell, who spoke in a shamefaced way and as though doing violence to all her traditions.

"Miss Willoughby, I've been thinking about that Tracy baby—Bobby, you know. He must be an awfully cute little trick, and I've got quite a lot of Christmas money; I was going to get a wrist watch. I always did like boy babies—I had a baby brother—but I haven't now—and they're so cunning when they have curly hair—and I just can't stand his dimples not showing. I want him to have a beautiful Christmas—drums and horns and a big woolly lamb and picture books and clothes—but I don't know whether I can get everything. I'm afraid mother won't exactly understand. She doesn't mind what I do with my own money, though, and I don't care much about a wrist watch. They're getting sort of common."

"The little teacher" leaned forward and kissed her.

"Now, that's Christmas giving," she said, with a lilt of joy in her voice.

And then the girls came pouring in. The school bell rang, the routine of the day began, but there was excitement in the air. Here and there a girl's face was eager, full of purpose. Heads were put together for hurried conversations as the classes filed from room to room, through the halls; and when luncheon hour came a swarm of girls descended upon "the little teacher" and clamoured for Tracy statistics, for ages and sizes and advice.

"We know all about the frills," said Mabel, "but what on earth are the necessities, Miss Willoughby?" A more eloquent commentary upon the lives of the extra select it would be hard to make.

It was Ruth Bisbee ,the homely, the haughty, the cold, the supercilious Ruth Bisbee, who took up the cudgels for Susie.

"You girls can have your Raphael's Cherubs and Heavenly Twins," she said in her usual positive way. "I'm going to look out for Susie. She's the best of the lot, if she is ugly, and I like pluck better than blonde curls. Ugly girls need special looking after. Somebody always sends the pretty ones candy and dolls."

Susie's stock soared at once; and, as girl after girl caught the infection and the epidemic of giving spread through the school, Miss Willoughby rose to the changed situation.

"The Tracys are only one family," she said. "I can find all the poor children for whom you can provide Christmas happiness, my dears."

It was a very joyous quest, that search for the children whom Kriss Kringle had well-nigh forgotten. There was a hurt in it, for it led "the little teacher" into dreary places and showed her heartbreaking sights, but always Hope walked with her, and wherever she went she left present help and promise of coming cheer.

And each time she went back to the school with a budget of stories, what an eager crowd of listeners she found, what a furor of discussion raged, how whole-heartedly each girl chose her Christmas children, and how lovingly she planned for their happiness!

Sometimes it was necessary to curb reckless generosity, or turn it into other channels. Occasionally rivalry waxed rampant and for the moment the true Christmas spirit waned, though gifts piled high; but on the whole the movement was a sane one.

"Of course it is more or less of a fad," Miss Willoughby acknowledged to the head of the school. "The fever will not last, but it will have established a good tradition in the school, and it's a wonderful thing for girls like ours to get into touch even for a little while with the need in the world. They will never quite forget. When they've once known the joy of real Christmas giving they can never again be satisfied with a makeshift Christmas. I'm sure of it. We're only throwing a pebble into the water, but I believe the ripples will go on widening; and who knows what shores they may wash in the end?"

Miss Olcott's keen eyes softened as they looked into the rapt face.

"Well, I'll admit that it's admirable," she said with something approaching warmth. And then, habit of mind reasserting itself, she added: "So long as the parents do not disapprove."

Few of the parents disapproved. Some of them regarded the thing as a game and smiled indulgently, but more caught the spirit of the moment and entered into it as heartily as their daughters. Cheques came to "the little teacher," boxes of clothes, toys, books, candy, orders upon butchers and grocers for turkeys and Christmas dinners. And as the Christmastide set more and more strongly joyward, "the little teacher's" face grew more and more radiant, her feet fairly danced along her way, her heart sang carols. For life was good, and hearts were kind—even extra-select hearts—and if a little love could leaven so large a lump what miracles could be impossible to the Infinite love of which Christmas Day was but a symbol?

The school closed for the holidays, but still the girls ran in and out of the house, busy, important, bundle-laden.

And when Christmas Eve came around Miss Olcott's neighbours were vastly entertained; for very early in the evening luxurious limousine cars began to roll up in front of the school and discharge fur-muffled, shining-faced girls who disappeared inside the house, to reappear a little later carrying innumerable packages and followed by servants carrying more. There was calling back and forth, and chattering and glad-hearted laughter, and now and then an irrepressible snatch of song at which even Miss Olcott, watching from her upstairs window, forgot to frown.

Two girls and piles of gayly decorated bundles were packed into each brightly lighted car, and at seven o'clock the festive procession whirled away down the street and headed toward the homes of the Christmas children.

There were several teachers in the crowd, and two policemen followed in an unlighted supplementary car, though the girls did not know that; but it was "the little teacher" who led each group of girls up the tenement stairs and helped them to play fairy godmother to their Christmas children as fairy godmother should be played.

Incidentally it may be mentioned that the Tracy twins had pink frocks calculated to give Borton Street a thrill.

"I did get them underclothes," explained Mabel Cattrell. "We all bought stacks of terribly practical things for them, but at the very last minute I simply couldn't give up putting the ducks into pink. So I asked Father, and he said, 'Sure thing!' He and I are coming down to-morrow to see the twins all dressed up, and he's going to have a talk with Mrs. Tracy, and I sort of think we're going to send the whole blessed family out to our country place and look after them. Father's a perfect angel when he doesn't forget to be. I guess that's the way with most of us, only some of us forget oftener than others."

It was almost Christmas morning when a very tired little teacher knelt down by her bed and quite forgot to pray, at first, so busy was she with happy memories and rose-lined hopes.

When she did say her prayers they were short.

"Thank you, Lord," she said, as she would say it to a dear friend. There were tears in her eyes, but she brushed them away and her own funny little smile crept to her lips as she added: "For an extra-select Christmas."

Revival of Historic Fairs at Berlin Christmas Time

"Alt Berlin" Reproduced with Architectural Fidelity, Plays, Bazaar and Target Competition in Capital and Shooting Party in Silesia for the Crown Prince.

TEA AND TANGO PARTIES ENTERTAIN AMERICANS

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
Berlin, December 20.

BERLIN is under the spell of the pre-Christmas season. The street fairs and markets, which were a unique feature of Berlin life until late in the last century, have been revived in an exhibition opened this week under the device of "Alt Berlin."

This historic quarter of the city, which has gradually disappeared before the encroachment of the modern metropolis, is here reproduced with absolute fidelity in architectural detail, and an interesting picture is given of the customs and costumes of the period.

In addition Christmas plays presenting in every possible variant the rich fairy lore of Germany claim the interest of the children, while the parents are asked to spend money at one of the many bazaars and Christmas sales by which some philanthropic project is to profit.

The most important of these is the annual Christmas bazaar held this week in the Hotel Esplanade for the benefit of the orphans of St. Catherine's Home under the patronage of Hereditary Princess Salm-Salm, in her own right Archduchess Christina of Austria, but the task of the organization is in the hands of the Countess of Fugger-Kirchberg, well known hostesses in court society presiding over the various booths.

Target Shooting Competition.

Throughout Wednesday afternoon there was a dense crowd gathered about the shooting gallery presided over by Frau von Below, who had as her most active aide-de-camp in the sale of tickets Señorita Aurora de Quesada and Miss Margaret Luce. A group of young officers from Colonel von Below's regiment, the Augusta Guards, gave instructions in target shooting. The competition was unusually keen, as the two prizes were of a unique character.

Through the courtesy of the Hamburg-American line a free transport to Southampton and return was placed at the disposal of Frau von Below. The North German Lloyd's contribution was a return ticket to Bremen and Cherbourg.

At another table, presided over by Americans, were silver articles offered by the Baroness Speck von Sternburg and her sister, the Vicomtesse de Faramonde, wife of the French Naval Attaché.

Among the guests invited by Prince Guido von Henckel Donnersmarck to join a shooting party at the castle of Neudeck, Silesia, arranged for the German Crown Prince, were the Count and Countess Johannes Sierstorff. With the exception of the venerable Countess Waldersee, the Countess Sierstorff is perhaps the doyenne of the group of American women who married into the ranks of the German nobility.

An American Hostess.

Before her marriage she was Miss Mary Mowitton, of New York. She is one of the few hostesses who of late years has had the honor of entertaining the Kaiser at the splendid old Silesian estate of her husband, and when she comes to Berlin for the winter season she is always a conspicuous figure at court functions on account of her commanding presence and fine jewels.

Prince Von Henckel Donnersmarck provided a truly royal entertainment for his imperial guest, as the bag comprised 700 hares and 911 pheasants. The Crown Prince sustained his well known prowess, killing 90 hares and 114 birds, and was in consequence crowned king of the hunt.

A December Tea.

The first of two early December teas to which Miss Agnes Kerr has issued invitations took place this week with Mrs. T. Steward White as principal guest. Mrs. Thackara, whose name also appeared upon the card of invitation, was unable to be present. Dr. Alice Luce and Mrs. A. C. Wilkie presided at the tea tables.

Among the large number of guests were the American Ambassador and Mrs. Gerard, Mrs. Walter B. Gherardi, Mrs. Paul Shorey, Mrs. H. J. Luce, Dr. and Mrs. George Allen, Mrs. Egerton, Mrs. Anna B. McElree, Mrs. Randolph Hall, Frau Hermann Stilke, Mr. W. C. Dreher, Mrs. Henry Theobald, Mrs. Arthur N. Davis, Mrs. H. S. Downs, Mrs. William Kugemann, Mrs. Stephen S. McFadden, Mrs. Beach and Miss Mary Hunt, of Boston; Mr. Alfred Thompson and Mr. Harold B. Quarton.

Tango Holds Its Own.

Mrs. H. V. Fisher, of Boston, invited the younger set to the dansant given in celebration of the seventeenth birthday of her daughter Dorothy. As most of the guests belong to some of the tango circles formed in Berlin this season, there were some interesting interpretations of the dance, which continues to hold its own in spite of royal disfavor.

Among those who proved themselves adepts at tangoing were the young hostess, Miss Charmian von Wiegand, Miss Helen McFadden and Miss Margaret Luce. Others participating were Miss Louise Cavalli, Miss Dorothy Mitchell, Miss Anna Bultman, Miss Isabel Phillips, Miss Dorothy Berry and a group of young women from the Willard school.

Mrs. Stephen H. McFadden was hostess at a déjeuner given for Mrs. Henry Theobald, of Toledo, Ohio. Among the out of town guests were Mrs. H. H. R. Beach, of Boston, who will introduce herself to Berlin concertgoers in the two-fold rôle of pianist and composer next week; Mrs. T. Steward White, of Grand Rapids; Mrs. Paul Shorey, of Chicago, and Mrs. H. S. Downs, of Paris.

Auction Bridge.

Many guests went to an auction bridge party given by Mrs. Genevieve Anderson

Mr. Isaac Wolf, Jr., president of the American Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Wolf entertained at dinner on Tuesday at their new apartment in the Tiergartenstrasse. The Consul General and Mrs. Thackara, for whom the dinner was originally arranged, were not present, having cancelled all social arrangements on account of the death of the latter's sister.

Among those present were the Cuban Minister and Señora de Quesada, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. McFadden, Professor Nicholai, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Conger, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick William Wile and Mr. and Mrs. Alton Derrick.

Professor Paul Shorey, of the Chicago University, and Mrs. Shorey are being overwhelmed by that genuine German hospitality which under certain conditions is lavishly bestowed upon the stranger within the gates. They have been entertained by many of Professor Shorey's distinguished colleagues at Berlin University, to which the American scholar is accredited this season as Roosevelt professor.

Mrs. Shorey Entertained.

Professor Blanck, the well known scientist, who is filling the elective office of rector of the university, has given a dinner for them. Arrangements have been made for Professor Shorey to deliver an additional course of six lectures at the Colonial Institute, Hamburg, on the history of civilization and on American literature.

Mrs. Bernard Goldsmith entertained on Monday afternoon for Mrs. James W. Gerard, the ladies asked to meet her being Mrs. Joseph Clark Grew, Mrs. Paul Shorey, of Chicago; Mrs. G. Anderson, Mme. Kiralnger, Frau Hermann Schmidt, Mme. Minette Peterson, Frau Arthur Schlubeck, the American wife of the well known portrait painter, and Miss Helen Wickert.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar A. Gerst, assisted by the latter's mother, Mrs. Morris Cottlow, and Mrs. Addie A. Gerst, have resumed their monthly receptions, which always bring together many Americans interested in music. Mrs. Gerst, who before her marriage was Miss Augusta Cottlow, is a well known American in the music world.

Naval Attaché in Dutch Court.

Lieutenant Commander Walter R. Gherardi, who is accredited to both Berlin and The Hague as United States Naval Attaché, and Mrs. Gherardi will be presented to Queen Wilhelmina at the first drawing room of the season, to take place on January 2. This event is conducted with far less ceremony than is customary at the German court, the ladies of the foreign Diplomatic Corps not being required to appear with a court train, which is considered de rigueur in Berlin.

Countess Moltke, wife of the Danish Minister to Germany, has returned a call of some length to her mother, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, of Boston.

Mrs. Alexander Kirk, of Chicago, is returning to America aboard the George Washington to-day after passing the summer and autumn with her daughter, Mrs. Albert Billing Ruddock.

A young Polish-American composer named Stanislaus Letowsky has written an opera which will be produced at the new Municipal Opera House in Posen, lately erected through the initiative of the German Emperor. Mr. Letowsky, who is only twenty-three years old, is a native of Omaha, Neb., and is well known in Berlin, where he took a course of study at the Royal High School of Music. "Frau Anne: Or, the Lady at Her Dressing Table," is the title of his three act comic opera, the scene of which is laid in Holland at the time of Rembrandt, and an interesting historical note is given to the work by having the master painter of the Netherlands school appear upon the stage.

Lecture on Blackfoot Indians.

Mr. Walter McClintock, of Pittsburg, has just returned from Copenhagen, where he went by invitation of Baron and Baroness de Hegerman-Lindencrone, to give his illustrated lecture, "Fifteen Years with the Blackfeet Indians." A large number of guests from court and diplomatic society, as well as leading members of the Royal Geographical Society were present. Interest in the scientific researches of the American enthropologist was so great that he was asked to repeat the lecture for a public audience. Mr. McClintock leaves for America on board the Rotterdam to-day to fulfil a lecture engagement.

Among well known Americans in the city this week are Mr. Allison Armour, who is stopping at the Hotel Bristol; Mrs. C. E. Tracy, of New York, and her daughter, Miss Anne Tracy; Miss Ellicott, of Baltimore, who is registered at the Kaiserhof; Mr. E. H. Dennison, United States Consul at Dundee, and Mrs. Dennison, who is sightseeing in Berlin; Mr. J. Shannar White, who is recovering from a busy season as manager of Mr. William J. Bryan's Chautauqua circuit.

The most prominent American arrivals at the Hotel Adlon include Mr. C. L. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Lingheim, Mr. Philip Bettinger, Mr. M. Guggenheim, Mr. Gaston Nothman, the Misses Emma and Carmen Nothman, Mr. Louis Wolf, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Whiteley, Mr. and Mrs. John Morris and Mr. and Mrs. L. Lewek, all of New York.

LONDON TRADESMEN SAY THEIR CHRISTMAS TRADE IS EXTREMELY GOOD

Royalty Joins the Throngs in the Streets for Shopping Tours.

SPANISH MONARCHS ENJOY THEIR TRIPS

Country People Follow King George and Gasp in Amazement at His Markmanship.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
London, December 20.

THERE is life and plenty of it in London just now. The hotels are full and the west end is a scene of bustle and hustle from morning to night. The congestion of traffic is terrific and there is hardly room to move. All need to exercise the greatest patience and yet everybody is in jovial spirits, for London has entered upon its last mad rush before Christmas.

Wherever the money comes from, everybody seems bent on shopping, and the west end tradesmen have ceased to grumble and all are beaming with joy. They say they never had a merrier or more profitable time.

Though the King and Queen have been away at Chatsworth, there has been plenty of royalty in town for the events, the chief of which have been the first public début since her marriage of Princess Arthur of Connaught, when, with the Prince, she opened the military bazaar in the Royal Agricultural Hall, accompanied by Princess Louise and the Duke of Argyll. It was noted how much improved the Princess is since her wedding. She is much brighter and happier. Before she seemed always to wear a sad expression, but now she is all smiles and her laugh is that of a happy girl. Before her marriage she dressed very simply and her clothes scarcely could be said to reflect any particular style. Now the happy Princess is going in for very smart clothes. At the bazaar she looked lovely in a Nattier blue velvet dress with a frill at the neck and a black hat encircled with aigrettes.

After Prince Arthur had formally opened the bazaar Princess Arthur and Princess Louis became saleswomen at the regimental agency stall, assisted by the Countess of Londesborough and Lady Cursor and Lady Irene Denison.

Spain's Monarchs Leave.

Princess Henry of Battenberg in heliotrope velvet sold at the Guards brigade stall.

The King and Queen of Spain after a few days of hustle have left for Madrid. Before going they established a record. It happened that Prince Alexander of Battenberg, the Queen of Spain's brother, had been doing duty during the royal stop as an officer of the Guard at St. James' Palace, and therefore had not seen his sister. So before going she and the Queen had luncheon with Prince Alexander in the messroom over the Guards' quarters at St. James', the first time a crowned head ever has taken a meal there.

During the next few days there will be another merry royal shopping party, as Queen Alexandra, Princess Victoria and the King and Queen of Norway intend to pass some time at Christmas buying in London. The Queen mother, in particular, always looks forward to a shopping expedition, usually in one of the small royal broughams, which pass unnoticed in the general traffic. Her selection will be very great, for there are scores of articles to be sent away every year to little nieces and other relatives and other young acquaintances, whom, once remembered, the Queen mother never disappoints.

Meanwhile the King and Queen are making new history at Chatsworth, the King with his gun and the Queen in her quiet way making the acquaintance of the humble subjects of the countryside. One day the Queen went to the ancient fourteenth century Haddon Hall, home of the Rutland family, where she saw the wonderful tapestries which have been hanging there more than three centuries, and one of which is said to be the work of Mary Queen of Scots and is hanging in the bedroom of the famous Dorothy Vernon, daughter of George Vernon, the last of his race.

The Queen's Adviser.

The Duchess of Devonshire is hostess at Chatsworth and holds a position only fully realised by those in touch with the court. Not only is she Mistress of the Robes but the Queen's adviser in many matters of prime importance. Thus the recent formal edict the Queen issued against the tango and similar dances being performed in her presence was first discussed with the Duchess of Devonshire, who expressed thorough approval of the step. The Queen also consults her about the large amount of money she distributes in charity yearly.

While the grouse has proved to be a comparative failure the King has had excellent sport among the pheasants. One day he was followed by several hundred of the country people, who had a good view of the sport and were amazed at the accuracy of the King's shooting. At one point the King was shooting from a garden, and the crowd within a hundred yards saw him bring down bird after bird without a miss. All declared it was the most wonderful sight they ever had seen and have spoken of it since as something amazing. And these are people to whom pheasant shooting is a common sport.

At Covent Garden.

The King and Queen returned to London this week and witnessed a performance of "Joan of Arc" at Covent Garden, bringing to an end Raymond Rose's season with the opera, which is British made, by a composer partly French and singers mostly German, with the chief character the national heroine of France. It is a considerable time since the King has been at Covent Garden, because though genuinely fond of music he is not a regular attendant, like his father, who never missed an opportunity of seeing his favorite "La Bohème."

Everybody is now wondering when King Manuel and his bride are really coming to Fulwell Park, Twickenham, their future home. It has been ready for their reception for months, but nothing is known when they may be expected, and a belief that there is some unexplained mystery connected with the continual postponements of their homecoming is growing in the district. A week ago it was announced that they would arrive on Wednesday of this week, and preparations were made accordingly by the Richmond and Twickenham local authorities to present addresses of welcome. Now the announcement comes that King Manuel and his bride will not arrive for another few days. One report is that this homecoming has been deferred until the new year.

A curious misunderstanding, too, has arisen between Queen Amelie of Portugal and Mr. Stanley Paul, a well known publisher. A few days ago it was stated that Queen Amelie had written a volume of memoirs, giving a history of the revolution in Portugal, throwing a flood of light on that and the succeeding events in the tragic history of that country. Now a letter has been sent to the newspapers stating that there is no foundation for the report, and that the Queen never intended to publish her memoirs. Yet the fact remains that the manuscript is in the hands of Mr. Paul awaiting translation. Mr. Paul says he is unable to understand or explain Queen Amelie's denial of the report, but an explanation, nevertheless, is not difficult to find. The Portuguese government had heard of the proposed publication and vetoed it. As the exiled King still draws certain revenues from Portugal it would be impolitic for these to be endangered by any published memoirs which would lay bare the secrets of the revolution and perhaps throw a harsh light on some of the present rulers of Portugal.

Grand Duke to Appear.

It is not every day that a Russian Grand Duke, a cousin of the Tsar, gives evidence in an English court of justice, and exceptional interest therefore is taken in the appearance in the law courts soon of Grand Duke Boris, who sued a publishing company for alleged libel in connection with his experiences in the Russo-Japanese War. The proceedings, though a settlement has been effected, are likely to be piquant. The Grand Duke has had occasion to protest several times against the treatment meted out to him by certain of the American press in 1912 after a brief journey to America. He was made the subject of a bitter attack by yellow journalism. His secretary, speaking on his behalf, described the journalists as "a set of roughs, whose conduct was disgusting. They asked the Duke," he said, "the most delicate and insulting questions. Twenty cabs filled by reporters followed us wherever we went, and if the Grand Duke refused to see them it made no difference, as a long interview appeared all the same.

"After the Japanese war, in which he won the Cross of St. George for valor, the Grand Duke expressed to a St. Petersburg correspondent of a Paris newspaper his indignation at various published rumors about his conduct in the Far East, characterizing them as a tissue of lies. It was even rumored that he said that 'I struck General Kuropatkin because he refused to grant me leave of absence.'"

The Grand Duke is thirty-five, unmarried, tall, handsome, of good physique and an athletic soldier. His manner is attractive and as a rule he bubbles over with great good humor.

No Sex in Art, Cry in London

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
London, December 20.

PLAYGOERS often wonder why so many good actresses who have established themselves by sheer merit often disappear from the boards and are seldom heard of again, and why so many whose only recommendation is good looks usurp their places. Leading actresses whose only recommendation is histrionic talent are beginning at last to resent this state of affairs, and "The Woman's Theatre," a new enterprise of the Actresses' Franchise League, has been established with the idea of setting this right.

"The Woman's Theatre" is to produce on December 8 at the Coronet Theatre a translation by Mrs. George Bernard Shaw of Brieux's "Women On Her Own" ("La Femme Seule"), and Brieux has given it to the Woman's Theatre on exceedingly advantageous terms.

On December 11 another feminist play, "A Gauntlet," by Bjornsen, translated by R. Farquharson-Sharp, will be produced.

Miss Ines Bensusan, the organising secretary of the Woman's Theatre, being asked about the primary aims of the movement, the committee of which includes many of the foremost women of the day on the stage and in the literary world, said:—

"The Woman's Theatre has no idea of ousting men or being antagonistic to them. Its main idea is to help women. The stage is very much overcrowded as far as women are concerned. There are twenty applicants for every woman's vacancy for two to every man's. The Woman's Theatre is going to extend woman's field in the theatre to other branches besides acting. Many modern actresses have excellent business capabilities, and we are going to have women stage managers, women producers and women in charge of the box office at our headquarters. Men will not be employed except as actors.

"It is our intention also to fight to our utmost against the sex qualification in the theatre. There ought to be no sex in art, and yet it is an undoubted fact that a large proportion of managers still operate on [illegible] but the [illegible] physical attractiveness. A woman of talent ought not to be compelled to go through the ordeal of being regarded much as if she were some prize animal. I have been through the experience myself, and I will never forget it.

Society Circus Killed by Charge That Animals Are Tortured by Trainers

Remarkable Facts Brought to Light in Court Proceedings in London Regarding Claims of Creditors Against the London Opera House, Which Now Is Closed Again.

TRAINERS DENY CRUELTY, BUT CONCEAL METHODS

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
London, December 20.

COURT proceedings relative to the claims of creditors against the London Opera House have brought out the fact that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals here scored the greatest victory in its career when by systematised efforts it turned public favor away from the society circus playing there on the ground that training animals to perform so skilfully necessitated cruel methods.

Representatives of the society stood outside the theatre doors in Kingsway and boldly implored spectators not to enter and solicited signatures to petitions asking persons to remain away from theatres where animals perform.

As a result, the circus which began exceedingly well fell off in attendance, despite protests from the trainers, who denied most emphatically that any cruelty was involved.

The grand climax came on Saturday night, November 29, when, with dramatic suddenness, the opera house managers informed the audience that the doors would be forthwith closed and the run of the circus cease, owing to the lack of public support.

The glaring signs in front of the theatre were blotted out and three hundred employes thrown unceremoniously out of work, the Amalgamated Musicians' Union promising to take the matter up in the courts.

Controversy Arises.

On the following Monday Mr. E. A. V. Stanley issued a statement confessing that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was responsible for the sudden dramatic failure, as it educated the public into believing cruelty was involved, which he protested was not at all the case.

The question as to whether cruelty was involved then gripped popular interest here, leaving the trainers at a distinct disadvantage, as by exposing their methods they would be giving away the secrets of their life work, permitting others to imitate them. Consequently the trainers contented themselves with statements to the press that cruel methods in a lions' den with a man surrounded by twenty-eight lions would be equivalent to suicide, also adding that kind and not cruel methods are the secret of the successful training of ponies, dogs, &c.

This version, however, was vigorously opposed by several special writers in the London newspapers, who backed the contention of the Prevention of Cruelty Society and challenged the trainers to expose their methods.

A call made by your correspondent to the society circus when it was in full swing showed a series of thrilling animal tricks performed which seldom have been equalled on any stage. For example, a trainer appeared with twenty-eight lions, some appearing to be ferocious and growling and clawing at him, to the stupefaction of the spectators. At a critical moment, after appearing to hold the animals cowed by revolver and whip, the trainer threw these away and precipitated himself on the most ferocious beast, dragging and carrying it across the stage and finally sinking under its breast, while this and the other lions playfully stroked him, licked his hands and face and pulled and pushed him about like a kitten playing with a rubber ball.

Its Future a Problem.

Present arrangements for attractions there are not settled, the opera house now being closed. Mr. Alfred Butts has approached the directors with a proposal to let him produce variety acts in the house.

The London Opera House's history is interesting. The site belongs to the London County Council and was leased to Mr. Hammerstein in 1910 on a ninety-nine years' lease at $24,875 a year. That sum, therefore, is a first charge on the undertaking. Then Mr. Hammerstein put up the opera house on it at a cost of between $750,000 and $1,000,000. Early in 1912 he refused $900,000 for the house and also refused a rental of $82,510. The house had mortgages of $850,000 on it, and these formed a second charge on its prosperity.

Then, in November, 1912, Mr. Hammerstein leased the house to Mr. Fernand Akoun, of Luna Park, Paris, for fifteen years at a rental of $60,000 a year.

The next turn of the kaleidoscope came in May, 1913, when Mr. Akoun returned to Paris and Mr. E. A. V. Stanley acquired the rights of Mr. Hammerstein in the house. It is understood that he paid about $350,000.

The London Opera House has had one of the most extraordinary histories of any London place of amusement. Mr. Hammerstein said in interviews that he was animated in building it by a passion for popularising grand opera, but he could not get the choicest stars, and he could not even get the right to produce certain of the most popular operas.

But, worst of all, he could not get the social "tone" which Covent Garden possessed and which is so essential to the production of the highest form of musical art in a country like England.

Its Many Scenes.

Mr. Hammerstein opened the opera house with "Quo Vadis" in November, 1911. He reduced his prices to theatre prices in February, 1912. In July, 1912, he suddenly closed the house and returned to America, where he uttered some frank comments on the English musical taste.

On boxing night, 1912, the opera house was reopened under Mr. Akoun's lease as a picture house. It was intended to give a combination of variety turns and cinema. That lasted till March 8, 1913, when the house again was closed. On April 12 it was reopened with the revue "Come Over Here," which Mr. A. V. Fischer, the new manager, had brought from America. The first month of that revue proved an immense success. About fifty American chorus girls of exceeding comeliness were brought over, and their appearance in costly furs and evening dresses walking down an illuminated gangway laid from the stage to the back of the stalls became the talk of London.

The revue had two big stage carpentering sensations which rivalled the parade of fashion—the race between the railway train and the automobile and the mystery of the chorus girls who walked down into a lake and disappeared below the surface.

The success of the revue was so great that for several months it took in $20,000 a week. A series of performers of varied qualifications appeared at various stages in this dramatic olla podrida. They included La Belle Otero, Anna Held, Polaire, Carmelita Ferrer, May Yohe, Georges Carpentier, J. F. McArdle and Charles Hart, a negro comedian. The "second edition" of "Come Over Here" had a very short life, and the next entertainment was the circus.

Some time ago it was announced that the London Opera House would witness another season of grand opera under the management of Mr. Thomas Beecham, but that, too, has been abandoned.

"LOVELIEST OF ALL HIS MADONNAS"

The Panshanger Raphael, Acquired by the Messrs. Duveen, Praised by Morelli.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
London, December 20.

"THE loveliest of all the master's Madonnas," as the little Panshanger Madonna, which has passed from the Desborough family into the hands of the Duveen Brothers, as already described in a recent cable despatch, has been called by Morelli, is a panel painting about two feet three inches high by one foot six inches wide.

Better known as the "Cowper Madonna," it was in the possession of the Cowper family since 1780, when the third earl, who was British Minister in Florence, acquired it; and now, for the reasons already explained, it is going to America.

What the Messrs. Duveen paid for the picture is a secret, but it must have been a very large sum, when it is considered that the Trustees of the National Gallery could not meet the Messrs. Duveen's offer to take it over for exactly the same sum as they paid for it, and also when it is recalled that the National Gallery purchased from the Blenheim Trustees, in 1885, for $350,000, the "Madonna degli Ansidei."

Julia Cartwright in "Christ and His Mother in Italian Art," says of this little picture that it "belongs to the master's early Florentine days and must have been painted soon after the 'Madonna del Granduca,' which it resembles in more points than one. The Child is of the same type as the Babe of the Granduca, but fairer and smaller.

"In the distance on the right we recognise the marble porch and campanile of the Church that Cronaca had lately built on the way to S. Miniato and which Michel-angelo called his 'Bella villa nella.'"

TANGO IS TAUGHT IN MUSIC SHOP

Craze for the Dance in London Is Spreading and the Lessons Come High.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
London, December 20.

TANGO, and tango for tea. The craze is indeed spreading. Even a little music seller's shop in North London announces, "Tango taught here." It shows how the demand has grown up among the patrons of the dollar "hop." You may pay anything up to $20 for a lesson in the west end of London.

Speaking of tango—and one seems to speak of little else—managers who are recruiting performers for the suburban and provincial pantomimes complain of the great difficulty in finding dancers. All are making the essence of the contract the fact that the tango should figure in the pantomime. Practically any one who knows the dance will [illegible] during the next few weeks [illegible] big lump of money during the Christmas season.

Nothing Happened.

Judge:—
She sat beneath the mistletoe,
Without the slightest fear;
She felt no wild, glad tremor, though
She knew he lingered near.
She sat there calm and unafraid,
And sleepily he yawned, for they
Had been engaged for a year.

ANTIQUITY OF GAMES

MOST MODERN SPORTS HAVE A LONG BACKGROUND

Chess Is Perhaps the Oldest of Contests of Skill and Cricket Goes Into Remote History in England —Billiards and Bowling Were Mediaeval Recreations — Baseball Is Only Up-to-Date Rounders.

The Anglo-Saxon is responsible for the preservation of many of the games which are now almost unknown in the countries in which they had their origin. Some of these forms of diversion are older than the Roman empire, while others like, for instance, basket-ball, are of comparatively late origin.

Baseball, which holds almost undisputed sway on this continent, is founded on the old English game of rounders and for centuries it has been known in England in various forms.

Billiards is believed by some to have been brought from the east by the Crusaders, while others claim an English origin for it and find it allied to the game of bowls. Still others assert that the French developed it from an ancient German game. It seems pretty certain that the first person to give form and rule to the game was an artist named Henrique Devigne, who lived in the reign of Charles IX. of France.

Bowls, or bowling, is one of the most popular and ancient of English pastimes, its origin being traceable to the 12th century. It was held in such disfavor for years that laws were enacted against it and it was an illegal pursuit. Alleys were built, however, as it could not be played out of doors during the winter, and the game flourished in spite of opposition. In the beginning of the 15th century greens began to increase, while the alleys were rigorously and absolutely suppressed. It soon became a royal game and no gentleman's place was complete without a bowling green.

Checkers is said by some to be a very old game, while others declare it to be of comparatively modern origin. Whence it came is absolutely unknown. The game is also called draughts and there are many varieties of it—Chinese, English, Polish, Spanish, Italian and Turkish. It is also found among the native tribes of the interior of New Zealand.

Chess always has been the subject of more dispute, so far as its origin is concerned, than any other game. It is probably the most ancient as well as the most intellectual of games, and it is played all over the world. The belief which is most generally accepted is that it came from the Hindoos and the most conservative estimate places its age at 1,000 years. Some persons, however, claim an age of from 4,000 to 5,000 years for it. Its basis is the art of war and the Hindoo name for it, chaturanga, means that four "angas," or members of an army which are given in Hindoo writings as elephants, horses, chariots and foot-soldiers.

Cricket is the national game of Englishmen and seems always to have been played in Britain. The first mention of it is found in a manuscript of the 13th century. The name comes from the Saxon "cric" or "crye," a crooked stick.

Croquet is said to have been derived from pallie-maille, or mall, which was played in Languedoc in the 13th century. Mall was very popular in England at the time of the Stuarts.

Curling has been popular in north Britain for the last three centuries and is regarded as a Scottish game.

Dice are said by some to have had their origin in occult sources, but more frequently they are ascribed to Palmedes of Greece, B. C. 1244. Those exhumed at Thebes are identical with those used to-day and the games played with them are the simplest and most widely known games of chance in the world.

Football was undoubtedly introduced into England by the Romans and is therefore older than the national game of cricket. Varieties of it may be found in the Philippines and through the Polynesian islands, among the Eskimos, the Faroe islands and even by the Maoris of New Zealand. The Greeks also played it.

Golf is popularly supposed to have had its origin in Scotland, but there seems to be good reason for believing that it came from Holland.

Lacrosse, the national game of Canada, came from the aboriginal red men, who doubtless played it for many centuries before the discovery of the new world.

Poker is probably a development of il frusso, an Italian game of the 16th century. A similar game called primiera was played in Italy in the 16th century and thence journeyed into Spain. In France this became ambigu and later appeared in England under the name of brag. Poker seems to have descended more directly from the game of brag than from any of the others.

Tennis is pronounced the oldest of all the existing ball games. It is [illegible] as played in Europe during the middle ages in the parks and ditches of the feudal castles. It was at first the name of kings and nobles, but later it grew popular with all classes. The French took it from the Italians and the English from the French.

Whist undoubtedly is derived from the old game of trumps, which is purely English lineage. There is no record of the origin of this game or of its development into ruff and honors, which was the parent of whist. The earliest reference to it is believed to be in a sermon of Latimer, about the year 1529. The word probably is derived from the whist or "silence," which close attention to play demands of the player.

DRINKING IN EUROPE.

Munich Heads the List in the Quantity of Beer Consumed.

Norwegians are one of the most temperate of northern nations, consuming but 40½ pints of beer and 4½ of brandy per head of population yearly.

The Dane drinks on the average 156 pints of beer, but little wine, and only 36 pints of brandy each year. The Swede manages to consume 84 pints of beer and 13 of spirits. The Russian drinks 7½ pints of vodka and the same amount of beer. The Frenchman, however, takes 160 pints of wine, 15 of beer, 48 of brandy. The Britisher soothes himself with 9 pints of whisky or gin, 3 of claret and 228 of beer.

The Dutchman will drink 54 pints of beer and 12 of brandy. Taking every German province to obtain an average, it is found that the German consumes 187½ pints of beer, 10½ of wine and 0¾ of spirits. In Munich, however, the average amount per head rises to 360½ pints, being the highest of any province, while the lowest average obtains in the northern province of Alsatia. Here the inhabitants are satisfied with only 144 pints of beer per head.

The Italian is the least of all addicted to alcoholic beverages, taking only 3 pints of beer, 1¾ of alcoholic beverages and 144 of wine per head.—Pearson's Weekly.

Star Colors.

Professor Edward C. Pickering of Harvard has been able to show that Ptolemy had an excellent eye for color values; that William Herschel had a strong sense of red, but was a little weak on the blues; that the noted astronomer Sufi, of the tenth century, was another who had a good color vision; that of various other ancient astronomers some were weak on the reds and some on the blues. His assertions are based on the practical certainty that the color of the stars has not changed in these centuries. Most of the old astronomers have left records of the colors of the various stars, and these values he applied to standards established by taking the average color value of certain stars given by a number of Harvard observers.—Saturday Evening Post.

Eyes of the Starfish.

At the end of each arm in the common starfish there is a little red eye. It is sheltered at the base of the terminal tube foot, which has become altogether sensory. The eye or eye cushion shows little cups, each closed by a lens lined by red, rodlike sensory cells, cloth ed externally by supporting cells and containing a transparent watery substance. Hellmuth Plessner made a number of experiments at Heligoland in order to discover how much a starfish sees with these "eyes" or eye spots. The answer is, not very much. It does not form an image nor does it perceive a moving object. But it has considerable sensitiveness in distinguishing different degrees of light and shade. Even the skin of the starfish is responsive to differences of illumination in the immediate vicinity, but by means of its "eyes" the starfish becomes aware of distant illumination that differs, either positively or negatively, from that of the immediately surrounding area.—New York World.

Quaint Description.

Admiral Dewey once described quaintly in Washington a man who was a borrower and a sponger.

"He is one of those chaps that one occasionally meets," the admiral said, "who use all their friends as coaling stations."

Remembered Him.

"Did your uncle remember you when he came to make his will?"

"Yes. He remembered me so well that he left my name out altogether."—Buffalo Express.

Proud Father: "Welcome back to the old farm, my boy! So you got through college all right?"

"Farmer's Son—"Yes, father."

Proud Father: "Ye knew I told ye to study up on chemistry and things so you'd know best what to do with different kinds of land. What do you think of that medder there, for instance?"

Farmer's Son (joyfully)—"Jehosaphat. What a place for cricket."

The Joys of Christmas Time

By Kennett Harris

Hark! the merry chimes are warning us that this is Christmas morning.
And it's time that we were rising,
though the hour isn't late.
Still, the kiddies will be flocking, each
to overhaul his stocking,
And there's scads of things we've got to do that really cannot wait.
Yet, before we kick the clothes off (quite determined not to doze off),
Let's indulge in dreamy musing on this joyous Christmastide;
Let us, while the bells are pealing, get up some real Christmas feeling,
Fill ourselves with sweet emotions that are not quite cut and dried.
True, the minutes fast are gliding, but, concern 'em, let 'em glide.

Think of those long weeks of waiting, all the glad anticipating
Of the gay and festive season that at last, at last is here;
Never resting, never stopping in our mad career of shopping,
Searching over the ideal, not too cheap and not too dear;
Crushed and elbowed in the reeking crowds, that like ourselves are seeking
Just the very thing of all things that their loved ones most desired.
Limp and draggled then emerging from the pushing, struggling, surging
Mob, with parcels overladen, reaching home at last, dog tired.
Those experiences may be best described as "most all-fired."

Yet no antiquated stale showed endurance more heroic
Than we've manifested through the weary ordeal of that time;
We have stood the stress of barter with the courage of a martyr;
Now we find sweet compensation
Listening to the Christmas chime,
Whose clear cadence, soft and mellow, seems to whisper to a fellow
That the worst is nearly over, that we soon may breathe again,
Soon may find surcease of sorrow, and that, maybe by tomorrow
Or the next day, may be lifted something of this mental strain,
That a blessed sense of rest may soothe the tissues of our brain.

We have done with haste and flurry, no occasion now to worry,
Lest some sensitive relation may have been quite overlooked.
All the lists of names are checked and all the walls with green are decked, and
Now within a few short hours the Christmas dinner will be cooked.
Hail to Christmas! happy season! There is some substantial reason
To be gleeful at thy advent—the beginning of the end.
As thou comest wreathed with holly, we can certainly be jolly,
Welcome thee with feast and wassail, and in general unbend,
For we know that we have spent for thee the last cent we can spend!

Now the door bell will cease ringing to the people who were bringing An endless string of packages from morn to dewy eve;
We no longer will be running to conceal those things with cunning,
And we'll lose our wonted air of having something up our sleeve.
There will be a deuced litter, when the gewgaws gleam and glitter,
Of waste paper, string and cotton, from the kitchen to the hall;
But, with consciences elastic, we will grow enthusiastic
And "wonder how they guessed," as on the donors' necks we fall,
Looking blissful over dewdads that we didn't want at all.

Ah, this blessed thing of giving! It is half the joy of living
To watch the looks of gratitude and pleasure and surprise
That, at least to outward seeming, are upon loved faces beaming—
As the loved one opens his parcel and digs out his gaudy ties.
And the gentle wife and mother her emotion tries to smother
When conducted by her husband, to some secret corner, where,
As a proof of fond affection, he has hid from her detection,
His gift to her, a cozy, costly, wall-upholstered chair
(Of whose comforts, in the future, you may bet he'll get his share).

Now this Christmas spirit moves us to sense that it behooves us
To keep Poverty's bare platter and fill Destitution's cup.
Bring turk and pie and gladness to the homes of empty sadness!
To help out sweet Christmas charity who would not loosen up?
But it's highly aggravating not to say exasperating,
When we've given most nobly and without thought of stint,
To find out, as we expected, that the modest are neglected
And our princely benefaction hasn't found its way to print.
(Certainly we didn't ask it, but a man might take a hint).

But away with sad reflection! This is no time for dejection.
Merry Christmas, happy Christmas, as we said, has come at last!
All the many tribulations, all the trials and vexations
That have crowded thick upon us for the last six weeks, are past.
Not a protest shall be uttered, though the house with toys is cluttered
And the kids are all parading to the sound of horn and drum,
Lusty lung and laryax voicing the extent of their rejoicing.
We will have to stand the racket now that Christmas day is come.
(Later tone our nervous system at some sanitarium).

Thank the Giver if we're able to sit
'round a well-spread table,
Where the plump white-bosomed turkey sheds its savor through the room,
And pudding comes on smoking, and
there's no end to the joking,
And no heart that harbors malice
and no mind o'ercast with gloom,
Let us be profoundly grateful that we have at least a plateful,
Grateful for the pepsin tablets that correct our Christmas cheer;
Hold it as among our mercies if there's coin left in our purses,
Be thankful for those dear to us and those who hold us dear.
(And most supremely thankful Christmas comes but once a year).

£5,000 IS THE LIMIT.

Not Worth More Himself, Declares Viscount Haldane.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Lord Haldane has expressed the opinion that he is not worth his salary. The bigbook containing the evidence of the royal commission on the delay in law courts issued yesterday, publishes this interesting fact. During a discussion of the subject of judges' pensions, Lord Haldane, replying to questions from Mr. Samuel Roberts, M.P., said he thought that, generally speaking, £5,000 a year was a very good salary to pay anybody for public services.

Mr. Roberts—You think nobody is worth more than that?

Lord Haldane—I am inclined to think no one is worth more than that.

Mr. Roberts—Not even the Lord Chancellor?

Lord Haldane—I make no exception.

Lord Haldane, as Lord Chancellor, receives $50,000 a year, and is entitled to $25,000 a year when he goes out of office with the designation or defeat of a Government, or when he retires.

Head-On Collision Averted.

CRANBROOK, B.C., Dec. 24. — A heavy death toll and a large loss to the rolling stock was narrowly averted Tuesday night when two flat cars, loaded with ties, broke away from loaders on a spur at Binert, 50 miles west of here, and ran six miles down grade on the main line. When within a quarter of a mile of the Soo freight No. 84, the runaway cars jumped the track while rounding the curve, and a head-on collision was averted only by a miracle. The runaway was traveling 100 miles an hour, and made a clear jump without touching the track.

Huerta, Miguel Covarrubias, formerly Mexican Minister to Russia, and now confidential agent in London of the Mexican constitutionalists, appeared at the office of the secretary of Lloyds' Maritime Insurance Agency last evening and formally deposited the pronunciamento of the Mexican constitutionalist leader. The secretary of Lloyd's duly posted the warning on the notice boards, where it attracted the utmost attention of the underwriters.

Young Woman Ill-Treated.

MONTREAL, Dec. 24.—Marie Salais, a young Mexican woman, who was found wandering alone in the woods near Pontiac County, Que., and was taken to Ottawa, has been brought to Montreal, and has been placed in the Notre Dame Hospital. She will undergo an operation there, necessitated by her experience.

Miss Salais tells a piteous story of ill-treatment at the hands of people at a house at which she stopped, and with whom, she says, she had escaped when found in the Pontiac woods in an exhausted condition.

Expect To Release Steamer.

SARNIA, Dec. 24.—The steamer Matoa, which is hard aground at Point Aux Barques, will be released in a few days according to the Reid Wreckage Co. here, which has the contract. The boat is owned by the Steel Company and was abandoned by its wrecking master. The Reids undertook to raise the boat and will receive a good sum if successful. The hold was pumped out, and it was then found that a bad leak was letting the water into the engine room. This will be plugged by a diver, after which the boat will be floated by pumping out the water.

TOT WINS HER CASE.

Little Miss Climbs Judge's Knee and Proves Point.

MONTREAL, Dec. 24. — Climbing upon Mr. Justice Charbonneau's knee and telling him that she did not want to go and live with her mother because she was better treated at the house of her "auntie," a pretty little miss of seven years had her request granted before the local court here yesterday.

The little girl showed Mr. Justice Charbonneau her dolls and other playthings, as if realizing that decision adverse to her wishes would necessarily entail reparation from these childish delights.

The case was that of Dame Jennie Johansson, mother of the child, v. Irma Haglin, "auntie," a boarding-house keeper of Mansfield street. The mother sought by way of habeas corpus to get possession of the youngster, who, for the past four years or so, has been in the possession of Dame Haglin.

Evidence was submitted to show the mother had been an inmate of the jail on account of her intemperate habits.

Disheartening Effect of Piles

It is not only the itching and stinging of piles that is to be dreaded but also the depressing and debilitating effect on the whole system. The victim of pils cannot do efficient work. There is an uneasiness and discomfort by day and at night the distress from the itching prevents sleep and rest, and undermines the general health.

From almost the first application of Dr. Chase's Ointment you get relief from the annoying itching and burning, and gradually the ulcers are healed up and the disease thoroughly cured. Do not make the mistake of discontinuing treatment as soon as relief is obtained. Dr. Chase's Ointment is a proved cure but it depends on you to apply it persistently until a cure is effected.

Even the most severe cases of long standing yield to the soothing, healing influence of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Surgical operations are no longer necessary(for, as a matter of fact, Dr. Chase's Ointment has cured cases that were not cured by operations. No sufferer from piles can afford to delay the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Applied Mathematics.

I sometimes wonder what's the use
Of squaring the hypothenuse
Or why, unless it be to tease,
Things must be called isosceles.
Of course I know that mathematics
Are mental stunts and acrobatics
To give the brain a drill gymnastic
And make gray matter more elastic—
Is that why Euclid has employed
Trapezium and trapezoid,
I wonder?—yet it seems to me
That all the plain geometry
One needs is just this simple feat:
Whate'er your line, make both ends meet.
—Annie W. Young in Harper's.

Impressed.

"You seem very much impressed by all these explanations I have been giving you about banking and currency."

"Yes, Charley dear," replied Mrs. Torkins. "It seems perfectly wonderful that anybody could know as much as you do about money without having any."—Washington Post.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys. Then the Back Hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have headache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming trouble while it is only trouble.

H. H. ROBERTSON DIES.

Widely Known Appeal Court Officer Was 55 Years Old.

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—Henry H. Robertson, K.C., assistant registrar of the Court of Appeal, Osgoode Hall, died yesterday at his home, 102 Highland avenue, following a long period of ill-health. Since June last Mr. Robertson has been unable to continue his court duties and he traveled in Europe during the summer months. Bronchitis was the nature of his malady. On Monday pneumonia set in and death followed quickly.

H. H. Robertson was the son of Justice Robertson, and was born in Hamilton 55 years ago. After being called to the Bar he practiced law for many years in his home city, and was appointed special examiner in the high court. Four years ago he came to Toronto to accept the assistant registrarship of the Court of Appeal.

The late king's counsel was deeply interested in early Canadian history and had made an exhaustive study of many original documents.

Troops Should Stay.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—The proposal to withdraw the international forces from China has at no time met with favor among officials here. When Minister Reinsch recently conveyed to the State Department Russia's proposal for withdrawal of troops, officials took the ground that absolute assurance of the maintenance of order in Chili Province would be the first consideration of acquiescence.

No such assurance, however, has been forthcoming and, on the contrary, officials observe with some apprehension recent uprisings and plottings against Yuan Shi Kai's Government.

Ten Cars Derailed.

BOLTON, Dec. 24.—The derailment of ten cars of freight on a C.P.R. train at Cedar Mills, Ont., seven miles north of Bolton, on the Toronto-Muskoka line, was the cause of tying up this division and paralyzing passenger traffic for the day. The run-off occurred at 7.45 yesterday morning, when a C.P.R. southbound freight, No. 184, left the rails, owing to a broken axle, taking nine cars with it. The cars rolled down the embankment and crashed into the telegraph poles, knocking them down and putting the telegraph wires out of use.

Jews Get Concession.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—An order-in-council has been passed allowing Passover bread and matzo to come into Canada free of duty between March 11 and April 12. The Minister of Customs was asked by a number of leading Canadian Hebrews to make this concession.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Plaisford, N.S. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her, and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

May Change Bisley Rules.

LONDON, Dec. 24. — Important changes in the conditions of shooting for the King's Prize and other of the more important competitions as Bisley, are recommended in a communication sent to the Council of the National Rifle Association by Gen. Sir C. W. Douglas of the War Office committee, which has been considering the proposals for modifying the Bisley program to bring it more into harmony with the musketry regulations of the territorial force.

The agitation for the abolition of the "bull's eye," and the knowledge that the War Office favored "service competitions," has created uneasiness among some of the rifle clubs who fear that the adoption of the War Office policy may kill the interest in rifle shooting.

Ranchers Back Report.

MEDICINE HAT, Alta., Dec. 24.—The ranchers of the southern part of the province are holding a meeting here for the purpose of preventing the opposition in the Government to the recent report of the ranching committee regarding the continuation of the leasing system.

The commission reported favorably to granting leases on ranches which occupied Government lands, but it has later developed that there is considerable opposition to the report and its adoption. About 40 ranches from various parts of the provinces, some from western Saskatchewan, are in the city attending the convention.

Yet ne'er a cloud has crossed my path
Sufficient for my bills.

Is naught but watered stock!

Grandma Never Let Her Hair Get Grey

Kept Her Locks Dark, Thick, Glossy, With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is musey and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all grey hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Grey, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

Sir James Better.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.— It was stated by his physician last night that Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, who has been confined to his room in the Manhattan Hotel for several days is much improved. Sir James says he expects to return to Canada within a few days, but has not decided on the date.

Genesis of the Phonograph.

As long ago as 1865 Sir W. H. Preece, then director of the British postoffice telegraphs, sent messages without wires across the sound of Mull when the submarine cable was broken down. Sir William was also present at the birth of the phonograph. In 1877 he spent Independence day with Edison at his house in New York, and in discussing the telephone he remarked to the great American inventor, "Then if what you say is true it will be possible to reproduce the human voice." Edison shut his eyes, said nothing, and the conversation changed. On the voyage home Sir William worked out a phonograph in theory, but, not being a mechanic, left it as an idea. In less than a month Edison sent Sir William Preece a phonograph, the first that came to England.—London Graphic.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has been so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arriving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

The Examiner Wishes All Its Readers a Very Merry Christmas

A STATEMENT FROM MAYOR BRADBURN IN REGARD TO THE POWER SITUATION

His Worship Replies to Mr. W. H. Collier's Open Letter Reviewing the Expropriation Proceedings

CITY'S ELECTRICAL POLICY

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 23rd, 1913.
To the Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—Mr. W. H. Collier has addressed to me a letter through the local papers regarding the expropriation of the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. by the city. Having been absent from the city for a couple of days, I could not answer it sooner. I believe that the facts have been made public, but I have no objection to give Mr. Collier, or any other ratepayer or all the ratepayers, any information regarding this or any other city business.

I will try to answer Mr. Collier's questions.

Mr. Collier asks if the people were led to believe that the city could obtain possession of the company's pole line and distributing equipment for an approximate sum of $94,000 and that upon payment thereof the company's franchise would cease. That is very close to the fact. The valuation of the property was about that sum, and upon the city paying for and taking possession of it the company's franchise was to be at an end.

He asks if at the time the Act of 1913 was passed the Council knew definitely what property, and approximately its value, the city would have to purchase from the company in order to cancel the 30 years' franchise.

Mr. Collier may remember that there was an Act passed regarding this matter in 1912. Previous to the passage of that Act the Council had a valuation made of the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. The Act of 1913 was to amend the Act of 1912. When the bill which became the Act of 1913 was introduced into the Legislature, and when it came before the Private Bills Committee, the value of the property owned by the company had not materially altered.

He further asks if the Council knew when it passed the by-law expropriating the company's property that the company owned the Auburn dam, power plant and raceway connected therewith. It did not. The company did not own this property when the first bill was passed, when the by-law authorizing the debentures was passed, or when the second Act came before the Legislature, and no conveyance of this property was registered so that the fact could be ascertained when the Act of 1913 became law.

Again Mr. Collier asks whether, if the city does not take the whole of the company's property (by which I presume he means including the Auburn property), the company is not still entitled to their 30 years' franchise. That is a question that has to be considered. It may be that such is the case, but I am not prepared to say that it is or is not. If it is it may be all the better for the city, for the city must have power and if it can take this excellent power property at its value the investment would be well worth considering by the Council and the ratepayers.

Mr. Collier asks what property of the company the city's expert did not value. The city's valuator made a valuation of the property the Peterborough Light and Power Co. owned at that time, that is the distributing system. As I have explained, it was not until after this that the company got a conveyance of the Auburn property.

Finally Mr. Collier asks whether the Council before passing the by-law expropriating the company's property was not in a position to find out definitely all the property in the city limits owned by the company. No doubt it was, but this would have been a considerable undertaking as there is a good deal of land in the city that they might have bought and it did not occur to any member of the Council to have a general search made in the Registry Office to see if any had been purchased. The Council knew that at the time of the passing of the Act of 1913, the Auburn dam according to the Registry Office appeared to be the property of the Auburn Power Company, and no member of the Council had or could reasonably be expected to have had any idea, that after the passing of the Act authorizing the expropriation of the property of the Light and Power Company which the latter company fought against so hard in the Legislature, that this company would voluntarily put the city in the position of being able to expropriate so valuable an asset as the Auburn dam and power plant. Mr. Colville said, when appearing before the County Judge on this matter, that he expected to meet the city's representatives again in the Legislature, that is that the city would require further legislation before it could overcome the obstacles the company would put in its way. He may not be correct in this: there are more ways than one, usually, of meeting a situation, and this one may be met. But if it should be that further

THE STORY OF THE FIRST CHRISTMAS

And she brought forth her firstborn son, and drapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn. And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the City of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

COMMISSIONER STARR DEAD

Well Known Judge of Toronto's Juvenile Court Passes Away at His Home in Toronto

WELL KNOWN HERE

TORONTO, Dec. 24. — Commissioner J. Edward Starr, of the Toronto Juvenile Court, and the first appointment to juvenile judgeship in Canada, died this morning following an operation for appendicitis. He was 58 years of age and was formerly a Methodist minister, having filled appointments in many cities in Ontario and the West. He was a big-hearted man, and recognized wherever he was known as ideal for his judicial position. He was recently much criticized for his judgment in the Chubb case when he ordered a stiff sentence and deportation for an Englishman who declined to send his eleven-year-old girl to school.

ORIGINAL POETRY

CHRISTMAS IS THE DAY OF DAYS.

The sun is shining bright and clear,
'Tis Xmas day, the day of cheer;
When gladness from many hearts flow,
Giving out their happy peaceful glow;
Greetings fly both left and right,
It is the day of great delight,
All things in nature seem to say
Christmas is the day of days.

Christmas day, does the rich in gold,
Ever think of the hunger and the cold;
That some may suffer on this day,
Do they try to chase some misery away?
Do we even give a word of cheer,
To help some poor soul in the coming year?
Let us give, that we too may say
Christmas is the day of days.

THIS CHRISTMAS DAY.

(By F. A. Connors, Pastor Park Street Baptist Church.)

When Christ was born in Bethlehem,
The greatest blessing came to men,
This world has ever seen;
He came in God's appointed time,
He was the messenger divine.

The Christ of God who came to save,
His life for sinners freely gave,
That He might save from sin;
For us His blood He freely shed,
And wore the thorns upon His head.

Oh, let us on this Christmas Day,
From our hearts most freely say,
He is our Priest and King;
And as we love, so may we live,
Our lives in service freely give.

Oh may each Christmas then remind
Us of God's gift to all mankind,
When Jesus Christ was born;
Help us to give that we may be,
With Him through all eternity.

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 25, 1913.

ALL HAIL CHRISTMAS.

All Hail, to the Blest Christmas Day,
Glad tidings, it doth bring,
When every voice shall sing or say,
Glory to The New Born King.

All Hail to the Blest Christmas time.
It makes our hearts feel bright;
We hear the peals of Christmas chime;
It fills us with delight.

All Hail, to the Blest Christmas Day,
When Jesus Christ was born.
He came to guide us on our way,
On that Blest Christmas morn.

CHARGED WITH SHOP-LIFTING

Mrs. Mary Reynolds, a Local Woman, Accused of Taking Articles From Woolworth's Store

CASE WAS ENLARGED

Mrs. Mary Reynold, a woman with a very respectable appearance, was charged in the Police Court, this morning, with stealing a number of articles from the Woolworth Company's store. She was not represented by counsel, but in consideration of the fact that to-morrow is Christmas the Magistrate enlarged the case until Friday at 10 o'clock.

It appears that Mrs. Reynolds entered Woolworth's store, yesterday, ostensibly for the purpose of making Christmas purchases. Taking advantage of the crowded condition of the store, it is alleged that she stole a number of articles from the counters. She was detected by one of the employees and arrested shortly afterwards. When she was arrested she had concealed about her one pair of salt and pepper shakers, three bottles of perfume, two shaving brushes, three cards of brooches and one bar of castile soap. The value of the goods was about $1.50. The accused expected her husband home to-night and did not plead or elect on the charge preferred against her.

A Finlander appeared in court, charged with being drunk. He could not speak English, but by means of signs he was made to understand the charge against him, to which he pleaded guilty. He was fined $2.

COST OF OPERATING THE NEW STREET LIGHTING SYSTEM FOR ONE YEAR

Is Placed at $6,578,40--This Represents the Total Annual Expense Covering a Period of Thirty Years, or an Aggregate of $197,352.00.

Considerable public interest has been shown as to the cost of installation and operation of the new city lights. In default of he Council supplying, as it should do, the details the people have a right to receive, the following information, based on practical knowledge of the subject dealt with, is given for the enlightenment of the ratepayers, who, in the final analysis, are the persons most vitally interested, for they will have to pay the bill:

It has not been possible to ascertain the exact first cost of the lamp installation from the City Treasurer, as the payments are not as yet complete. It is understood, however, that the Hydro-Electric Engineer's estimat eis $30,000.00. Of this amount about $29,000.00 has been paid out to date. Furthermore, the Engineer's estimate included running underground work only to opposite the Oriental Hotel on Hunter Street, whereas the Council later decided to extend it as far west as Aylmer Street. Duplication of cable also took place at other points on the system, in order to permit of lamps on side streets being lighted after midnight. In addition to this the overhead portion of the lamp wiring, which has been hastily erected on the metal poles on George and Charlotte streets will have to be removed and put up upon rear streets. Similarly the substation apparatus has been temporarily installed and will have to be removed to permanent and more suitable quarters at a later date. As the Engineer's estimate did not contemplate the above extensions and repetition of work, it is safe to assume that no improvement on his figures has been made and, therefore, it is quite conservative to take them as the actual cost for purposes of the following estimate. The debentures issued to cover the cost of the lamps are redeemable in thirty years, the amount required to be raised each year to meet the interest and sinking fund for $29,000.00 would therefore be $1950.90.

While the life of the metal poles, lamp brackets, and underground work may be reasonably assumed to be thirty years, this does not apply to the interior working parts of the lamps, nor of course to the electrodes, rectifier tubes, and other renewable parts. The life of copper electrodes is about 2300 hours and of magnetite electrodes about 715 hours. The guaranteed life of rectifier tubes is 600 hours, but they may be depended on for about 1500 hours.

In calculating the cost of power for the street lamps and current for interior lighting at the sub-station, the rates announced some months ago as those which the City would adopt, are used.

In regard to minor items in the estimate, it is expected that to properly preserve the iron work and present a reasonably good appearance, the metal poles and lamp brackets would require to be repainted once every two years. Also fire insurance for building and contents should be carried on the sub-station, and a certain amount of accident insurance.

It is understood that all the lamps will be lighted from evening until midnight and that half the lamps will be lighted from midnight until morning.

The following estimate, therefore, covers the annual cost of 100 units of magnetite arc lighting now in operation, or provided for.

Interest and sinking fund charge for each of 30 years on first cost of installation	$1950.90
Rent of sub-station building	150.00
One operator employed steadily	900.00
Assistant operator employed 6 months only	300.00
Power for lamps	1510.60
Copper electrodes	200.00
Magnetite electrodes	264.00
Rectifier tubes	260.00
Globe renewals	390.00
Repairs and renewals to lamps	90.00
Repainting poles and lamp brackets (every 2 years $100.00)	50.00
Lighting sub-station	17.50
Heating sub-station (5 tons coal)	40.00
Water for cooling transformers	75.00
Insurance, sub-station and accident	50.00
Telephone	30.00
Proportion of administrative expenses of Utilities Commission and City clerical force	250.00
No allowance for damage to lamp and outside apparatus from lightning, fires in adjacent building, etc.
Total annual expenses for 100 lamps	$6,578.40

ILLNESS IS FREQUENTLY PRELUDE TO POVERTY

Here Is One Example of How a Man Became Ill, Another Got His Job and Now He Is Flat Broke.

Here is one way in which the wolf pokes his nose across the door step. An employee of the G.T.R. fell ill some time ago, and after an absence of four weeks he found his job in the hands of another. Search around the city did not bring work and the inactivity of the bread-winner during his illness and later reduced funds to the vanishing point. This family reside in North Monaghan just outside the city, and the Township Council passed a grant of $5.00 toward them. "We can't see them starve," said one of the Councillors. The husband expects to go to the woods in the New Year.

It is probable that the Township Council will approach the King's Daughters to assist them in handling such cases.

FRIENDLY VIEW OF CITY'S HYDRO ELECTRIC MUDDLE

The following, from the Evening Review, is a mild and moderate, if not apologetic, hint of the muddle into which the City Council, especially the Power Committee, has converted the people's desire to get the benefit of Hydro-Electric supply of power for lighting and other purposes. The article in the Review is as follows:

The public mind appears to be disturbed over the expropriation scheme. Let us examine it so far as we are able, always bearing in mind that Mr. Beck is in a position to do a great deal if it becomes the policy of the Government to do so.

1. A legislative bill was passed not without difficulty, giving the City power to dam up (whatever that means) and submit a by-law to the people comprising the expropriation of a distribution plant. Mr. Beck agreed to see that power was supplied at reasonable rates we are informed.

2. The by-law passed but the company resisted and maintains that the by-law calls for the expropriation of all their property which would include the Auburn Power development or else leaves their franchise untouched.

3. It is at this point that the undertaking halts. The City does not want to buy out the whole power plant. Two courses are open. One is that the Government can expropriate and sell to the City. The other is that the Government should expropriate on its own account or in some way provide power for the City without the City's being compelled to buy out any public development.

4. If the Government develops a power scheme of its own and takes over developments, it might well begin here. In that event the difficulty would be overcome. But if the government will not do so, then the City may be face to face with ultimately having to take over the Auburn Power development, a thing that may or may not appeal to the ratepayers.

5. One thing however appears reasonably clear and that is that if the City cannot shake itself free from the purchase of the development, it may have to leave the franchise with the Power Company and thus be the subject of competition which might put it in the power of a company having other sources of revenue to put the local scheme out of business altogether.

It is not wise however to take a gloomy view of the matter. The Mayor and Council may well be given credit for discretion and common sense.

6. We do not take much stock in the idea that the City has got to go on with the expropriation nor that notice has been served. That is hardly likely to be the case.

To make the middle clearer, so as to speak, it may be emphasized that the City's Act, passed in the legislature of 1911, and amended in the session of 1912, authorizes the appropriation of all or any part of the Light and Power Company's plant. If the city does not take the whole of the plant, (if it takes only, say, the distribution plant), then, it is stated on good legal authority, the franchise of the Light and Power Company remains in force, and the Light and Power Company can legally replace the part of the plant taken by the city and continue competition with the city's business of supplying power for lighting and other purposes, under the authority of the Hydro-Electric by-law, passed by the people by almost unanimous vote.

A year has elapsed and the people have not got what they voted for, but instead, they have got a tangle, legal and otherwise, which may, according to one member of the City Council, create litigation that, in the end, may reach the Privy Council, with the immense attendant costs.

The remedy is involved in two parts of the alternative presented—to go to the Legislature for unmuddling legislation, or to carry out expropriation and pay the price fixed by the arbitrators — something between $94,000 and $600,000.

The cause of the tangle in which we find ourselves comes primarily from the methods of the City Council—the secretive methods, the avoidance of discussion, and the failure to take the people into their confidence.

The Examiner has frequently contended that the date of the municipal elections prevented opportunity for discussion. We have been kept too much in the dark as to the proceedings of the City Council, and especially the Power Committee. If there had been more publicity, if opportunity for public discussion had been presented, many things would have been brought out that the Power Committee didn't know and, if they did know, didn't act upon.

When the Hydro by-law was before the people, everybody that dared to suggest discussion was denounced as an enemy of the scheme, a foe to public ownership and to the best interests of the people. Yet it was to discussion that the fact was due that the Examiner was able to get from Hon. Adam Beck a promise that otherwise would not have been obtained—that any proposal to spend the City's money under the Hydro-Electric by-law should be submitted to the people. This was done and the people voted for the expenditur of $120,000. The City Council has so muddled matters that we may have to pay $600,000, or something like that, for something we do not need, or get new legislation, or take over the Light and Power Company's pole lines and still leave the Company free to carry on business and deprive the city of the benefits that the advocates of public ownership claim would come from the city doing its own power and lighting business. The spirit of the City Council was to free the city from the grasp of a lighting "monopoly"; the action or inaction of the City Council, or the controlling element of it, has been to perpetuate "monopoly," and create competition for our own municipally-owned system which, owing to the fact that "someone blundered," seems to be farther away every day.

The members of the Council who have been parties to the creation of the existing conditions, and the complications that seem to promise—except those who have taken shelter from the storm by retiring—will have something to explain to the electors who are asked to again misplace their confidence.

Wanted To Reach Santa

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—Mr. Desbarats, of the Canadian Geological Survey, acted as Santa Claus deputy today when he opened a letter addressed to that bewhiskered gentleman in care of Explorer Steffansson, who is now somewhere near the North Pole under the auspices of the Canadian Government. Reading that Steffansson was in the northern regions little Miss Henrietta Deming, of McDougall Alley, New York city, addressed Santa, care of Steffansson, with her little list of Christmas necessities, asking him to hand it to Santa when he saw him at the North Pole. The letter found its way to the Geological Survey Offices here.

"I can't understand how there are any post cards left in the City," said Postmaster Edgar to the Examiner reporter to-day, in describing the Christmas rush in the mails. The postmen all have an auxiliary force, consisting of a small boy and a large box fastened on a sleigh, with which assistance they manage to cover their regular routes.

To-morrow, however, there will be only the morning delivery.

BURYING THE HATCHET.

The Yuletide season is responsible for a wholesale burying of the hatchet — especially for the moment. Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, is reported to be ill in his bed in a New York hotel. At this time we forget that he is a prime minister and a politician around whom normally rage political controversy, political recrimination. We remember him only as a man, who has reached the three score stage of life, as a fellow man with his personal feelings, his family relations and his social affiliations, doomed to spend Christmas far from home, in a strange land. There is no sadder time for death or illness to come than at the Christmas time — every recurring season opens the wounds. We, all of us, will sympathize with Sir James in this Christmas season, and, if we cannot with much hope of fulfilment wish him a merry Christmas this year, we pray and hope for his restoration to health and long life to enjoy many Christmas day under happier auspices. Merry Christmas, Sir James!

Christmas is an unhappily unfortunate time for the squabbles and heart-burnings of municipal politics. We should have our whole hearts set on Christmas and its message, its gladness; and in doing our civic business, we should have our minds undistracted, our undivided attention devoted to it. Under our system, we can do neither whole heartedly, and we fail to get the full benefit of both under the most favourable conditions.

We are told that corporations have no souls; but the Christmas spirit the spirit of good will, the spirit of accommodation, the spirit of helping a fellow out of the pit, has touched even the stony heart of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. The action of the company in offering to continue its lighting system till such times as the City is in a position to do it itself, while involving a possibly lengthened period, is a practical exhibition of the Christmas spirit — of burying the hatches. We might well all imitate it in our personal and social relations. If we have an enemy —bury the hatchet—not in the head —but under the spirit of the Christmas time, which means peace on earth and good will to men. We have enough snow to bury the hatchet under this Christmas. We can the better enjoy Christmas ourselves and help others to enjoy it. It is in our power to realise in ourselves and help other to realisation of Christmas joys, if we attune our hearts to the spirit of the hour. We can all the better have and give to others, what The Examiner wishes to all its readers and to all the world—

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

THE CHRISTMAS POWER.

The wheels of industry will be stilled to-morrow. A thousand mills will be as silent as the star above Bethlehem manger. The workmen will be by their own firesides, rejoicing in a fellowship of domestic love. Industry halts before the manger and listens to carols from ecclstial lips. Labour lays down its tools, takes up the song and forgets the hum and crash of mighty machinery. Wealth bends with a gift for the needy and a word of cheer for the lowly. Nations forget their animosities and

"Battle flags are furled
In the parliament of man,
The federation of the world."

It is not science that brings humanity together to-morrow. It is not the floating arsenals of the sea; it is not the conferences at The Hague, nor the "parliament of man." A "little Child" has led them.—Selected.

Andrew Carnegie, after having made many millions in the manufacture of war material, now wants all wars to cease. He reminds us of several wholesale whiskey dealers who fought the business, tooth and toenail, after they had amassed large fortunes.

PROTECTION DOESN'T HELP WAGE EARNERS

A "Workingman's" Dissection of a "Statesman's" Statements

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—In yesterday's issue of your evening contemporary, our Dominion Member has a letter in which he seemingly proves to his own satisfaction, at least, that the Labour party in Great Britain is deserting the Liberals, because they will not adopt the policy of protection as we have it in Canada and the United States.

He says, in effect that free trade "has taken the land from the people of Britain; has driven the wives and children of workingmen into factories; has made the workingman the victim of the capitalist."

Will these statements bear investigation? Everyone knows that the land in Great Britain passed into the hands of the few long before the policy of free trade was ever thought of. Everyone also knows that protection creates monopolies and combines with the resulting millionaires who possess the wealth of Canada and the United States, and to a dangerous degree the political power as well.

Surely our Member must know that the labour laws of free trade Great Britain are twenty-five years in advance of those of the United States. It is in the highly protected United States and not in Great Britain where the wives and children of workingmen are crowded into factories to such an alarming degree.

Will his third, and most important assertion, that protection raises the wages of workingmen, bear investigation?

Wages in protected United States and Canada are higher than in free trade Great Britain, yet wages in free trade Great Britain are higher than in protected Germany and France. Does this prove anything?

That protection is of practically no benefit to the wage-earners of Canada and the United States has been fully proved by reports of American Commissioners issued during the current year.

These show that the earnings of the head of the family in the United States, is insufficient to keep the family and must be supplemented by the labour of other members. One report says that of 26,116 adult male workers employed in protected branches of industry the average annual earnings was only $475, and this in the highly protected United States, where wages are said to be so high.

These Commissioners fully show that the benefits of protection do not go to the labourers. The proportion of labour cost of protected articles to total cost is absurdly low. In news-print paper for the year 1911 the labour cost was only ten per cent. of the total cost, while the manufacturers' profit was $11.03 per ton. The wages of labour might have been doubled in this industry, the report concludes, and still left the mill owner a profit of $7.75 a ton.

Another report shows that the expense for a ton of coke was ascertained to be $3.69, of which 25 cents represented the wage to the workingman. It shows that a yard of men's worsted suiting was found to cost an American mill owner $1.71 to place it on the market. The weaver of this cloth received at the rate of five cents a yard, whereas the mill-owner was protected to the extent of $1.02 pr yard.

If the tariff confers any benefits, it will be seen that they do not go to the wage-earner. The best wages were paid to the mason, bricklayer, etc., who are not benefitted by the tariff.

The Labour party in Australia broke away from the Liberals and the Conservatives, not because of the lack of a protective policy such as we have in Canada and the United States, but because this policy did not protect them. They are now striving to bring about legislation which will bring the workingmen an actual benefit and not an alleged one.

Protection, as we have it in Canada and the United States benefits the Capitalist alone and he refuses to give even a living wage to the producers of his protection-gotten wealth.

A Workingman.

"How are you making out, Pat?" asked the boss.

"Foine as silk," answered Pat, keeping right on with his work, "as yes will notice yeralf."

"The work looks all right, Pat," jokefully responded the boss; "but do you think you will ever be able to get all the dirt back in the hole again?"

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

At the urgent request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914. Being born and lived my whole life in Peterborough, and a whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the city. Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure.

I will do my utmost to keep down the ever-increasing rate of taxation, consistent with the needs of the growing municipality.

I may say that I am in favour of municipal ownership, and in favour of having all city work done by our own people, instead of bringing in outsiders to do it. I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended. I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being chairman of that board for two years. I was also chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honour to elect me Mayor of our city, I will do my best to serve you to the very best of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

TO THE ELECTORS OF CENTRE WARD

In voting for A. H. STRATTON for Alderman for Centre Ward you are voting for a live go-ahead man who has the interests of Peterboro at heart. He is a large taxpayer and will use his best efforts to keep your taxes down to the low water marks. At the same time he is sure to encourage visiting manufacturers and endeavour to bring in new industries. He is a good business man by the test of success in his own business and knows that to encourage the working men and find employment for them at good wages helps the business man and thereby helps to make a BIGGER AND BETTER CITY. To the Electors of the West Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having been requested by a large number of citizens to stand for re-election as Alderman, I again respectfully tender your my services.

I have now represented you for four years, during which time I have made myself thoroughly conversant with the streets, sidewalks, sewers and other interests in the Ward.

By my services in the past, together with the past four years' experience, I ask you to judge my actions in the future, and confidently solicit your support and influence.

If elected, I again promise to conscientiously look after the interests of the Ward and the City in general, and to give all matters coming before your Council the necessary time and careful consideration, endeavouring to consider all questions in a fair and businesslike manner, consistent with economy and general progressiveness.

With season's best wishes, I am,

Your Obedient Servant,

W. BULLER

The People's Candidate For MAYOR For 1914

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate, but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors, where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years' experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who had a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the City and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready-made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house, and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation, like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his house and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as I have given the past will give me their hearty support, I am,

Yours very truly,

J. B. McWILLIAMS.

J. J. HARTLEY'S

COMMITTEE ROOMS will be opened early in the coming week, in the Rooms over 426 George Street, (next floor to Trade and Labour Hall).

And as with you, I trust with the City, in which we live and whose prosperity is ours to make and hold.

With Compliments of the Christmas Season.

Yours respectfully

F. H. DOBBIN.

W. W. W.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS

Berlin.—The City Council finished its work last Friday afternoon by finally deciding a vexed and much-discussed question for many years, that of extending the garbage system to include the entire City and paying the cost out of the general rate. After a thorough and lively discussion the report of the Garbage Committee recommending the change in the system was adopted by a vote of 9 to 4.

Isolation Hospital.

Brantford.—The need for a new smallpox isolation hospital was impressed on the members of the buildings and grounds committee of the City Council at their last meeting by Dr. F. G. E. Pearson, M.H.O. He dwelt at some length on the condition of the present building, pointing out that it was inadequate and a disgrace to the City.

The committee members discussed the question at some length and decided to refer the matter to next year's committee, it being too late to go on with the work now. Negotiations have been opened for a site for a new building.

A Christmas Present.

Chatham.—The annual Christmas present of the Board of Water Commissioners to the City Council will this year be $4,000, a motion to this effect being carried at a special meeting of the Board held in the Secretary's office at Harrison Hall, last night. It is customary for the Board to give the City at the end of each year an amount which varies from year to year according to the finances of the department. This year has been a profitable one, and when the books had been finally balanced up for the year it was found that there remains a balance of $5,834. It was thought by the commissioners that $4,000 should be given to the City, and that the balance of $1,834 with accounts that will be due from various sources shortly would be sufficient to run the department till the regular February accounts start coming in. Last year the grant was $3,000 and it usually has been about this size, so that last night in making the larger one it was shown that the department has been unusually prosperous and well managed this year.

Increase in Salary.

Brantford.—The Mayor of Brantford for the year 1913 will receive a salary of $1,000 per year. This was the result of a motion by Ald. M. M. McEwen, when in place of being granted $500 for acting as Mayor and $150 for being on the board of water commissioners, the Mayor will receive $850 for the first named duties, thus making his salary a straight $1,000.

STRIKING CALENDAR

The North American Insurance Co.'s calendar for 1914 is a reproduction of the painting of the aboriginal North American Indian, the original being painted especially for the North American Life Assurance Company by Mr. J. E. Sampson, one of the cleverest and most distinguished of the younger school of artists. This magnificent portrayal of the aboriginal North American is splendidly drawn and is a most impressive subject. A veritable copper-coloured Achilles, the lean and sinewy figure displays in its fullest development the very embodiment of athletic vigour. The artist is particularly happy in his selection of a subject so appropriate for the North American Life Assurance Company, of which Mr. R. J. Kidd is the local agent.

OTONABEE, Dec. 24.—Owing to the scarcity of fodder the past fine weather conditions enabled the farmers to feed their stock much less, which means a saving for the long, hard winter months and a late Spring.

Everyone is preparing for jolly old St. Nicholas and a good Christmas spirit predominates everywhere.

Mr. Wm. Hamilton, who is on a prolonged visit to New York and several other American cities, is not expected home for Christmas.

Several of our young people visited Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Kylie on Sunday.
